BY GAIL COMPTON.

The unforgettable pageant of the wealth and lush fertility of America was unfolded yesterday before a record smashing opening day throng of 52,000 at the 42d annual International Live Stock exposition in the International amphitheater at 41st and Halsted streets.

Chicagoans and out of town spectators wandered open-eyed past row after row of fat cattle, sheep, and swine. They gazed curiously at samples of wheat, oats, rye, corn, and hay representing the best the earth produces.

They saw the greatest agricultural show in the world, consisting of more than 13,000 blue blooded farm animals and 5,000 prize samples of crops. Forty-one states and five Canadian provinces were represented.

First Contest of Day.

The first contest of the day was the judging of the junior live stock feeding contest. Experts spent hours in a critical examination of 691 fat calves the youngsters brought into the tanbark arena.

From out of this rigorous competition, Richard Lacy Jr., 15 years old, of Kansas, Edgar county, Illinois, emerged as the winning exhibitor. The judges awarded his 946 pound Hereford steer the blue ribbon as the junior grand champion. It was the first time Richard ever had entered the International competition, altho his father has shown in the carlot steer class for 20 years.

The steer, named "T. O. Again," is a grade, range bred animal. W. L. Carlyle, who placed the steer at the top of the class, termed it one of the best finished animals he ever had seen. He said it was unusual for a range bred animal to win over so many steers that had been bred and raised under the most promising conditions and which had long pedigrees.

Reserve Grand Championship.

The reserve grand championship was awarded to an Aberdeen-Angus steer shown by Robert Miller, 19, of Arcola, Douglas county. Both Lacy and Miller thus qualified for the contest for grand champion steer of the show. A junior competitor has won this title six times in the last 13 years.

Canadian farmers swept the contest for the title of Wheat King. William Miller of Edmonton, Canada, was adjudged first for his sample of hard Red Spring wheat that weighed 66.8 pounds to the bushel. The reserve grand championship went to R. P. Robin of Saskatchewan, who exhibited a sample of Mindum Durham wheat that weighed 64.4 pounds to the bushel.

In the 23 years that the International Grain and Hay show has been held, Canadian farmers have carried off the wheat title 19 times. The last time an American farmer won was in 1928.

Best in United States.

The best sample of wheat grown in the United States was adjudged to belong to L. E. Peterson of Victor, Mont. The reserve grand championship went to George Hoffman of Iliff, Colo. Peterson was awarded the Philip W. Pillsbury prize, a new award originated this year to give special recognition to American wheat growers.

W-G-N Show to Honor Fire, Police Heroes

PICTURES OF HEROES.

Pictures of 204 of the police and fire heroes who will be honored tonight at a special broadcast by W-G-N are printed on page 4.

Honor to whom honor is due! This is the theme of a unique program to be broadcast by W-G-N tonight from a studio filled with heroes, and real heroes — the Chicago policemen and firemen who have won TRIBUNE monthly awards for heroism over a period of 20 years.

More than 200 of these courageous men, whose devotion to duty and bravery led them into deeds which would have won medals of honor if performed in war, have been invited to attend. Nearly all have accepted.

They will hear the heart warming stories of their acts; how they met their tests and triumphed over criminals, always at the risk of their lives, and always to protect and save the law abiding.

Figures Tell Story.

Cold figures tell some of the history of these men. Eighty per cent of the award winners were engaged in standup gun fights with desperate outlaws. Others walked in the full knowledge of their danger into burning buildings to rescue persons helpless without their aid.

Their bravery often transcended the call of duty. Many were off duty when they had their chance to be heroes and filled the stern specifications. Not all of these escaped unscathed. At least six of them still are disabled by wounds suffered in combat with criminals.

The occasion will give some of the older winners an opportunity to see again the comrades of their fine mold. The last big meeting they had was more than 10 years ago, on the 10th anniversary of the establishment of THE TRIBUNE monthly award. This newspaper has, in the two decades, made hero payments of more than $25,000; from $100 to $800 a month.

Officials to Greet Heroes.

Among those who will assist THE TRIBUNE and W-G-N in paying honor to the heroes will be Chicago's officials and the police and fire executives of the suburban towns. The guests will be greeted by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE.

The first feature of the program will be a showing of the moving picture, "Trees to Tribunes." This will be followed, at 9:15 p. m. by a 45 minute radio program. It will start with a special arrangement of the "Police March," written by Henry Weber and Kenneth Churchill and played by the W-G-N symphony orchestra.

Special numbers will be presented by the Holy Name cathedral chorus of 50 voices, directed by the Rev. Emmett Regan.

Authors of the dramatic script of the show built their drama around the principles of loyalty, bravery and comradeship and added a dash of mystery. William A. Bacher, production director of W-G-N, conceived the idea and is co-author with William Hodapp of the script.

KNOW YOUR Chicago
WILL

BY GEORGE MORGENSTERN.

This week's visit is to the Art institute. It faces Michigan avenue at Adams street—a counterpoise to Chicago's impressive material accomplishments. When it housed the World's Congress of Religions during the Columbian exposition, it was a place of the spirit. And it has changed character little since it became the Art institute.

The canvases, paints, statuary, pottery, glassware, and metalwork that line its halls and walls are material things, but in them is written a not inconsiderable chapter in the autobiography of civilization.

Painting a Part of History.

Rousseau, a "primitive," deliberately avoided the photographic faithfulness of the classicists. The exotic jungle he painted, with a tiger clamping its jaws upon the head of a water buffalo, is naive. But it has charm and appeal.

Art Frees His Imagination.

You must know that Rousseau, who did not start painting until he was 41 years old, had been to Mexico in his youth. After that romantic preparation, the life of a customs clerk back in Paris must have seemed humdrum. So when Rousseau turned to painting, he called upon his early memories for imaginative release. We need know little about art to know that he represents the modernist revolt against the classical tradition. The canvas itself will tell us that much.

The lush, stridently colored jungle, the strange and savage beasts are there, but transmuted by a complete disregard for literary or scientific plausibility. Both setting and creatures have been invested with a fairy tale charm.

The buffalo has the weathered and patient expression of an old French peasant who knows the value of a sou and knows, too, that all is not cakes and ale. With his whiskery chops, the tiger looks not unlike Georges Clemenceau in one of his more rapacious moments.

There Are Other Adventures.

Rousseau's "The Jungle" is only one adventure that awaits the visitor to the institute. There are 1,300 other paintings, 400 water colors, many times that number of prints, more than 300 pieces of statuary, and almost anything else—from 18th century London doorways to coins of the Caesars and pottery of the T'ang dynasty.

They are not neglected. Indeed, the Art institute is the best attended art museum in the world, with an average of more than a million visitors a year. Daniel Catton Rich, the young director of fine arts, and his staff are progressive. One innovation is a gallery devoted to the "masterpiece of the month." Another is an interpretative gallery that makes painters and painting more easily understood.

Its doors are open free on Wednesday, Saturdays, and Sundays and on all holidays. On other days the admission is 25 cents, plus 3 cents excise tax exacted by the federal government. On week days the institute is open from 9 a. m. until 5 p. m. On Sundays, Christmas, and New Year's day it is open from noon until 5 p. m.

For 62 years the museum has given witness to the city's spirit. As the Chicago Academy of Design it was burned out in the fire of 1871, and all its possessions were sold at a sheriff's sale in the depression of 1877-'79. That it came back and was able to continue is a tribute to the foresight and wisdom of Chicagoans of taste and wealth. That its collections are great is their triumph.

Among the names of these patrons are Hutchinson and Ryerson, and Palmer, Buckingham, Allerton, Brewster, Shaw, Schulze, Worcester, Deering, Burnham, McKinlock, Goodman, Field, Logan, Blackstone, Fullerton, Tyson, Eckhart, McCormick, Crane, Eddy, and Bartlett—and dozens more.

All were great—and judicious—collectors. To mention only one, it is told how the late Martin A. Ryerson kept a little black book in which he noted paintings the world over which he admired and wanted for his city. If they appeared on the market, he put in his bid. If the price was more than he thought justified, he might wait until a better opportunity pre-

STALIN HAILS ROUT OF FOE FROM OIL PORT

MOSCOW, Nov. 29 (AP).—Rostov, anchor in the defense of the Caucasus, has been delivered from the German invader, the southern German army of Field Marshal Gen. Ewald von Kleist has been smashed and five of his tank, motorized, and SS divisions are fleeing in rout, the Russians declared tonight.

Seven hundred miles to the north, on the northwestern sector of the Moscow front, the Germans also were declared to have been thrown for a heavy loss. The broadcast said winter hardened soviet troops had sprung across the ice bridged Volga river southeast of Kalinin and recaptured at least four towns in a drive into the flank of the German salient thrust menacingly toward the Red capital.

Stalin Hails Victory.

A special announcement on Rostov said Josef Stalin had sent congratulations to soviet troops for the "deliverance of Rostov from the Fascist invaders," and raising "our glorious soviet flag in Rostov."

The Russians smashed into the vital Black sea port from two directions, one force under command of Gen. Lemidov storming across the Don river and occupying the southern part of the city, while the other under Gen. Karitnov drove thru from the northeast.

"Von Kleist's army has been smashed," declaimed the announcer. "His 6th, 14th, and 16th tank divisions, 60th motor division, and SS 'Viking' divisions are fleeing in disorder in the direction of Taganrog. The Red army is following close on their heels. The Germans have lost 5,000 killed."

He added that many war trophies had been counted in the attack carried out Friday.

Taganrog lies 40 miles west of Rostov on the shore of the Black sea. Rostov is on the north bank of the Don, which in the neighborhood of the attack runs almost in an east-west direction, emptying into the sea a few miles below.

Fight in Streets.

The special announcement later was repeated in a soviet information bureau communique which said the reoccupation of the port was accompanied by street fighting.

[The Germans said they were evacuating the central part of Rostov "in order to make the most thoro preparations for necessary measures against the population" which was accused of participating in guerrilla warfare. The Russians never had officially admitted surrendering Rostov until the official communique telling of its recapture.]

A Tass dispatch broadcast on the radio said Black sea battleships were inflicting heavy losses on the Germans in the Crimea by heavy bombardments of their communications and equipment.

The newspaper Pravda reported that German forces flung into the Moscow offensive had been increased to 49 divisions—approximately 735,000 men.

FRIEND AND FOE BOTH HAVE EYES ON FRENCH FLEET

BY DAVID DARRAH.

German military forces occupying France had been reduced to six divisions toward the end of October, according to most estimates in Vichy. In midsummer the Germans had from 25 to 30 divisions in France, but withdrawals were made repeatedly as the Russian campaign advanced.

The fact that the occupying forces had been reduced to such a large extent doubtless figured in the agitation in some circles in England for an attempt to make a landing in France.

The reduction, however, does not mean that the German hold on France is in any way relaxed. Even if a revolt were attempted it probably would not be successful, according to French officials, because Stuka dive bombers and motorized forces could be rushed to the scene of trouble.

The German forces now occupying France are just about equal to the French army permitted by armistice terms. The French were allowed 100,000 men and their army consists of seven divisions. They are armed with nothing bigger than three inch guns.

Lessens Cost to French.

An important effect of the reduction in occupation forces so far as the French are concerned is that it has lessened the costs of occupation. Just after the armistice the Germans had more than 150 divisions in France and the occupation costs were 400 million French francs per day. As the number of divisions was gradually reduced the French sought reductions in this amount and have succeeded in getting two cuts. Despite this they still pay much more than the occupation actually costs and the excess piles up as a German credit on the books of the Bank of France.

The German forces are concentrated around Paris and along the coastline which runs from the channel to the Bay of Biscay. The coastal region is constantly bombarded by British flyers and to all practical purposes it is in the same state of war that it was in when France was an ally of England. Towns like Havre and Rouen and Lille are repeatedly bombed by the British and frequently suffer much damage and many casualties. Havre, particularly, has been hard hit.

Maginot Line on Coast Now.

The Germans have constructed heavy fortifications all along the coast line. According to some stories most of the old Maginot line forts have been dismantled and remounted along the Atlantic coast. There are frequent exchanges of artillery salvoes across the straits of Dover between Calais and Dover.

One region in the north of France is completely militarized. French residents have been allowed to remain there but no refugees may return to it and no one may visit it for business or other reasons.

The line of demarcation which separates occupied France from unoccupied France still is rigidly maintained in principle. Officially great obstacles are encountered by any one who wants to go from one side of the line to the other. Only in cases of deaths, marriages, and urgent business can permits be obtained.

Clandestine Traffic Brisk.

Actually, however, many people cross the line clandestinely every day. The line is long and not every section of it can be patroled. Farmers and villagers coöperate with those who want to sneak across. When they see a patrol vanish down the road they pass the word to three or four persons waiting in the cafe at

FLIES DENVER TO N. Y. IN 4¾ HOURS; SPEED 6⅓ MILES A MINUTE

Denver, Col., Nov. 29 (AP).—Capt. James Philpott, Lowry field pilot, rocketed from Denver to New York, a distance of about 1,800 miles, in 4 hours and 43 minutes, a pace of 6⅓ miles a minute, in a speed test flight "a couple of weeks ago," the pilot disclosed today.

Capt. Philpott, making his first public report on the test of a P-34, a pursuit-interceptor plane manufactured for the army by the Republic Aircraft company, said his average speed was better than 375 miles an hour. [Computed on a basis of 1,800 miles the speed would be 381.6 miles an hour.]

He told a Denver pilots' club meeting the P-34 attained "better than 600 miles an hour" in a test power dive of about 15,000 feet.

'OUR BOYS MAY BE FIGHTING' IN '42, HE ASSERTS

Considers Speeding Back to Capital.

BY WALTER TROHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Warm Springs, Ga., Nov. 29.—President Roosevelt tonight declared that by next Thanksgiving American soldiers and sailors may be fighting for the defense of American institutions. He mentioned this ominous possibility in informal remarks at the twice postponed Founders' day dinner of this infantile paralysis resort he established in 1927.

Shortly after delivering his speech the President conferred with Secretary of State Cordell Hull by telephone and was advised of the militant statement of Gen. Hideki Tojo, premier of Japan. Later Stephen T. Early, White House secretary, announced the President was considering a return to Washington, leaving Warm Springs tomorrow afternoon so as to arrive in Washington Monday before noon.

[The statement of Premier Tojo was that Japan must take steps to wipe out British and American "exploitation in the far east." Story on page 8.]

Gives Thanks for Peace.

Expressing thanks that the nation was still at peace, Mr. Roosevelt told 116 patients and 200 relatives, staff members and distinguished guests:

"I think we can all offer up a little, silent prayer that these people, the people in countries being overrun and being attacked and the people doing the attacking, will be able to hold a Thanksgiving more like an American Thanksgiving. That is something to dream about, perhaps.

"In days like these, our Thanksgiving next year may remind us of a peaceful past; it is always possible that our boys in the military and naval academies may be fighting for the defense of these American institutions of ours.

Refers to "Certain Dangers."

"For the last week and a half certain dangers have been hanging over this country of ours. This occasion has at least given me faith and hope for the United States."

Mr. Roosevelt said the occasion demonstrated what a wonderful system of life the United States enjoys because nowhere else in the world could such a dinner be held, a dinner, he said, which was not ordered by a dictator, but was a free and independent coöperation in a humanitarian cause.

He told his audience that in the afternoon he had heard two great football games, the battle between Georgia and Georgia Tech and the game between Annapolis and West Point, the army and the navy.

Games in "Spirit of Peace."

"Two great games run in a spirit of the people, a right kind of national spirit of peace," he said. "In how many other countries could that kind of thing be run?

"Yes we have great cause to be thankful—thankful we have been able to hold our gains, carry on our health and our other coöperative activities. We can be thankful that these years of peace have been given us."

He then suggested the prayer that the world may be able to celebrate the American kind of Thanksgiving and said that by next Thanksgiving the soldiers and sailors, who struggled on the gridiron today, may be at war.

May Look Back to Peace.

Mr. Roosevelt started his informal remarks without any suggestion that he would turn to an ominous note. He recalled that his visit twice had to be postponed, passing over both the Thanksgiving day he proclaimed and that set by the governor of Georgia. This Founders' day dinner, he acknowledged, constituted a third Thanksgiving day. Next year, he said, he did not know how many Thanksgiving days should be held.

At the head table sat Leighton McCarthy, Canadian minister, a trustee of the foundation and old friend of the President. At wings of the head table sat patients, chosen by lot to dine on turkey carved by the chief executive. In the dining hall of the foundation at other tables were other patients, relatives, and staff members. A short entertainment for and by patients preceded the President's address.

The first blue ribbon of the show went to Helen Althoff, 19 year old 4-H club girl from Pipestone, Minn. She exhibited the first prize Shorthorn steer in the lightweight class and then won the reserve championship for Shorthorns of all weights.

A blue ribbon came as a nice birthday present to Luella Padgett, 21 years old, of Kellerville, Adams county. Her Aberdeen-Angus steer, "J. C.," waddled out of the ring with the first prize in that lightweight class. Luella was happily celebrating her birthday but sadly marking the last year of her competition at the International as a 4-H club girl.

He's a Proud Boy.

Her eyes glistened as she placed an affectionate arm about her steer. "This is a pretty nice way to end up after coming here for eight years," she said.

One of the proudest boys in the show was Kenneth Gallaway of Garber, Okla. His Chester White hog was acclaimed grand champion barrow of the junior feeding contest.

This is his first trip to the International, altho he has participated in Future Farmers of America work for five years. His hog, White Boy, weighed 220 pounds. It was so outstanding the judges had little difficulty selecting it from among the 83 hogs that competed.

Exhibits Grand Champion Lambs.

The grand champion pen of three lambs was exhibited by Kenneth Disch, 16 years old, a 4-H boy from Evansville, Wis. Disch, a senior in high school, has a remarkable winning record at the exposition. In 1939 he showed for the first time, winning third prize with his lambs. Last year he won the junior grand championship with a pen of grade Southdowns.

His 13 year old sister, Dorothy, has been showing with him each year, exhibiting her own sheep. She won ninth place last year, and yesterday ran a close race with her brother, taking second place.

The winners of the junior live stock judging contest were announced at a special luncheon at the Stockyards inn. The team of three boys from New York scored 1,588 points out of a possible 2,000 to take first place. Kansas was second with 1,565 points, Oklahoma third with 1,559 points, and Illinois fourth with 1,542 points.

Takes Individual Honors.

Individual honors for the highest score went to David Eddington, 18, of Veteran, Wyo., who scored 540 points. J. Law Hague of Oklahoma and Stewart Cuthbert of New York tied for second place.

Canada scored first in the open classes when W. J. Brodie of Stouffville, Ont., won the grand championship in the car lot class of sheep. His 50 head of Southdowns won a unanimous rating from the judges.

The first horse show program of the exposition was held in the evening. More than 600 blooded animals helped to provide a night of thrills. [Details on Page 4 of Sports Section.]

Exposition Notes

One of the youngest exhibitors at the International Live Stock exposition is 10 year old Dwight Tabke from Moville, Ia. Dwight came to the exposition to show his big Hereford steer, the first 4-H club work he has done. His uncle John helps Dwight handle the animal.

"It isn't so hard to take care of a steer," Dwight explained, "because after you get started it gets to be a habit."

Those two men peering wistfully at a pen of cattle were Privates Norman Rochlitz of Nebraska and Walter Anderson of North Dakota. Both men are stationed at Camp Grant, but because they were farm boys they got leave to spend the day at the exposition.

"I had to come," Anderson said, "because, back in 1938, I was down here as a member of my state judging team. The show gets in your blood."

The navy also was on hand in the persons of Overton Howard, yeoman, third class, and Clarence Stack, fireman, first class, both stationed at Navy pier. "We are both farm boys," Howard said, "so that accounts for our spending a precious afternoon leave here at the show."

J. B. McCorkle, beef cattle herdsman for the Ohio State Agricultural college, said the exposition is far better than any of the 20 others he had seen. McCorkle is in charge of the college's display of 12 Angus and 4 Hereford steers.

Frederick Freylinghuysen, lawyer, from Newark, N. J., looked over the Shorthorn steers with a critical eye. He came all the way to Chicago to see the best with the idea of buying some cattle for his farm. His wife accompanied him.

A portrait of O. M. Plummer, Portland, Ore., manager of the Pacific International Live Stock exposition, was unveiled at the Saddle and Sirloin club. The picture will hang with 300 other portraits of men who have helped to promote the American live stock industry. Plummer was present at the unveiling, as was his daughter, who came from Alaska for the occasion.

Extra street car service is being provided. The Halsted street "downtown" line, which ordinarily suspends after 7 p. m., will be continued every night until after the show. Persons en route to the exposition from the loop may board either a Racine-87th street car in State street or a Halsted or Halsted-79th street car in Clark street.

ASK GIFTS TODAY FOR RELIGIOUS POSTERS IN ARMY

The Best Seller Publicity committee, which devotes its efforts to stirring interest in Bible reading, will make an appeal for funds in 50 Chicago churches today. The proceeds are to be used in printing and distributing posters of a religious nature in military camps and on naval vessels. The four denominations whose members will be asked to contribute today are the Baptist, Presbyterian, Methodist, and Evangelical. Other denominations will receive requests later. The committee headquarters is in the Civic Opera building.

Michigan's Apple Queen Takes Scepter at Show

Chicago's spring-like weather afforded a proper setting yesterday for the arrival of Michigan's Peach and Apple Blossom Queen, Miss Jean Muske, 21 years old, of South Haven, Mich. Miss Muske, with her court of four attendants, is in town to reign at the Michigan apple show at the International Live Stock exposition this week-end.

A TYPICAL FARM GIRL? HERE ARE COUPLE OF THEM

One Helps Father, Other Goes to College.

BY RITA FITZPATRICK.

Who is the typical American farm girl?

This question teetered between two comely misses at the International Live Stock exposition yesterday. Both have answered it with championships.

One was Helen Althoff of Pipestone, Minn., a lithe, simply dressed girl of 19, who captured the first blue ribbon of the show with her 708 pound Shorthorn steer, Gene, in the junior feeding contest. The other was Irene Brown of Aledo, Mercer county. She is a pert, well tailored co-ed who was the first girl to win the steer feeding grand championship of the world in 1938.

Story of American Farm Life.

The story of these two girls is the story of American farm life.

"It feels pretty good to win the championship," Helen said briefly as the judges pinned the blue ribbon to her prize steer. Her young face expressed a calm maturity and her clear, hazel eyes were direct and sober. "I guess I'll get a good price for him now."

The statement told her story.

Six years ago, when Helen was 13, her mother died, leaving the care of her father and an eight room house in her inexperienced hands. In addition, the 160 acre farm needed another "hand." Helen became housekeeper, companion, and helper to her father. It was a job that left no time for fun.

Then She Cleans House.

"I don't work so hard," she explained. "I get my fun raising prize cattle. In the summer I get up early but in the winter as late as 6 o'clock. I milk the cows before I cook wheat cakes and sausage for Dad, and then I clean the house. If he needs me I go out into the field, cutting grain or putting up hay. We have our big dinner at noon and that leaves me to help Dad again in the afternoon. In the evening I do the laundry, ironing, and baking."

"Don't you go out dancing or dating?" she was asked. Helen waved her hand quickly before her as tho pushing away such frivolity. "I don't have time for such things. Besides, I don't like dancing. I've never done any." She turned away, patted the head of her steer, and left the ring.

Student at Monmouth.

Watching the proceedings was Irene, with a gay, pork pie hat on the back of her head and a camel's hair sport coat slouching fashionably on her shoulders.

Irene is a freshman at Monmouth college, in Monmouth. She is a popular home economics student and is president of Alpha Xi Delta pledge club.

"I and my brother have four steers entered in the open class competitions," she said. "I couldn't enter the junior feeding contest this year because I live at school and that disbars me, altho I'm only 17. I help Ross, my brother, to feed the steers when I'm home, however, and I hope to repeat my 1938 performance."

"What is your ambition?" she was asked.

"I suppose I'll have to teach home economics for a while, but I really want to be an efficient farm wife."

Just then Helen returned from putting her steer in the stall. She heard the last remark.

"Me, too," she said and smiled for the first time during the day.

CUPID BREAKS COUNTY RECORD FOR NOVEMBER

Issuance of marriage licenses in Cook county this month have set an all-time November high, County Clerk Michael J. Flynn announced yesterday. The total is 4,074, compared with 3,849 for all of November, 1923, the next highest figure. During the first 11 months of this year 44,201 licenses had been issued, topping the total 1940 figure of 44,126.

The increase has been caused by an increase in work, higher wages, the draft, and a sharp increase in parental consent marriages of persons under the legal age, Flynn said. The last rose from 2 per cent of the total in 1940 to 15 per cent for the first 11 months of this year, he said.

PROSPERITY, DEBT AND A COMEBACK! A FARMERS' SAGA

Iowa Brothers Exhibit Results at Show.

Down on the first floor of the big International amphitheater, sandwiched between hundreds of prime cattle, are nine head of fine looking Shorthorns. Seated beside them is a mild faced, slightly built farmer, who has a wonderful smile on his face.

He is Miles Husted from Truro, Ia. The animals belong to him and his brother, Eugene. Their cattle have a significance for them that is apart from their natural pride of showing them at the greatest farm show in the world. They are a symbol of a fight that carried the brothers from the bottom of depression to complete success.

They Go in Debt.

The Husteds bought their farm in 1922. Times were good then and every one was making money. The brothers went into debt on the farm to the extent of $30,000, confident that they soon would be able to clear themselves.

Then the markets broke and the depression came. Miles and Eugene had spent the last of their money in building up a herd of Shorthorn breeding cattle. Forty head of the blue blooded cattle wandered over their farm. Hogs and calves filled the barn yards.

Notes came due. The cost of living soared. The hogs and calves sold for ridiculously low prices. Finally, the brothers had to sell their prized cattle. Twenty-five head went at only a little above slaughter cattle prices.

Reward Comes, Finally.

Finally, the farm was bare save for a few remaining Shorthorns. The brothers worked from sunup to dark in an effort to save their home. Eventually they were rewarded, and little by little they pulled themselves and their families out of the hole.

Today the Husteds are the most successful farmers in their county. By April 1 the stock they will be able to sell will clear up the last of their debts.

"It was pretty tough going for a while," Miles said, "but we managed to do it and still raise eight girls between us. I have five girls, and Eugene has three. Three of our girls are in college now, and the others are helping out at home."

He smiled as he chewed reflectively at a straw. "We've done darn well this year," he said. "In June we sold one of our bulls for $7,000, and we have been selling his calves for prices ranging from $300 to $1,700. Now we will have a little money to spend on our families and try to give them a few things they missed while we were struggling to live."

The winners of the Tribune's monthly hero awards, which have totaled $25,000 in the last 20 years, are a group of men who proved their courage under fire, for nearly all of them either engaged in gun fights with desperate criminals or risked their lives in burning buildings to rescue helpless persons. At least six were disabled by their wounds. Asterisk (*) on name under picture indicates hero has won two awards.

FRIEND AND FOE BOTH KEEP EYES ON FRENCH FLEET

the cross roads. After that it is easy for the travelers to scoot across a field, climb a fence and be on the side of the line they wish to be on. Thus a good sized stream of people flows across this barrier each day.

In addition to its smaller internal army, France is allowed a large force in its colonies. Gen. Maxime Weygand, recently retired, was supposed to have built up a colonial army of about 200,000 men during his year as general delegate in North Africa. The armistice, in fact, obliges the French to protect their colonies.

The colonial army, of course, lacks the modern equipment and armament which would be required to make it an offensive force. It is composed of Senegalese, Tunisian, Algerian and Moroccan natives, and the Foreign Legion. Recruiting for the colonial army goes on regularly in France. Newspapers carry ads daily appealing to young men to enlist for North African and colonial service. The main weakness of the colonial army now is that there is no heavy industry in North Africa to support it.

Permit Air Force to Rearm.

Since the British attacks on the French in Syria and the naval assaults on the bases at Mers El Kebir, Algeria, and Dakar, French West Africa, last year, the Germans have allowed the French to reëquip an air force which had been drastically dismantled by the armistice convention. The extent and size of the French air force is not known, but it gave a good account of itself in the Syrian fighting. Half a dozen military air bases have been reestablished in France. Any traveler on the road from Vichy to Clermont Ferrand can see the scores of bombers lined up in the air field just outside the latter city. The French also have established an excellent commercial air service in the unoccupied region and between Marseilles and North Africa.

All this, naturally, is strictly watched by German control commissions in every military center and large town in the unoccupied region. They check and control the size and armaments of the newly recruited standing army and guard against camouflaged organizations of a semimilitary nature.

The French navy is the arm of the military service which is most nearly intact. It is also the force on which are centered the eyes of all potential foes and friends of the French. Most of the French navy is at Toulon or in North African ports. Its forces and efficiency are in large measure due to Vice Premier Admiral Jean Darlan. It would give a formidable balance of power—together with its bases and arsenals—to any side it might join. The French sailors frequently boast that they are in a branch of the service which was never defeated.

Three Battleships Formidable.

The three most formidable warships of the navy are the Strasbourg, a 26,000 ton battleship; the Dunkirk, same tonnage, damaged in the Mers El Kebir fight but now reported back in service; and the Richelieu, a brand new 35,000 ton battleship which played a big part in last autumn's attack at Dakar.

The French propose to preserve this fleet at any cost. It constitutes one of their main bargaining points. A year ago when German Ambassador Otto Abetz went to Vichy to demand the release of Pierre Laval after the latter's replacement as vice premier, he is supposed to have said to Marshal Petain: "The [Laval] matter must be adjusted or within 24 hours German troops will be occupying Marseilles and this part of France."

The marshal is said to have replied: "The German troops can occupy Marseilles within 24 hours, but within one hour the French navy can leave Toulon for North Africa."

Aside from the three first class capital ships, the French have a dozen or more cruisers of older type which have been reconditioned during the last year in Toulon and other bases. They also have a good quota of destroyers and other ships which were not caught and requisitioned by the English.

Morale of Sea Fighters High.

The morale of the French navy is high, as this correspondent had occasion to observe months ago during a trip to Toulon. I visited the Strasbourg and had lunch with the officers who served in the battle of Mers El Kebir. They expressed deep resentment at the British attack. One said the battle would have had a different ending except for a lucky salvo from the English squadron which put the Dunkirk out of commission at the beginning of the fight. The Strasbourg itself escaped to Toulon.

The French naval personnel also expressed considerable resentment against the Italians for what they considered Mussolini's last minute stab in the back when he entered the war against France. These things are likely to figure in the events now shaping.

JOLIET POLICE SEEK TO ACCOUNT FOR 7 IN WAKE OF HOTEL FIRE

Seven residents of the Monroe hotel in Joliet, which was swept by fire Friday night, still were unaccounted for yesterday. They were listed by police as Addison Millar, C. J. and J. E. Hoffreiter, J. Downs, Burton Johnson, Harold Pederson, and an unidentified man.

The ruins of the hotel still were too hot yesterday for firemen to make a thoro search. Meanwhile police were canvassing the Joliet downtown area for the missing guests in hopes that they had escaped and found refuge elsewhere.

Only the walls of the hotel were left standing. Loss was estimated at $250,000. A Chicagoan, William Foy, 60 years old, 3546 Cortland street, was burned to death. Two other persons were hurt. Foy had worked as an electrician at the Elwood munitions plant.

2 MILLION JAM LOOP IN RECORD SHOPPING SPREE

An estimated 2 million persons jammed the loop yesterday for what officials of the State Street Council and Capt. David Flynn of the police traffic bureau called the greatest pre-Christmas shopping spree in the history of Chicago.

Four of the larger department stores reported they found it necessary to rope off their toy sections, allowing patrons to enter in shifts, to control the crowds. The State Street Council reported "unprecedented buying" in most loop stores.

Capt. Flynn said there were as many automobiles trying to enter the loop all afternoon as there were already in the loop. Ideal weather conditions and the most prosperous times in many Christmas seasons brought out the crowds, the captain said.

AUTO THIEF HAS CHANGE OF HEART —THEN GAS FAILS

Donald Slater, 15 years old, a high school pupil of Kenosha, Wis., was arrested by Lake county deputy sheriffs yesterday when the car he had stolen a few hours earlier ran out of gasoline on highway 41, north of Waukegan.

Slater confessed that he was hitchhiking back to Kenosha after a visit to Chicago when he got the idea of making his trip easier by stealing a car. At the Aero Motors company in Wilmette, he slipped into an unlocked automobile parked in a sales lot and drove away unnoticed.

He said he drove to Kenosha and then, conscience stricken, started back to Wilmette to return the car. But on the way, he ran out of gas.

MONTERREY JUDGE TELLS BRIBE CHARGE IN TORRANCE INQUIRY

MONTERREY, Mexico, Nov. 29 (AP).—Trial Judge Jesus B. Santos today reported that police had arrested a witness who testified he had been bribed by Arthur Torrance to conceal the fact that he had found the author-explorer alone, smoking a cigar, at the spot where Torrance's elderly bride actually met death, about seven miles from the point given by Torrance as the scene of an automobile accident fatal to his wife.

"She was killed here," the judge said Andres Ruiz told him after taking Santos to a clump of bushes near the spot where he claims he saw the globe-trotting writer on the night of Mrs. Torrance's death.

The jaunty, 54 year old Torrance, is charged with murdering the former Mrs. Ada Loveland of Kalamazoo, Mich., with whom he was on a Mexican honeymoon and who, he insists died in an automobile crash. Cash and a $2,000 ermine coat belonging to the dead woman were named by Ruiz as the price of his silence, Judge Santos asserted.

CITY WILL MARK BILL OF RIGHTS DAY ON DEC. 15

Chicago will celebrate Bill of Rights day Monday, Dec. 15. The theme of the day, as announced yesterday by Mayor Kelly, will be, "A government based on the principles of the American bill of rights is a government worth defending at all costs."

The mayor in a special message asked all citizens to observe the day. They should help make it a "great public event," he said. The celebration will be sponsored by the Chicago Defense commission.

Altho the Constitution was written in 1787, it did not contain the bill of rights until two years later. The bill of rights specifically guarantees the basic freedoms.

NOVEMBER SETS 2 HEAT RECORDS; COOLER TODAY

Two heat records were set the first 28 days of November, the weather bureau said yesterday. On Nov. 17, a 70 degree temperature topped a 69 degree record set in 1917. On Nov. 18 a 69 degree reading exceeded by four degrees the previous record set in 1896. The weather was not outstanding other respects except that it was somewhat warmer, dryer, and sunnier than usual. Warm weather continued yesterday with temperatures in the 60s in the afternoon. Today, however, it will be cooler with showers probable, according to Forecaster Ralph E. Gumpf.

A TANK BATTLE DASHES RIGHT UP TO TRIBUNE MAN

British Give Stray Axis Unit Hot Welcome.

BY SAM BREWER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH BRITISH FORCES AT SIDI OMAR, Libya, Nov. 27 [Delayed].—I watched a spectacular, tho brief, tank fight on my own doorstep this afternoon. I was standing by the brigadier's office talking to a staff captain when he suddenly put on his radio telephone headpieces and said, "Here comes a running account of a tank battle."

A British force of Sikhs had engaged 10 axis tanks and an accompanying covey of armored cars three and a half miles away and was shooting them up. The telephone account relayed to me by the captain was like the broadcast of a prize fight.

"They're coming straight at us," the embattled commentator intoned. "Now two have swung westward. Others still coming on! Now they are turning away. The enemy seems somewhat disorganized; he is buzzing away over the hill at a good speed."

Nine Get Hot Reception Here.

A few minutes later nine tanks, apparently from the same force, appeared before this camp. They fired a couple of shots at a distance, but the British gunners did not answer them. Apparently uncertain as to their position, the axis tanks came right up to the barbed wire barricade around the camp.

When they halted at the wire the British medium artillery dropped a salvo in their midst. The tanks made a hasty departure over the skyline, closely followed by shell bursts. One tank apparently was hit, but it got under way again after being brought to a halt and escaped.

Tobruk News Adds to Joy.

News that the long-besieged Tobruk force had finally made contact with advanced troops from New Zealand was received a few minutes later. It made the staff's joy complete. They feel that they are seeing thru what was for a time a most muddy and obscure situation.

I am at Sidi Omar, near the Egyptian line. This corner of Libya has been mystifying because both axis and British forces seemed to be all around us at all times.

A roaming force of German tanks has persisted in popping up in odd places. Twice it turned up at the very gates of camp, where it was well "dusted off" by numerous pieces of artillery of various calibres.

Indian Troops Fight Gamely.

This area was seized by an Indian division last Saturday in the face of terrific fire from well entrenched positions with numerous guns. The Indians crossed a flat, open stretch of desert in trucks, rode up to an opening in the barbed wire, and were told to go ahead. They did. They met heavy fire, and their supporting tanks got snarled in a mine field and couldn't help them until later in the day, but they got thru—and they've had no trouble holding their position.

Odd things happen in the kind of warfare that is going on here. Yesterday, a German armored car rolled up the road and into camp. Just as it scooted past the guards the young officer in charge shouted, "English!" and the car whirled around and tried to escape. But it was under British guns and had to surrender.

Just because this camp was on the Libyan side of the frontier the officer had thought it must be German.

Trench Stagnation? No, Sir!

There is nothing of the stagnation of trench warfare about Libyan fighting. It is a reversion to the days of cavalry warfare. Quick decisions and skilful maneuvers are deciding factors as long as the forces are reasonably matched.

This makes it difficult for a correspondent who is with the troops. He can't get back to the rear himself to file his dispatches and must find some liaison officer to do it for him. Units move about so rapidly that few know at any given moment where they can be found.

ITALY APPROVES U. S. PROPERTY REGISTERING ACT

ROME, Nov. 29 (AP).—The cabinet, meeting with Premier Mussolini, approved today a measure requiring United States citizens to declare all their property in Italy which is valued at more than 20,000 lire—about $1,000—excepting personal and household goods.

The decree was intended to adjust regulations in Italy in accord with credit freezing measures applied to Italian property in the United States. The property of American diplomats was exempted from the new regulation.

The next meeting of the cabinet is scheduled for Dec. 27 to discuss the budget for the next fiscal year.

BRITONS AND AXIS DEADLOCKED IN 2D BIG TANK BATTLE

Germans and Italians Are Reported in Trap.

CAIRO, Nov. 29 (AP).—German and Italian forces trapped east of Tobruk have reassembled "their remaining tanks" and, in a mighty effort to escape from their encirclement, have smashed headon into a British wall and become deadlocked in a new major tank battle, the British announced today.

The battle began yesterday morning southeast of Rezegh and continued fiercely thruout the day and into the evening "without either side having given or gained ground," the British middle east command stated in its communique.

The problem of the German commander, Gen. Erwin Rommel, is to get his once powerful mechanized and motorized striking units westward out of immediate danger as efficiently as possible; the British aim is to keep them isolated, break them into smaller units, and annihilate them.

In assembling for the big breakout effort the Italian Ariete ["Battering Ram"] division managed to join the Nazi mechanized forces, a British spokesman said, thereby forming a combination making the battle highly important and on a "considerable" scale.

As the axis force moved westward, the air force, first to meet it, bombed it continuously. Then concentrations of British tanks and armored cars attacked, and the big battle was under way.

While the British communique placed the scene of the battle as being simply "southeast of Rezegh," other sources said it was being fought in the vicinity of 20 miles south of Gambut, which would be about 40 miles southeast of Rezegh.

Second Big Tank Battle.

This battle was the second big tank engagement of the current Libyan campaign. The first, which started soon after the British invasion began 12 days ago, ended with the British announcing that the axis forces had been defeated and divided.

The British wall was being steadily strengthened as the axis forces smashed against it. The British communique said that British and New Zealand forces were "gradually widening their corridor of contact" established after the long besieged Tobruk garrison battled its way to freedom and junction with the invading forces from the east.

The Britons from Tobruk up to Wednesday night had captured 79 field and medium guns from the axis forces, with "quantities of light antiaircraft and anti-tank artillery, machineguns and small arms," the British statement said.

Infantry fighting as heavy as any yet seen in Africa was raging around Tobruk, the spokesman said. British forces proceeding westward from the town were reported to be meeting stiff German resistance.

Capture by the British of an "important stronghold" north of Bir El Hamed, near the Egyptian border, along with several hundred Italian prisoners, was announced in a communique.

The Germans began to use heavy artillery today in the Libyan battle, possibly indicating that their tank strength is nearing its end.

"NEVER AGAIN CONSENT"

On January 3, 1940, in his annual message to congress President Roosevelt said:

"I can understand the feelings of those who warn the nation that they will never again consent to the sending of American youth to fight on the soil of Europe. But, as I remember, nobody has asked them to consent—for nobody expects such an undertaking."

LOSES RING VALUED AT $3,000.

The loss of a ring valued at $3,000 was reported to police yesterday by David E. Ross, 1936 North Clark street, a salesman.

DESTROY BRITISH BRIGADE; SEIZE 1,000 MEN: ROME

ROME, Nov. 29 (AP).—The destruction of a British motorized brigade in bitter fighting on the central Libyan front and the capture of more than 1,000 prisoners, including the commander of the brigade, were announced today by the Italian high command. More than 50 tanks were reported destroyed.

The general's name was given variously as James Cownes and James Karges, the high command reported.

[The British acknowledged that the 5th South African brigade had been "surprised" by axis troops at Rezegh early this week, and said Friday that losses would not exceed 1,200 men, including prisoners taken.

[In London, an informed British source said "we've heard of four versions of the name of the supposedly captured British brigade commander and there is no general with a name even remotely like any of them in the neighborhood" of the Libyan battle.]

Encircling Drive on—Nazis.

BERLIN, Nov. 29 (AP).—German dispatches said today that German and Italian forces had an encircling attack under way against British divisions which drove toward Tobruk. Military spokesmen denied reports that the British had made contact with the long besieged garrison at Tobruk.

ARGENTINE STATE REFUSES TO CURB ANTI-NAZI RALLY

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, Nov. 29 (AP).—Gov. Enrique Mihura of the autonomous province of Entre Rios today rejected in his territory an effort by the federal government to prevent nation-wide massmeetings of Accion Argentina, a "prodemocracies" organization.

The meetings had been called for today to agitate for adherence to "the American front" and for an anti-Nazi victory.

Mihura telegraphed the interior minister that he was able to guarantee order in his province and would permit the massmeetings to be held there. He said he would take measures if the national government were directly attacked.

FRANCE DENIES IT GIVES GERMANY 5 N. AFRICAN BASES

Sea, Air Stations Yielded, London Hears.

Turn to the Graphic section for the third instalment of "A Thousand Shall Fall," by Hans Habe, a thrilling story of the battle of France.

VICHY, France, Nov. 29 (AP).—The government today denied that five North African air naval bases have been ceded to Germany, as stated in information reaching London.

Commenting upon the report that Bizerte, Rabat, Meknes, Sfax, and Gabes were being used by Germans, official assurance was given that no Germans had arrived at these strategic points or on the Mareth line on the Tunisian-Libyan frontier.

Sea Rule Sought, British Hear.

LONDON, Nov. 29 (AP).—A foreign source tonight reported the Vichy government had yielded to German demands for air and naval control in French North Africa along both the Mediterranean and Atlantic.

Supervision of four air bases formerly linked by the French commercial air line, Air France, already has been taken over by German officers, ground crews, and personnel, this source said.

The modern Tunisian port of Bizerte, one of France's wartime naval bases, likewise has been yielded, he added.

None of these reports could be confirmed in London.

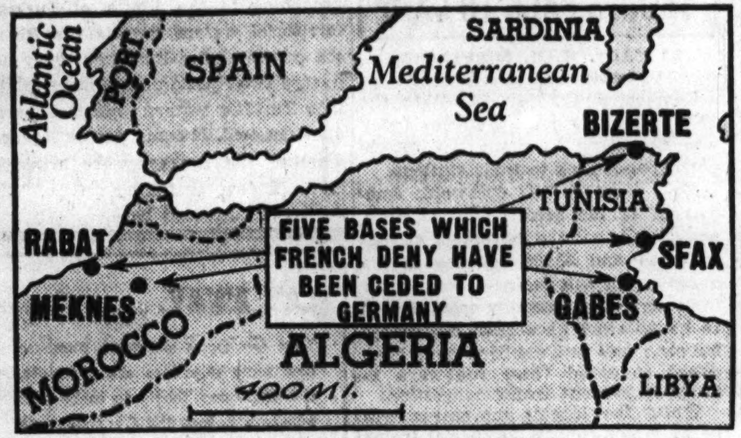
Location of Air Bases.

The air bases are Rabat, on the Atlantic coast of French Morocco; Meknes, an important interior airdrome 60 miles east of Rabat; and Sfax and Gabes, Mediterranean airports in eastern Tunisia.

The heavily fortified line in the old defense area between Tunisia and Tripolitania [in Libya] also was reported to have been subjected to infiltration by small groups of Germans. This was the line on which the French counted to block possible Italian attacks against Tunisia.

French "Collaboration" Reported

(Story in adjoining column.)



Location of the North African bases which British understand have been turned over to Germany by France. The French deny this.

The London source suggested the Germans and Italians might be planning to utilize these fortifications if beaten by the British in Libya.

Reports from Morocco, he added, told how Germans were using French ports in North Africa to refuel submarines.

Mediterranean Fleet "Ready."

New York, Nov. 29 [Special].—In a broadcast heard here, the Vichy-controlled radio at Algiers tonight said the "lifelines of France" to her empire could be kept open only by closest coöperation with the axis powers and their armed forces. The commentator said the French Mediterranean fleet is ready for action and that French Mediterranean bases are ready for "any emergency."

The "Free French" radio at Brazzaville, Equatorial Africa, charged German secret agents were pouring into French Morocco in such numbers they formed the nucleus of a small army.

U. S. MAY RECOGNIZE SYRIA

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—The United States government said today it was hopeful that as soon as international conditions permitted it could recognize the independence of Syria and Lebanon, near east mandates of France.

The announcement by the state department attracted immediate attention in view of the recent statement by Secretary of State Hull that American relations with the Vichy government were under review in the light of developments pointing to closer Franco-Nazi collaboration.

"The American government and people," the state department announcement said, "have always sympathized with the natural and legitimate aspirations of the peoples of Syria and Lebanon. This government, therefore, welcomes any steps toward realization of these aspirations, chief among which is, of course, the full enjoyment of sovereign independence."

France Held Mandates.

Mandates over Syria and Lebanon were given France after the World war and those areas were administered by French officials until a joint British and "Free French" force defeated the Vichy French defenders in June.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, the "Free French" leader, and Gen. Georges Catroux, the "Free French" representative in the near east, proclaimed the independence of Syria on Sept. 16, and Sheikh Tajjedine El Hassani was named as the first president of the Syrian republic.

Great Britain formally recognized the new republic on Oct. 28.

French-U. S. Pact Exists.

As a prelude to American recognition of the world's newest republic, it was said unofficially, the United States must undertake diplomatic negotiations required by a pact between France and the United States, revolving around the rights of the United States and American nationals in that area.

A trade agreement, made with Gen. Maxime Weygand, then Vichy's proconsul in North Africa, was suspended by the United States after Weygand's recent removal, which the state department charged was "at the express demand of Hitler" and was a sign of collaboration detrimental to American interests.

Lifeboat from Sunken U. S. Tanker White Found

BAHIA, Brazil, Nov. 29 (AP).—A lifeboat belonging to the American-owned tanker I. C. White, sunk off Brazil Sept. 27 with the loss of three crewmen, was found Wednesday at the little coastal town of Praia Conde, 90 miles north of Bahia, reports said tonight.

Armed Ship with American Crew Arrives in Brazil

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Nov. 29.—Carrying a gun aft, the steamship Equipoise, the former Italian steamer Pietro Campanella, arrived here today. The vessel, painted war grey, flew the Panamanian flag but carried an American crew. It brought coal and is to return with manganese.

JAPS WILL PURGE U. S. AND BRITAIN FROM ASIA: TOJO

Premier Tells Nation He'll Use Vengeance.

Premier Tojo.

TOKIO, Nov. 29 (AP).—Premier Hideki Tojo solemnly and publicly declared tonight the determination of Japan to purge British and American influence from east Asia "with a vengeance — for the honor and pride of mankind."

It was understood the cabinet had formulated Japan's reply to the Washington note outlining the United States position. While its contents were not disclosed here, it was reported to contain no reason for optimism.

[The British radio said a Tokio broadcast reported the Japanese reply expressed dissatisfaction with certain points.]

As the Japanese cabinet met in special session for a second day to consider the United States note, Tojo broadcast this message to the people of Japan, China, and Manchukuo:

"The fact that Chiang Kai-shek is dancing to the tune of Britain, America, and communism at the expense of able-bodied and promising young men in his resistance against Japan is only due to the desire of Britain and the United States to fish in troubled waters of east Asia by pitting east Asiatic peoples against one another and to grasp hegemony in east Asia.

"Many Countries Hostile."

"This is the stock in trade of Britain and the United States. For the honor and pride of mankind we must purge this sort of practice from east Asia with a vengeance."

The premier stressed the historical ties between Japan, China, and Manchukuo, and the necessity of nations of east Asia to work together for mutual prosperity without outside influence. Many countries, he said, were indulging in actions hostile to Japan.

Truck Convoy Destroyed.

The Domei news agency reported from an army air base in northern Indo-China that Japanese planes had bombed the Burma road, the route for United States aid to Chungking, for the first time in several months.

The dispatch said one bomber destroyed a Chinese convoy of trucks on the road south of Kunming, Yunnan province capital, and nearby warehouses.

The press generally showed concern over the future of Thailand. The Japan Times and Advertiser, organ of the foreign office, said in a front page editorial that Japan must keep Indo-China and Thailand free from "encircling arms"—presumably of the United States, British, Chinese, and Netherlands influence.

The newspaper said that only the joint defense agreement with Vichy prevented Indo-China from falling into these arms, so the policy was amply justified. It added that Japan would be doing a service in preventing "hostile forces" from occupying Thailand.

Thailand Reported Preparing.

HANOI, French Indo-China, Nov. 29 (AP).—Thai [Siamese] troops were reported deployed along the borders of French Indo-China and British Malaya tonight.

Latest advices from Bangkok said Thailand was prepared for the worst. The official Bangkok radio broadcast repeated warnings that the little nation might soon become a battleground.

Japan's next move was blanketed in obscurity.

One military expert summed up the situation thus: "If this were any European army, you would say that war would break within a week or 10 days."

Whatever happens, Vice Admiral Jean Decoux, governor general of Indo-China, declared this colony's rôle in the event of a new war in the Pacific would be directed solely by the Vichy French government.

Report More Jap Planes Sent.

SINGAPORE, Straits Settlement, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Japanese have increased their air strength in southern Indo-China in the last fortnight from less than 100 to more than 200 planes, informed sources said tonight. Leaves of all British troops here were canceled by authorities as a precautionary measure.

REPORT NAZIS OFFER PEACE FEELERS TO END SINO-JAPANESE WAR

MANILA, P. I., Nov. 29 (AP).—Nazi agents in the far east are making a determined attempt to bring about a negotiated peace between Japan and China, quarters closely connected with Japan's puppet Chinese regime at Nanking disclosed today.

At the same time an authorized Chinese source said any lessening of United States aid to China might force Chungking to accept peace terms.

Nanking sources said the Germans had advanced peace feelers thru Premier Wang Ching-wei's puppet government which maintains secret communication with Chungking, and that both Capt. Fritz Weidemann, formerly consul general at San Francisco, recently appointed consul general at Tientsin, and Heinrich Georg Stahmer, formerly a special German envoy to Tokio who recently took up his post as ambassador to Nanking, had definite instructions from Hitler to seek a Chinese-Japanese rapprochement.

ARMY ASSEMBLING HUGE TRAINS TO CARRY TROOPS BACK TO CAMP

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Camden, S. C., Nov. 29.—With the 1941 maneuvers over, the army today was preparing to move the 300,000 participants back to their stations.

Maj. Gen. O. W. Griswold, commander of the armored forces here, announced that the movement of 100,000 men and 22,000 vehicles in his organization will begin 48 hours after their arrival in assembly areas. Roads to be followed have been designated for each unit and civilians have been asked to avoid these highways in order to prevent traffic congestion.

While the largest movement will be by motor convoy, 29 special trains of 40 cars each have been assembled to take the 1st armored division back to Fort Knox, Ky. The 2d will return to Fort Benning, Ga., in 30 trains.

French School Children to Wear Wooden Shoes

VICHY, France, Nov. 28 (AP).—The newspaper La France Socialiste said today the municipal officials in the Paris workers' suburbs were buying large quantities of wooden shoes for school children because of the leather shortage. The shoes, called "sabots," now cost about 10 times more than formerly, the newspaper said.

Russian Destroyers Take Tankers to Turkish Seas

ISTANBUL, Nov. 28 [Delayed.]—(AP).—Two Russian destroyers approaching to the limits of Turkish territorial waters outside the Black sea mouth of the Bosporus today delivered two Russian oil tankers safely into Turkish waters, informal naval quarters said. It could not be learned whether the tankers were bringing oil to Turkey or taking refuge. The destroyers steamed back.

HULL AND BRITISH ENVOY CONFER ON FAR EAST TANGLE

President Says Nation Is Supporting His Policy.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, discussed the far eastern situation for almost an hour today.

Halifax told reporters that Britain is coöperating closely with the United States and is in harmony with the attitude taken by the United States—that it is up to Japan to make the fateful choice of peace or war.

Hull told his press conference there was nothing to be said concerning the situation until the Japanese government has indicated its attitude toward the communication he handed the Japanese envoys here.

Roosevelt Warns World.

President Roosevelt today warned other nations that America is united behind his foreign policy of opposition to aggression anywhere on earth.

"That there is debate, or that there are statements of conflicting opinion prior to the decisions, should not be taken by persons abroad as an indication of lack of cohesion among our people, tho that mistake is sometimes made," he said. "While there have been expressions of different views in regard to our foreign policy, I always have felt that those differences were of degree, but not of principle."

Gillette Reveals Stand.

The President made these statements in a letter to Sen. Guy M. Gillette [D., Ia.]. The senator has opposed the Roosevelt foreign policy and voted against the legislative measures designed to implement it. Recently, however, he wrote to Mr. Roosevelt that the majority had spoken, and offered his "support and services" in carrying out the policy which the majority had laid down. Mr. Roosevelt's reply was made public by the senator.

Italian Outposts in Ethiopia Continue to Fight British

NAIROBI, Kenya Colony, Africa, Nov. 29 (AP).—Several Italian outposts in the sector around Gondar in Ethiopia are continuing to hold out against British and native troops, the East African command announced today. Leaflets written by Gen. Guglielmo Nasi, Italian commander at Gondar who surrendered Thursday with his troops, instructing the garrisons to give up have been dropped from planes.

Maureen recently won the $1,200 Dodd, Mead intercollegiate fellowship award for her novel, "Seventeenth Summer," and she has sold 50 or 60 short stories, while Sheila has sold eight stories and articles.

The conference began Friday and will continue thru Tuesday. Yesterday Maureen spoke on what she had to do to win the fellowship, and tomorrow Sheila will speak on "Never Too Young to Write." Other speakers, all outstanding in writing fields, are on the conference program.

PORTUGAL OUSTS ANGOLA RULER, SAYS NAZI RADIO

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—The German radio said today that the governor general of Angola [Portuguese West Africa] had been relieved of his duties and would be tried on charges of having "coöperated" with England and the "Free French" government of Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

The German report said the governor general, Dr. Meckequez Mano, now was en route to Lisbon, where he would stand trial.

The German radio quoted an "authorized statement" said to have been issued in Lisbon.

GIVE UP ROSTOV SO CITY CAN BE PUNISHED: NAZIS

Claim Civilians Attacked Rear of Lines.

BERLIN, Nov. 29 (AP).—German forces at the northern gate to the Caucasus have fallen back from the principal sections of Rostov-on-Don, giving up their hold on a strategic European prize of war for the first time since the temporary withdrawal from the Norwegian port of Narvik in the spring of 1940.

At the same time DNB, official news agency, declared that Volokolamsk, Klin and Solnetschnogorski had fallen to a sweeping drive on Moscow from the northwest.

Solnetschnogorski, 31 miles northwest of the capital, and Klin, 50 miles northwest, are on the road and rail lines from Moscow to Kalinin, while Volokolamsk is farther west, 65 miles from Moscow.

The German press claimed that Balaklava, the Crimean port just southeast of the Russian-held naval base of Sevastopol, had been occupied.

Threaten Severe Reprisals.

Announcing the German withdrawal from Rostov, on the southern front, the high command marked the town for severe reprisals on account of civilian participation in the fighting. It was charged that civilians were participating in guerrilla warfare on the rear of German lines.

"Occupation troops of Rostov, in compliance with orders, are evacuating the central district of the city," the war bulletin said, "in order to make the most thoro preparations for necessary measures against the population which, contrary to international law, participated in fighting at the rear of the German troops."

It was not disclosed whether this order meant that the town would be razed.

Stress Russian Losses.

The communique mentioned the withdrawal from the "engere stadtgebiet," and this was interpreted generally to mean the builtup sections of the city.

A German military spokesman said of the high command communique:

"Thru this evacuation the opportunity is offered to show the Rostov population its proper place according to international law.

"The Russians perhaps now will report that they have recaptured Rostov. There can be no talk of that. This was a planned step by the German leadership in order to make international and martial law duly respected."

The spokesman said that the Russians not only massed troops in the Rostov area but also in the bend in the Donetz river, where "ruthless counterattacks" by the Russians were in progress.

Reds Sacrificing Men.

"The Russians," he said, "are pursuing the policy of not taking into account sacrifice of masses of men if success, even if only a sham success, is to be obtained.

"They went so far as to arouse the population of Rostov, contrary to international law, to fight at the backs of the German soldiers."

In fighting around Leningrad the Germans said they repulsed Russian efforts to break thru siege lines. A Russian battalion attempt to cross the Neva river in rubber boats ended disastrously with all but one boat sunk, the Germans said.

WIFE FOUND DEAD IN APARTMENT.

Mrs. Katy Walter, 55 years old, was found dead and her husband, Henry, 77, critically ill yesterday in their apartment at 1707 Dayton street. Physicians said they were victims of either carbon monoxide or food poisoning. The apartment was unheated.

REDS PLOT U. S. REVOLT, FINNISH WRITER WARNS

Labor's Ranks Infiltrated with Them, He Says.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Nov. 29.—Warning America that she faces the same dangers which once threatened Finland, and that American labor is infiltrated with communist agents, an editorial by Prof. Eino Railo in the Finnish commercial daily Kauppalehti today discusses the labor situation in the United States.

"The communist world revolutionaries are looking more and more toward America," it says. "It matters little to them if their power is destroyed in Russia, providing they can transplant it to the United States.

"Today, Maxim M. Litvinov, one of the few surviving veterans of bolshevism, is on his way to Washington, D. C. From here it looks as though American labor is also now infiltrated with communist agents, who are working to demoralize America by intensifying class differences to prepare the ground for revolution.

Finland Avoids Strikes.

"Finland is well able to appreciate the dangers threatening America, for we have managed to destroy the same dangers which threatened our very existence. We have suceceded in avoiding strikes and labor conflicts by negotiations.

"But our greatest advance is that all classes in our country revolt at the thought of class warfare led by foreign communist agents. It is significant that even after our last war, we experienced no labor troubles."

The Kauppalehti pays special tribute to the political policy of Finland, which has successfully combated the underground activities of the communists.

"Plan Revolt in U. S."

"Stalin and his comrades are not Russian patriots," continues the paper. "They are revolutionaries, sworn to promote the cause of the world revolution wherever they can. At the same time they are embracing President Roosevelt and begging aid from him, they are organizing underground forces in the United States for a revolt against American society. The labor unions are being deceived and duped by the communists.

"These are some of the signs we see in the growing strike movement in the United States. Thru the policy of their present government, the Americans have become supporters of the world's most dangerous criminals."

8 GERMAN SHIPS SUNK BY BRITISH IN ARCTIC RAIDS

Submarines Blast Troop and Supply Vessels.

LONDON, Nov. 29 (AP).—The admiralty today announced two British submarines had sunk at least eight axis troop and supply ships recently in arctic waters, leading informed British sources to believe Germany was having to replace battered Finnish troops on the Murmansk front.

The announcement indicated the probability that numerous other axis vessels had been sunk by British undersea craft which "have been inflicting severe losses upon German troop transports and supply ships carrying reënforcements of men and material to the German armies on the Murmansk front."

One British submarine, the Tigris, commanded by Commander H. F. Bone, sank five axis ships and damaged a sixth, the admiralty said. Another submarine, the Trident, under Commander G. F. Sladen, sank three out of seven troop transport and supply ships in a convoy.

Winter Offensive Seen.

In view of these claims, informed sources said they thought the troops and supplies were being sent to Petsamo, Finnish port west of Murmansk, for a winter offensive to cut off Russia's arctic ports, particularly ice free Murmansk, thru which much of the United States and British aid to Russia would move.

Regarding action on the home front, a joint communique of the air and home security ministries said:

"During the early part of last night, enemy aircraft dropped bombs at several points in west and southwest England and in South Wales. At one place in South Wales some damage was done. Elsewhere damage done was slight. The total number of casualties was small, but included some people killed. One enemy aircraft was destroyed during the night."

Convoy Raid Foiled, Say Nazis.

BERLIN, Nov. 29 (AP).—The German high command today reported its patrol boats had fought off an attack on a convoy by a British speed boat flotilla in the [English] channel. It said "all the German ships reached their destination." One British ship was claimed sunk and a number damaged.

The official news agency, DNB, said German coastal batteries shelled a British convoy in the English channel today and forced the ships to turn back.

She won an interlocutory decree Nov. 27, 1940, after several prior separations.

GERMANS REVEAL 2 MORE SOLDIERS KILLED IN PARIS

Bombs Explode in Cafes in Montmartre Area.

PARIS, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Germans announced tonight the death of two German soldiers and the wounding of many others in bombing attacks in defiance of a Nazi warning that further such incidents "would cause grave consequences for the Paris population."

The announcement was accompanied by an order from Lieut. Gen. Ernst von Schaumberg, German commander of Paris, clamping on a strict curfew in the famed Montmartre district, scene of the latest attacks, and a warning that any one venturing out there after 6 p. m. would be shot by Nazi patrols. A 5:30 p. m. curfew was ordered for all public places.

Girl Also Killed.

The latest attacks shifted to the far side of Montmartre hill—famed art and night life center—after previous explosions in the left bank student quarter on the other side of Paris. The curfew on the Montparnasse and Latin quarters expires tomorrow. The bombings in these areas brought a $20,000 fine on the city of Paris.

The Montmartre attacks were reported to have occurred in restaurants requisitioned for Germans. In addition to the Germans, a French girl was said to have been killed.

Von Schaumberg's notice said "it is learned that two German soldiers have been killed as a result of an attack with explosives against a restaurant in the 18th arrondissement and many others wounded."

Lift Czech Restrictions.

PRAGUE, Nov. 29 (AP).—The state of civil emergency declared Sept. 28 in parts of Bohemia and Moravia as a result of sabotage and disorders will be lifted in Kolin, Olmutz, Koeniggratz and Kladno Dec. 1, it was announced today. Authorities said order had been restored. Restrictions for Prague and Brunn [Brno] remain in effect.

U. S. TROOPS MAN ICELAND GUNS IN AIR RAID DRILL

REYKJAVIK, Iceland, Nov. 29 (AP).—American troops manned anti-aircraft defenses and patroled the streets in tin hats tonight as this capital city went thru a 55 minute air raid drill.

Guns thundered and searchlights probed the skies in puny opposition to northern lights which streaked the heavens.

British troops joined American soldiers and marines in the exercise, which sent unsuspecting Icelanders hurrying to shelters.

CLAIMS GERMAN U-BOATS STILL CLOSE TO CANADA

TORONTO, Ont., Nov. 29 (AP).—Angus L. Macdonald, Canadian minister of defense for naval affairs, asserted today that German submarines were still operating close to the Canadian coast.

Several weeks ago Macdonald said they were operating off the east coast of Newfoundland "within sight of shore."

He said today he could give no definite information regarding the undersea operations,

CHRISTMAS TREE PROMISED EVERY FAMILY IN BERLIN

Ten Million of Them Roll Toward Cities.

BY ALEX SMALL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Nov. 29.—Ten million Christmas trees, railroad officials said today are now en route to cities thruout Germany. One million are rolling toward Berlin, "to make sure that every Berlin family will get its Christmas tree." Prices, the authorities add, are to remain the same as last year.

The customary "Christmas markets" will be reopened about Dec. 11, but on a smaller scale than in the past. Four open air markets scattered about Berlin will offer Christmas tree decorations, cravats, shawls, cheap jewelry, and ginger bread to a public rather at a loss to know what to buy under the present restrictions.

Permit Lights Till 7 P. M.

Late afternoon shoppers today were surprised to see lights blazing in first floor and basement shops thruout the city. A new regulation now permits shop owners on the first floors to keep their lights burning without "blacking out" until 7 p. m. The same regulation applies from 6 a. m. on.

In case the air raid sirens sound, the authorities point out, blackout regulations must be immediately complied with. Electric or neon signs or show window illuminations are forbidden at all times.

Railroads Bar Civilians.

There will be no room on the German state railroads this year for Christmas holiday travel by civilians. The authorities say the railroads are filled with "war important transportations" and that private visits cannot be expected if soldiers on leave are to be transported. An exception will be made in cases where the state railroads place special trains at the disposition of factory workers returning home for the yuletide.

SWEDISH TANKER, RUMANIAN LINER REPORTED SUNK

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—The 377 ton Swedish motorship tanker Uno has been sunk in the North sea, the Swedish-American news exchange said today.

One sailor was killed and the other crewmen were taken to a German port. No details were available on the sinking.

Marine sources quoted Istanbul, Turkey, reports that the 2,369 ton Rumanian passenger liner Regel Carol I. had been torpedoed and sunk in the Black sea. Advices did not reveal whether any lives were lost on the vessel, which was built in 1898 and was owned by the Rumanian state marine service.

Capital Awaits Story of 'Racket.'

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Rep. Andrew J. May.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—A long-smouldering scandal involving the award of tens of billions in armament contracts will explode upon the capital scene this week with results destined to be disastrous to many a prominent figure.

A terse announcement by Chairman Andrew J. May [D., Ky.], of the house military affairs committee, produced a shock in government circles.

"An investigation of national defense contracts and activities of so-called 'defense brokers,'" said May, "has been conducted in a number of states for several months by the house military affairs committee. The investigation has resulted in disclosures of huge commissions being paid, these commissions being absorbed in the final analysis by the taxpayers of the nation.

Hearings Start Wednesday.

"Public hearings will start Wednesday, Dec. 3, and will continue until a thoro investigation has been completed."

That the committee's investigation was producing evidence of a sensational nature had been whispered for some time. But the military affairs committes of congress are noted for their friendliness to the war department and many had taken the cynical view that the matter would be hushed up in some manner.

It can be revealed that the house appropriations committee forced the investigation into the open. Leading members of this committee, which is now considering the latest seven billion dollar army and navy appropriation measure, threatened to report no more armament funds to the house until the commission racket was exposed.

Threaten to Withhold Funds.

The appropriations committee has approved a total of 59 billion dollars for the lend-lease aid and arms program over an 18 month period. When President Roosevelt on Nov. 17 asked for another 7 billion, there was muttering among the members. They were willing they said, to give the President all he asked, but what about airing the contract scandals which were known to exist?

"No more defense funds until we find out how much of this money is being wasted on commissions," several members threatened. The White House was informed of the situation.

While the affair was at this stage, Charles West, former Ohio congressman and New Deal lobbyist, let the cat out of the bag with a vengeance. West filed suit in New York, claiming $700,000 in fees allegedly due him for getting 70 million dollars worth of government contracts. He sued the Empire Ordnance corporation of New York, beneficiary of the contracts.

Corcoran's Name Mentioned.

Later, it was revealed that this company had another Washington representative, Thomas G. Corcoran, once the closest of the President's advisers. Corcoran left his government post with the avowed intention of making a million dollars and his lobbying activities, according to popular report, already have carried him past that goal.

The military affairs committee hearings are sure to involve the Charles West case, it was learned. Whether Corcoran's activities also will be given publicity remained unknown. One committee investigator said that the inquiry had disclosed no evidence against Corcoran who is noted for working in the background.

West declared in his suit he had an arrangement to get 1 per cent on the total of contracts he obtained for the ordnance corporation. The nature of Corcoran's fee arrangement with the same firm is not known.

Await Story of Lobbying.

But the hearings, it was believed, will reveal the lobbying activities, on a commission basis, of dozens of other well known New Deal lame ducks, political hacks, and party hangers-on who have used their connections to get fat defense contracts.

"They have collected millions upon millions in commissions," said one appropriations committee member. "It is one of the most atrocious rackets ever worked."

The Empire Ordnance corporation is headed by Frank Cohen, a promoter. The most recent contract received by this firm was for 12 ships of the EC-2 or "ugly duckling" type, to be built for the maritime commission on a cost-plus-fixed-fee basis at the Savannah shipyards fitted out by the Cohen organization.

These ships will cost around $2,000,000 each with a fee of $110,000 for each vessel, with an opportunity for the builder to make up to $140,000 on each ship for performance ahead of contract, or to lose as much as $50,000 in penalties from the $110,000 fixed fee.

Maritime commission officials defended the award of the contract to Cohen, saying they recognized him as a promoter but that he had proved to the commission's satisfaction that he could handle the job.

SEDITION TRIAL JURY RECESSES AFTER 10 HOURS

Minneapolis, Minn., Nov. 29 (AP).—A jury of 11 men and one woman, confronted with 2,400 typewritten pages of testimony and hundreds of books and pamphlets of the Socialist Workers party, deliberated for 10 hours on the case of 23 persons accused of seditious conspiracy against the United States government and then adjourned tonight until tomorrow morning.

In his charge as the climax of five weeks of testimony and argument, Federal Judge M. M. Joyce commented at length on the question of free speech—an issue which has been raised by the defense frequently durig the trial. The case went to the jury this noon. The jurors deliberated until 5:30 p. m. and then went to dinner, returning at 7 p. m.

Freedom of Speech Issue.

Judge Joyce asserted that freedom of speech, assembly and press was a fundamental right and "a rather wide one permitting people to say foolish as well as sensible things." He added, however, that the constitution did not confer an absolute right to speech without responsibility and that it did not give immunity from every possible use of language.

The court emphasized that the government must have proved, beyond any reasonable doubt, that the defendants actually were engaged in a conspiracy to bring about armed revolt before a guilty verdict can be returned.

Rules Trotsky Visit Legal.

The jurors also were told the defendants had a right to visit the late Leon Trotsky, exiled revolutionist in Mexico, if they wished, and that the organization of a labor union guard to protect union property was, in and of itself, not illegal. Judge Joyce stressed, nevertheless, that "no one has the right to take the law into his own hands." Part of the government's testimony dealt with a visit of several of the defendants to Trotsky and formation of a union guard.

Gov. Green Goes Hunting and Bags Limit of 10 Ducks

Bath, Ill., Nov. 29 (AP).—Gov. Green went duck hunting today for the first time this season and got the limit—10 ducks. The governor and other state officials were guests of Stewart Logan, Chicago broker, at his Illinois river lodge. Others in the hunting party included Lieut. Gov. Hugh W. Cross, Attorney General George F. Barrett, State Treasurer Warren Wright, and Ferre Watkins of Chicago.

INSPECTOR PEUSER IS GIVEN A LESSON IN FIRE PREVENTION

Harold Bacall.

When Fire Inspector William Peuser, 59 years old, of Oak Park examined a sample of cleaning fluid he had taken from an establishment at 124 North Marion street in the suburb yesterday, he found it to be explosive. This is in violation of a village ordinance. He therefore called upon Harold Bacall, the proprietor, and ordered him to discontinue use of the fluid.

"But it isn't explosive," Bacall protested, pulling out a box of matches. "Look!"

"Don't! Don't do it!" Peuser shouted, trying to close the lid of the cleaning machine Bacall had opened. Bacall, however, laughed, struck the match, and tossed it in.

The explosion, which was heard several blocks, burned the clothing off both men and wrecked the machine. Both were treated at Oak Park hospital. The village will launch an intensive inspection of all cleaning plants tomorrow, according to Fire Chief William C. Watters.

ARRESTED ON GIRLS' CHARGES.

George Brogger, 51 years old, of 628 Grace street, a salesman, was arrested last night by the Town hall police on charges of molesting two 10-year old girls in the Mode theater, at 3912 Sheridan road. Mothers of the girls signed complaints against him.

MICHIGAN PROBE LOOMS ON ROLE OF NEGRO 'CZAR'

County Employe, 79, Tells His Many Duties.

BY PERCY WOOD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 29.—Prospects of a searching investigation of Wayne county's sprawling government aroused widespread apprehension today among the county's pay rollers.

A central figure in the prospective inquiry is Ben H. Pelham, 79 years old, a Negro, who has been a county employé since 1895. Many say he is the virtual ruler of Wayne county.

Charges have been made that pay rolls of the county government are overloaded, that employés in some departments are drawing pay without working, and that workers are forced to pay campaign contributions.

John Smith, former mayor of Detroit and now president of the city council and an ex officio member of the 153 member county board of supervisors, asserted there are four times as many guards, elevator operators, and other functionaries in the county building as are needed.

May Request One Man Grand Jury.

Monday the county board ways and means committee may ask Prosecuting Attorney William Dowling to request a one man grand jury investigation of county affairs. Should this develop it is possible the investigation would be conducted by Circuit Judge Homer Ferguson, whose previous similar inquiries have resulted in charges and convictions against former city and county officials. Wayne county includes Detroit.

Pelham, a modest, dignified man who carries his years well, said today that in his post as county accountant he fixes the county tax rate, controls all purchases, prepares budgets for all departments, lobbies for the county with the legislature in Lansing, has a hand in job distribution, advises the auditors on all important steps, manages county institutions, and compiles the business of the day for board members.

"But," and here Pelham held up a warning hand, "say that I do all these things on orders from or with the permission of the board of county auditors, because that is the truth."

John C. Cowan, a member of the board of auditors, assented heartily and laughed with Pelham when a subordinate entered the room and addressed the Negro as "czar."

The friendly designation also brought a smile of appreciation from Pelham's son, Alfred, a poised and immaculate graduate of the University of Michigan and Harvard university, who is his father's right hand in the accounting division.

Salary About $10,000 a Year.

The esteem in which the ageing Negro is held by those who know and work with him is based, they say, upon his indispensability and his reputation. Altho infrequently in the news until of late, he has come thru 46 years of public office without criticism and is a firm believer in and stanch supporter of the county government he runs. His salary is approximately $10,000 a year.

"There is no pay roll padding in the county government, and as far as the other charges go, I have been here a long time and I never have made a campaign contribution or bought a ticket for a political benefit. I'm a Republican and the majority of the board is Democratic, but that makes no difference now, or has it in the past. I've stayed here thru all administrations."

Attention was focused on the county government a few weeks ago when it was charged employés in the tract index department of the register of deeds office had been drawing pay without working.

Six men were fired, whereupon one of them, Edward Milewski, retaliated with a charge that employés in the board of county auditors were assessed monthly sums for what they were told were campaign expenses of their bosses. He said that during actual campaigns the pay rollers were expected to kick in even more.

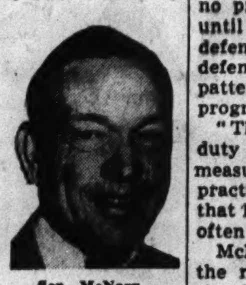
SENATORS MOVE TO PLACE 'TEETH' IN PRICE CONTROL

Men of Both Parties Rap House Bill.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—Sen. Charles McNary [R., Ore.] today called the administration's price control bill "toothless and timorous" as indications multiplied that bipartisan efforts will be made in the senate to rewrite the much amended measure passed yesterday by the house.



Sen. McNary.

Joining Minority Leader McNary in criticism of the bill, Sen. Walter F. George [D., Ga.] said that if there is to be effective control of prices the senate will have to write a much more drastic measure than the one approved by the house.

In one of his rare public statements on legislation, McNary asserted that price fixing must be accompanied by elimination of "waste" in the defense program and by reduction in nondefense expenditures.

Raps Nondefense Outlays.

"I am afraid the measure passed by the house is toothless and timorous," he continued. "I am certain no price fixing bill will be effective until we remove flagrant waste in defense expenditures, decrease nondefense expenditures and improve the pattern of our defense and domestic program.

"The senate is charged with the duty of passing a more effective measure, one that at least has some practical means of enforcement and that has regard for the neglected and often forgotten consumer."

McNary indicated his objections to the measure center on the elimination by the house of proposed licensing provisions by which price edicts would be enforced. However, Sen. Robert Taft [R., O.] said he was glad the house did not give the price administrator power to take away summarily the right of a merchant to do business because he might have violated a price order.

Would Regulate Wages.

The house approved measure provides no control over wages, but Sen. George said it is his belief that all factors of cost, including wages, ought to be taken into consideration in any price fixing orders that may be issued.

The house bill, creating an independent five man board to review the price edicts of an administrator, is expected to be assigned to the senate banking and currency committee Monday for extended study. Leaders said hearings might begin soon, but neither McNary nor George expected senate action on the measure before mid-January.

Police Hunt Two Slayers Who Shot Negro Soldier

Police yesterday were seeking the slayers of Private Joseph Harderman, 18 years old, a Negro soldier on leave from Fort Riley, Kas., who was shot to death early in the day near 54th street and Prairie avenue. Witnesses told police that two men walked up behind Harderman, who was in uniform, and one of them fired a bullet into his back. Harderman's home was at 213 East 56th street.

AMERICA'S AUTOMOBILE INDUSTRY

DID YOU ever stop to think what the automobile industry means to our country? In one brief generation it has helped create for the American people the highest living standards on earth.

The automobile built America's good roads. It built suburbs. It shrunk distance. It widened the horizons, broadened the thinking, brought complete freedom of movement to our millions of families. Made America known better, loved better, by its people.

And more than that—the automobile has provided employment for millions in many businesses; added tremendous growth to other industries—steel, rubber, petroleum, glass, textiles, agriculture.

And—fortunately, for the needs of today—the automobile built up in America the greatest industrial production system on earth!

Making America Strong

The automobile industry's vast power and technique of quantity production has today become the "Arsenal of Democracy."

That's only natural.

The land battleships that spearhead modern armies—the combat cars, trucks, "jeeps," motorcycles—the war birds of the sky—all grew right out of the automobile.

And today, the plants that made America the greatest automobile nation on earth are helping to arm America faster for defense than any country was ever armed before!

Plymouth is playing its part, of course. The No. 1 car of the great Chrysler Corporation, Plymouth is constantly diverting machines and man power to feed the busy assembly lines of tanks, bombers, guns and army vehicles.

Full Speed Ahead!

Plymouth's and Chrysler Corporation's many defense jobs are going forward rapidly—with all tracks cleared for them!

The limited number of Plymouth cars now being produced for needed civilian transportation actually helps the defense program.

All parts of the huge production machine must be kept moving—and cars help keep it going; help keep the overall machine organized; help keep intact and on call the skilled talents that have the experience and "know-how" for getting defense jobs done, and done right.

The new Plymouth car, though limited in numbers, goes into the world with the prestige of being the very best automobile ever to bear the Plymouth name.

It is Plymouth's Finest in design, performance and driving ease—in long-life engineering—in the basic quality that makes a sound lasting, economical investment.

Better Transportation

This Plymouth is the most powerful car in Plymouth history, yet it gives you new driving economy. And its new low-to-the-road design provides new riding comfort. If you need a new car, see and drive Plymouth's Finest.

Today, the fact is recognized that, along with the job of building for defense, the automobile industry has the other important task of building cars for America's transportation needs.

FINAL EFFORTS TO AVERT RAIL STRIKE STARTED

Management and Labor Gather at Washington.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—President Roosevelt's emergency fact finding board in the railroad wage dispute undertook mediation of the troublesome issue tonight in an effort to avert a threatened strike of 1,200,000 railway workers.

Representatives of the carriers, the nonoperating and the operating unions gathered in three separate rooms on the second floor of the Raleigh hotel and the board members met with the three groups in turn, apparently as a prelude to a general conference.

Chairman Wayne L. Morse announced that the board would meet continuously thru tonight and all day Sunday at the Raleigh hotel in order to have its second report ready for the President Monday.

Two Days of Argument.

After listening to two days of arguments from opposing sides, Morse, who is dean of the Oregon university law school, told the 100 representatives of the carriers and their employés that the welfare of the nation demanded that the dispute be settled "without a paralyzing, and in the chairman's opinion, an unjustifiable railroad strike."

The five operating brotherhoods called a strike for Dec. 7 after rejecting the board's recommendations, made Nov. 5, for temporary wage increases. Fourteen nonoperating brotherhoods have not issued a formal strike call, but have notified members to be prepared for one.

George M. Harrison, appearing for nonoperating railway workers, told the board at today's hearings that its recommendations would place thousands of railway workers "in an economic vacuum with our substandard wages frozen at the only time in our lives when we should get an advance."

Two Courses Are Open.

Earlier, J. Carter Fort, counsel for the carriers joint committee, said the brotherhoods were "blind and stubborn" in refusing to accept the findings of a government board after full and fair hearings.

Morse told both parties that the board was "under instructions of the President to make a supplementary report on Monday" and that two courses were open: First, the report could be based upon the record to date including two days of argument and reargument, or second, a "report based upon mediation." Opposing counsel quickly agreed to meet with the board for further mediation efforts.

Originally the brotherhoods asked an increase of 30 per cent for operating employés whose scale ranges from $5.06 a day up, and of 30 to 34 cents an hour for nonoperating workers who now get 35 to 85 cents. The board recommended an increase of 7½ per cent for the first group and 9 cents an hour for most of the second. The brotherhoods indicated willingness to accept a compromise providing 15 per cent increase for operating workers and 12½ cents an hour increase for nonoperating.

ORTON ENTITLED TO DIVORCE HIS WIFE CONCEDES

The Orton divorce case played another scene yesterday when Harold M. Keele, attorney for Mrs. Annabelle Adams Orton, conceded in court that her husband, Philo A. Orton, elderly and wealthy crane and shovel manufacturer, is entitled to a divorce on the ground of cruelty.

Keele made the admission after delivering a long, blistering attack on Orton's counsel, Daniel A. Covelli, because of Covelli's threat earlier in the week to submit proof of adultery if the cruelty charges are not sustained.

Judge Cornelius J. Harrington will rule tomorrow on whether cruelty has been proved. Orton has testified that his wife struck him Nov. 19 and Nov. 20. She admitted this. Orton in his original suit, had accused her of misconduct with "Mr. R." and other men.

HITS 'GOON SQUAD' DRIVE TO DEFEAT ANTI-STRIKE BILL

Rep. Smith Tells Labor Threat to Congress.

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29 [Special].—An assertion that organized labor had called in "goon squads" to "waylay, browbeat, and threaten congressmen with political assassination" if they vote anti-strike legislation was made tonight by Rep. Howard W. Smith [D., Va.] who next week will offer in the house his plan to outlaw labor organizations that strike in defiance of the government during the rearmament emergency.

At the same time William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced that appeals had been sent to all members of congress to vote against the pending anti-strike legislation. Green also said that letters had been sent to all affiliated labor organizations asking that their forces be arrayed against the legislation.

CIO Opposes Bills.

The Congress of Industrial Organizations also adopted a militant stand against anti-strike legislation, which will be a subject for house consideration Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday of next week.

Rep. Smith, in his statement, said: "Word has gone out from union headquarters calling to Washington a horde of labor leaders to browbeat and bludgeon the congress into refusing the demand of the American people for legislation to stop strikes that are sabotaging the national defense. Those interested in good government should keep their eyes on Capitol hill next week, where they can expect to see one of the most disgusting, brazen, and concerted attemps on an organized minority to defeat the will of the American people that ever has occurred.

"Congressmen will be waylaid, buttonholed, browbeat and threatened with political assassination if they dare vote their honest convictions on strike legislation."

Green Deplores Move.

After disclosing that appeals had been made to members of congress to oppose anti-strike legislation, and that 40,000 AFL locals had been importuned to line up against the measures, Green declared that his organization had proven its patriotism by the dispatch with which army cantonments were constructed. He said the number of hours lost in strikes by AFL members was "inconsequental" and that a "no strike" policy in arms industries had been declared by the AFL, which "represents our official attitude toward interrupted defense production."

Comparing strikes in America with England and Canada, Green said that stoppages here had closely paralleled those in the two nations at war. He said that percentage of workers out on strike at any one time ran about as follows: England, 2.3; Canada, 2.4, and the United States, 2.3.

F-M RADIO SHUTS OUT TANK NOISE; HELPS SECRECY

Fort Monmouth, N. J., Nov. 29 (AP).—Frequency-modulation, push-button radio sets are the latest thing for tanks roaring thru simulated battle. The sets for two way communication among tanks were described today at the signal corps training and research center here, where they were developed.

Despite the clamor inside a tank, officers said, words go thru the air with virtually no interference because the microphones are two discs scarcely larger than a nickle and held against the operator's throat by an elastic band. Vocal sounds are transmitted thru the skin while the operator's hands are free for other tasks. Headphones are built into crash helmets.

Enemy interception of messages sent over the F-M sets was described as virtually impossible because of the low power used in transmitting.

W-G-N PRESENTS 'THE MIKADO' ON THEATER OF AIR

Stars Marion Claire and Attilio Baggiore.

The wit, gayety, and tuneful melodies of Gilbert and Sullivan's immortal "The Mikado" delighted a coast to coast audience last night on W-G-N's Chicago Theater of the Air broadcast.

Marion Claire was the winsome Yum Yum, and Attilio Baggiore her swain, Nanki-Poo, the wandering minstrel. The dramatic cast wore Japanese costumes and the entire production, directed by William A. Bacher, had an authentic air about it.

Col. McCormick Reads Letter.

Preceding the performance, Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, read his recent letter to Lord Kemsley, chairman of the London Daily Sketch, in which he said that altho he, and many other Americans, would fight to prevent the conquest of England, there was little support in America for a military expedition by the United States to take part in foreign wars. The letter was printed in full in THE TRIBUNE on Nov. 19.

The singing rôles taken by Miss Claire and Baggiore were enacted excellently by Barbara Luddy and Bret Morrison. Earl Wilkie was superbly comic as the lord high executioner Ko-Ko.

Marion Schroeder and Ruth Slater, singing the respective rôles of Pitti-Sing and Peep-Bo, combined with Miss Claire in the popular "Three Little Maids." Win Stracke sang the Mikado.

Supporting Cast Wins Praise.

Outstanding in the supporting dramatic cast were Bob Jellison as Ko-Ko, Willard Waterman as the Mikado, and Marvin Mueller, Olan Soule, Rita Ascot, Marilou Neumayer, and Muriel Bremner.

The musical background was supplied by the W-G-N orchestra under the leadership of Henry Weber and the chorus directed by Robert Trendler.

KELLY TO SEEK NAVAL AID FOR TINY BUSINESS

3,000 Firms in Chicago Hit by Priorities.

Voicing a desire to take the jitters out of little business, Mayor Kelly announced yesterday that he and Mayor Fiorello La Guardia of New York will appear Tuesday before the senate naval affairs committee in Washington.

There the mayors of the nation's first and second cities will plead for the easing of naval priorities to help keep the little business man from being ruined. A general campaign along those lines has been started by Chicago and Illinois leaders. THE TRIBUNE also has helped press the drive.

La Guardia is expected in Chicago tomorrow. He probably will confer with Kelly and issue a statement in behalf of little business. The two mayors, according to present plans, will leave for Washington some time tomorrow.

Kelly said there are more than 3,000 small business organizations in Chicago capable of turning out arms products or supplying civilian needs if the government will relinquish priorities.

"I want to guarantee small business men the chance to keep on working," said Mayor Kelly. "I mean by that also the employé. I don't want these people to be floaters, going from one job to another. I want to take the jitters out of business."

The mayor then recalled a plan he broached a few days ago whereby the government, if it is unable to supply materials to small plants, would finance them over the critical period. This help, he said would be a sort of mortgage under which, when normal times return, the business could repay the government. His plan may be socialistic, he said, but even so, he is for it.

"After all, if the government destroys a plant, the government should pay for it," Mayor Kelly said.

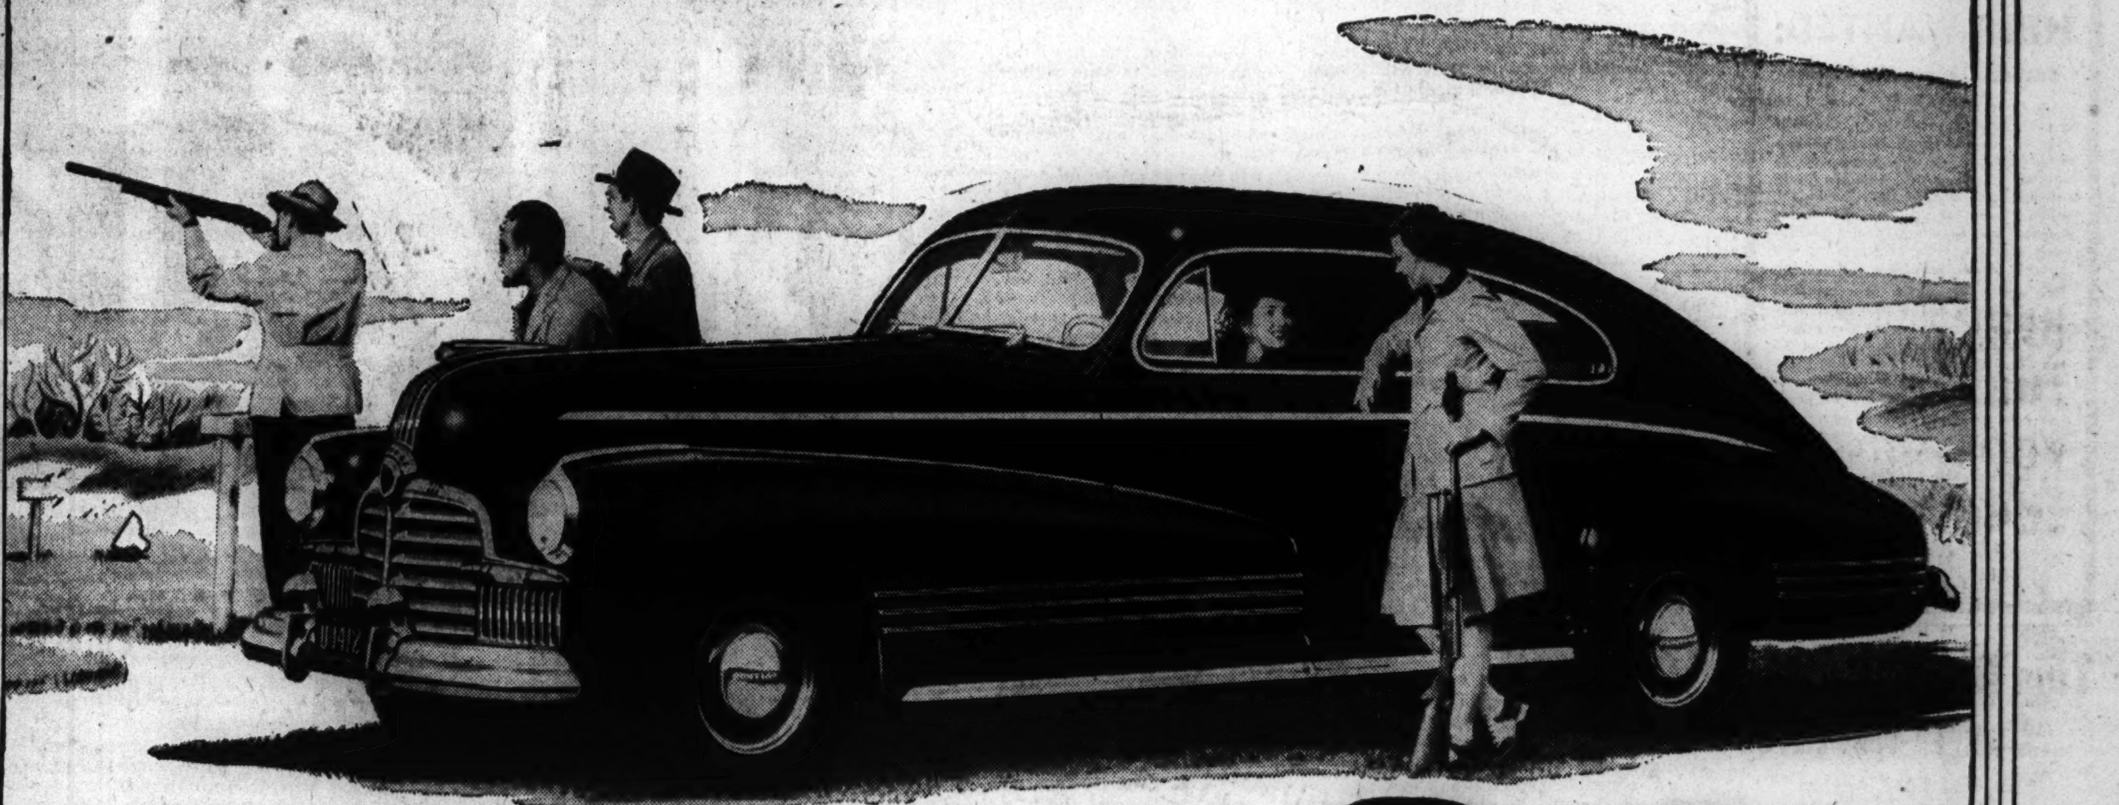
No matter what you like best about Pontiac today . . .
you'll still call it "Old Faithful" in the years to come!



GENERAL MOTORS' MASTERPIECE

WHILE THE 1942 Pontiac surpasses last year's sensationally successful model in many ways, the best news is that all of its important operating parts—pistons, bearings, crankshaft and many others—remain unchanged.

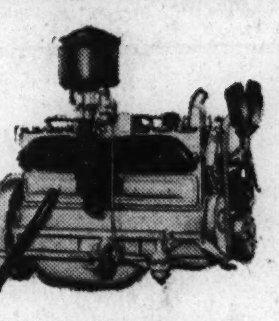
In other words, all the vital things that have built Pontiac's great reputation for dependability are still yours in 1942. This has been accomplished without interfering with defense needs.

What does this mean to you? Simply that, in a year when dependability is more important to car buyers than ever before, Pontiac has not let you down. The Pontiac dependability that means freedom from trouble over the years—the Pontiac dependability that pays off in greater value at trade-in time—is still there in 1942. Yet Pontiac prices still start just above the lowest!

Your present car may cover part or perhaps all of the down payment on a 1942 Pontiac. The balance may be paid in monthly installments.

AVAILABLE AS A SIX OR AN EIGHT IN ANY MODEL

Pontiac
THE FINE CAR WITH THE LOW PRICE



All the vital parts of Pontiac's great six and eight cylinder engines—pistons, bearings, connecting rods, crankshafts and all others which have built Pontiac's enviable reputation for dependability over the years—are still yours unchanged in the 1942 Pontiacs.

How Pontiac Is Helping America Prepare
Pontiac's part in National Defense is the production of rapid-fire cannon for the U. S. Navy. To speed this all-important task, Pontiac has two ordnance plants—one in operation and one under construction—manned by thousands of skilled craftsmen working night and day building this cannon which naval authorities say is "the most effective weapon of its size ever produced." Pontiac may build fewer cars, but our part in National Defense will never be neglected.

STALIN CAPTURES WASHINGTON.

Joseph E. Davies, former ambassador to Russia, was a corporation lawyer who by marriage became identified with General Foods; W. Averell Harriman, chairman of the board of the Union Pacific railroad company and director of other corporations, is a coördinator of lend-lease in Great Britain; William L. Batt, president of the S. K. F. Industries and a director of other corporations, is also a director in OPM. They haven't been raised in schools of revolutionary thought and there would have been no reason to think that any of their past associations or their natural bent would make them friends of communistic control of individuals and enterprises.

Mr. Harriman and Mr. Batt were sent to Russia by Mr. Roosevelt on the joint British-American mission to Stalin. They have returned full of enthusiasm for the régime they found there, for what it has done, and for the advantages it has given the people of Russia. They agree, that Stalin is a man of great intelligence. They are evidently captivated by the intelligence, courtesy, and good living they found in the Kremlin.

Mr. Batt in the reports of his mission confesses that he went to Russia with many misgivings, fearing that it would be a complete waste of American material to send it to people who would not know how to use it. He said he came back with a profound conviction that he had been entirely mistaken. He found that the Russians had been educated and trained to a technical ability equal to that to be found anywhere in the United States. They had "impressive intelligence, imagination, and speed." They were "ingenious, intelligent, and technically trained."

The Russian officers and officials were "capable, well informed men." Stalin and his officials were amazingly well informed and at the Kremlin dinner, which Mr. Batt says he wishes he could adequately describe, one was "impressed with their great assurance and complete faith in themselves." One of the greatest battles of history was raging not more than a hundred miles away, but in the dinner hall of the Kremlin there was "calm, resolution, and unshakable courage"—and six hours of eating and drinking.

Mr. Davies, drawing upon what he is supposed to have learned as ambassador to Moscow, recently in a magazine article told the American people that the Moscow trials by which Stalin judicially assassinated all leaders of the revolution and thus exterminated all political opposition to him personally were purges by which the present war against Naziism was made possible.

Mr. Davies ignores both the murderous frameups by which Stalin sent his old associates to death and the culminating pact with Hitler which made the attack on Poland possible and the war inevitable. One wonders what has come over men who have been associated with great private enterprises in the United States and are now working under instructions from the White House.

New Dealers, who for eight years have been trying to substitute a planned society for the individualistic system of the United States, can be understood when they try to whitewash Stalin. The American radicals and liberals who at the beginning of the Lenin revolution were fascinated by their own visions of Utopia can be understood. They, however, were disillusioned and recanted. They condemned what they had admired. Some of them have crept back into the communist camp, but that is under war emotions.

It is a serious phenomenon for the American people now to observe that representatives of institutions made possible only by the American political, social, and economic system are looking with admiring eyes upon the methods of a despotic totalitarian state and upon the results it has produced. They have returned with visions of Utopia and they certainly are strange visionaries.

A familiar soviet trick has been to take in the innocent traveler with a highly specialized exhibit and to hide the real conditions. When American business men fall for this and then in reporting to the American people overlook every process by which Russian political life has been suppressed and the economic order controled, they are serving the fifth column in this country for purposes that are not easily understood as to them, and to the gratification of every collectivist who has been scheming and plotting all during Mr. Roosevelt's administration with the approval of the chief executive of the United States.

We now see in Washington men who in new and autocratic governmental positions are finding authority a strong wine. It has gone to their heads. They were drawn from responsible positions in private management, but apparently they have found that nothing in their experience with private enterprise was so intoxicating and gratifying as the dictatorial authority they can exercise in government posts.

Two examples at present conspicuous are Donald M. Nelson, director of the Supplies, Priorities and Allocation board, and Floyd B. Odlum, director of the contract division of the Office of Production Management. Mr. Nelson was recruited from Sears, Roebuck & Co., and Mr. Odlum from the Atlas corporation. They are now telling American business, which comes with its hat in its hand, what it can get in the way of materials and government contracts. Their taste of this strong wine has apparently given them hallucinations and shown them the beauties of the dictatorial state.

These are only specimens of American industrialists seduced from the American system by being taken up on a high mountain. That the war fever has a great deal to do with it is unquestionable, but some of these captains of industry are not doing their job solely on the ground of national necessity but with personal liking for it, and therein lies the danger to the country.

It would seem as if the collectivist had captured the inner citadel of the American system and that our Quislings are the men who were in the high positions of the system they are discarding. They, of course, would be the first victims of their seducers. But it is to be feared that they are taking the country with them.

DEAR CAROL.

"Dear Sirs: If you have any information concerning the Civil war, could you possibly send it to me? I would appreciate it if you would."

To put it briefly, Carol, we know all about the Civil war. If we had the time we would like nothing better than to tell you about it. Fortunately there are other sources of information which, if not so good, are still fairly satisfactory. Quite a few books have been written on the subject, as you will discover for yourself if you pay a visit to the public library.

The singular fact about those books is that they are all good, even when they're inaccurate and ill written. That was the most interesting of all wars, and almost anything written or talked about it holds the attention.

A good way to start on the Civil war is to find somebody who was in it. That isn't as easy as it used to be, but if you're lucky you may discover a G. A. R. man. He'll be glad to tell you where he was and what he saw and did. If, by great good fortune, there is another G. A. R. man present, there will be disagreements on detail. They will be heated and you will catch fire. That happened to a lot of us.

Some of us got started by reading such works as "Frank on a Gunboat." The author's name was Castlemon. Then there was a Mr. Oliver Optic, who wrote about the Summers boys, Jack and Tom, the one in the navy and the other in the army. They were very brave, and there must be half a dozen books telling their exploits. We hesitate to recommend "The Boys of '61" to a beginner because, as any teacher can tell you, it's too hard for children, too soft for adults, and filled with inaccuracies. Well, maybe so, but we took it in large doses, maps and all, at the age of 12 and survived.

Perhaps up in the attic you can find some bound volumes of the Century magazine. People used to bind magazines, perhaps for the reason that they contained good reading, deserving of preservation. If you can get your hands on the right volumes, you will find a lot about our war. If you are an underprivileged child, who hasn't the bound copies, you can get the same material in a book called "Battles and Leaders of the Civil War."

Sooner or later you'll come to Gen. Grant's memoirs. They are published in two fat volumes. We could mention a lot of other books, but there is no need to. By the time you've read the memoirs you'll be a full fledged expert in good standing and can pick and choose for yourself. In about twenty-five years you will be a candidate for the Civil War Round Table. Our Mr. Parrish of Tennessee will be glad to sponsor you for membership at the proper time. It would be inaccurate to say that all of Mr. Parrish's judgments on the war are sound, but, considering the limitations imposed by his background, he does very well indeed. He may be trusted on all battles and campaigns in which his grandfather was not a participant. In Tennessee they bend their twigs at a tender age.

SECRETARY KNOX ON ENLISTMENTS.

Secretary Knox disclosed that the navy is considering conscription to man the fleet. If the practice is adopted, it will be the first time since the British press gangs of more than a century ago that a first class naval power has had to use compulsion to recruit its sailors. The navy has traditionally been a volunteer force and the long period of service necessary to train men to operate modern naval craft has strengthened and not weakened that tendency.

Mr. Knox blames the drop in naval enlistments on the torpedoing and loss of life on the destroyers Kearny and Reuben James. Not only is that imputation of cowardice a gross insult to the young men of America but it is a fake excuse as well. Our young men have never been backward about offering their lives when they knew that the defense of their country required it.

The drop in enlistments is another indication of the unpopularity of the war which Mr. Knox and others are trying to force on this country against the will of the majority of its citizens. Enlistments are falling off because American young men decline the invitation to fight other nations' battles.

TAXES ON FOOD AND CULTURE.

By a perverted logic the state department of finance has ruled that the 2 per cent state sales tax is to be collected on lunches sold to school children by the Chicago board of education. The board is properly resisting. It maintains that under no conceivable interpretation can it be considered a retailer. If it were forced to pay the tax its expenses would increase $54,000 a year. If the tax were passed on to the children it would work an unjustifiable hardship upon thousands of families who can ill afford the glass of milk and sandwich the youngsters must content themselves with.

The finance department's attempted gouge ranks with the federal government's application of the excise tax requiring payment of a penny on each 10 cents or fraction thereof of admissions to cultural and educational institutions. The visitor who pays 25 cents to enter the Art institute must pay a tax of 3 cents on the admission. A tax on culture can be justified no more than can the tax on the food that a child must eat to sustain himself thru the classroom hours while he is being trained for citizenship in a land he hopes to love and respect.

Editorial of the Day

"MY CIO, 'TIS OF—"

[Indianapolis News.]

In all the furor about the steel company coal mine strike and what was going to be done about it, a surprising statement, made by Philip Murray, president of the CIO at its Detroit convention last week, may have been dismissed as typical convention oratory.

Murray said: "Nothing must stop the work of organizing the unorganized in America—not even a great national emergency." It is a statement that merits a second and third reading, for those few words put this nation "on the spot" in no uncertain terms. While granting that the meaning may be slightly distorted by taking the sentence from its context, the statement would seem to mean that, come what may, 5,000,000 CIO members demand that their aims be placed above the desires of the population of the land for security from the menace of totalitarianism and for domestic concord.

Is it democratic for 5,000,000 to say to 130,000,000: "We don't care what happens to you as long as we get what we want"? If that is democracy, then Hitler is the most democratic person in the world because he has done the same thing on a larger scale and with a smaller minority.

GEN. PERSHING'S RECORD OF CONFLICTS WITH ALLIES

PROSPECTS for another AEF to Europe, to Africa, or perhaps to Asia—less than 25 years after the first one—center fresh interest in the relations between the American armies and those of Britain and France in that earlier effort to make the world safe for democracy.

It is a fact that Gen. John J. Pershing, commander of the American armies, was occupied during much of the 18 months preceding the armistice in combating demands urgently pressed and renewed again and again that our forces be scattered under the command of the French and British leaders. In his published memoirs, "My Experiences in the World War" [Frederick A. Stokes, publisher], Gen. Pershing tells of conference after conference with Lloyd George, Clemenceau, Foch, and others, beginning in May, 1917, and continuing until October, 1918, just before the armistice—seventeen months of nagging appeals, annoying demands, and guarded attempts at dictation and coercion, which he was forced to resist and did resist to the end.

Pershing was a stubborn man. He never once weakened in his position that the American army must keep its identity and fight under the American flag. Sometimes the government in Washington gave signs of succumbing to the insistent demands of the allies, but in general Secretary Baker and the President upheld their commander in France.

* * *

Even before Pershing sailed for Europe he noted the demands that American forces be supplied to fill French and British ranks. He writes in May, 1917:

"Both the French and British missions, under M. Viviani and Mr. Balfour, respectively, then in our country, were very keen to have American recruits to fill up the ranks of their armies."

In the same month Pershing describes the "Gen. Nivelle scheme," which was:

"In order that there may not be any officers of higher rank than the French officers with whom these auxiliary [American] troops will be called upon to work it is preferable that in the different units there should not be for the present any officer above the rank of captain. When the units will become sufficiently numerous to require superior officers these can be chosen from the captains of existing units."

"Of course, it was never even hinted that our action was prompted by such motives [selfish desire to be found on the winning side when the war was over], but there is little doubt that the formation of an American army was not looked upon with favor. Our belief in the existence of such an attitude on the part of the allies naturally stirred in our minds a feeling of distrust, which was emphasized by their later efforts to dominate, and which, therefore, continued to be a factor in all our relations up to the end."

* * *

In November, 1917, there was vast congestion of freight at St. Nazaire and elsewhere; also lack of ballast for returning ships, causing long delays. Of this situation Pershing wrote:

"Regardless of the cause, these delays without doubt served to encourage allied hopes that we might finally be forced to allow our men to be used as drafts, and made it more difficult to carry out in France the details of arrangements for equipping and organizing an independent army."

A proposal made in December, 1917, by Lloyd George to Col. House that the Americans should incorporate in the British units any infantry that could not be organized immediately into complete United States divisions brought from Gen. Pershing this comment: "It is all very well to make such an appeal to us, but it is impossible to ignore our national viewpoint. The people themselves would not approve, even tho the President should lean that way. I am strongly opposed to it. We cannot permit our men to serve under another flag except in extreme emergency and then only temporarily."

Illustrative of the pressure from the allies is a cable sent by Secretary of War Baker to Pershing on Christmas day, 1917:

"Both England and France are pressing upon the President their desire to have your forces amalgamated with theirs by regiments and companies, and both express belief in an impending heavy drive by Germans somewhere along the line of the western front. We do not desire loss of identity of our forces, but regard that as secondary to the meeting of any critical situation by the most helpful use possible of the troops at your command."

In this connection it was made clear that Mr. Clemenceau had gone over Pershing's head directly to the President, via the French ambassador. This pressure was resumed by Clemenceau 10 days later.

"As the French were dead set on getting our troops under their control," Pershing said, "it is very clear that the prime minister, feeling that their plans were not working out, sought to create some question in the minds of our administration at Washington regarding the wisdom of my management of things."

Along in March, 1918, Secretary Baker was in Paris. Pershing's memoirs say:

"The presence of the secretary of war fortunately afforded me the opportunity to discuss with him the general attitude of our allies regarding the manner in which Americans should be employed. A joint note from the supreme war council was presented to Secretary Baker and I pointed out to him that the proposal, if approved by the President, would place the disposition of American units entirely in the hands of the supreme war council and take them out of our control, even for training, and would destroy all possibility of our forming an American army.

"Mr. Baker cabled the President explicitly recommending that control of our forces be retained by our commander in chief."

* * *

In April, 1918, Pershing wrote to Baker:

"I notice that one of the British papers, in referring to the fact that plans had been made to send American troops to the assistance of the allies, stated that this would relieve the British of the necessity of depleting the strength of the forces kept at home for defensive purposes.

"This suggests to my mind a certain political phase of the British situation which may give us additional explanation as to why Mr. Lloyd George and British representatives are so urgent in their appeals for assistance from America. The train of thought leads me to conceive the existence of a condition that may be fraught with danger to the cause, in that it indicates a serious lack of coöperation between the civil and military authorities of Great Britain, as was also indicated to you in some of the things I repeated to you yesterday. . . .

"May I suggest that you give the matter serious thought. There is so much at stake for us that it seems to me that very frank representations should be made to the British government as to the urgency of their putting into the army every possible man that can be mustered to meet the immediate emergency. It need not be pointed out that there is a limit to the rapidity with which our troops can be brought over, and there seems to me to be a very real danger of the British political world allowing itself to be lulled into inaction upon the theory that the Americans are in a position to meet all possible contingencies that may arrive."

Clemenceau was urgent in May, 1918.

"What is important for the morale of our soldiers," he said, "is not to tell them that the American soldiers are arriving, but to show them that they have arrived." In other words, Pershing remarked, the premier wanted smaller American units to be put in French divisions.

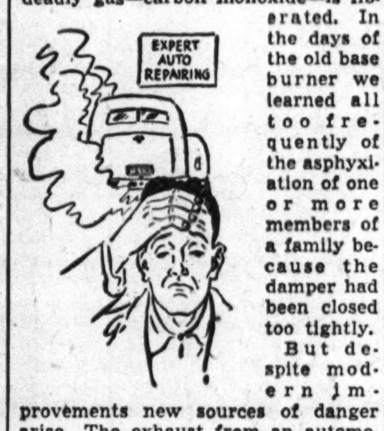
LEAKY FLUES AND MONOXIDE POISONING.



NOW is the time to look carefully to the condition of the flues of our furnaces, stoves, and hot water heaters. When combustion [burning] is incomplete a deadly gas—carbon monoxide—is liberated. In the days of the old base burner we learned all too frequently of the asphyxiation of one or more members of a family because the damper had been closed too tightly. But despite modern improvements new sources of danger arise. The exhaust from an automobile contains about 7 per cent. This emphasizes the risk of operating a car within a closed space. The ignition must be turned off before the garage doors are fastened.

Public repair shops may neglect ventilation. A substantial number of serious mishaps are reported each year among workmen due to the inhalation of a low percentage of this noxious material over a long period of time. A leaking exhaust pipe or a poorly connected heater may fill a car with enough fumes to bring on drowsiness and then unconsciousness.

Now, the human body cannot endure a concentration of even 100 parts of carbon monoxide per million parts of air—that is, over several hours. If the proportion rises to 500 per million, trouble will ensue within an hour. Instances have been reported in which the snugly shut cab of a truck showed 1,500 parts per million. In one case the driver, realizing that something was wrong, managed to open the door and drop to the side of the road. Fortunately a passing motorist stopped, picked him up, and rushed him to a nearby hospital. With appropriate treatment life was saved.

What are the symptoms? Headache that comes on daily and that persists is an early sign. Then follow general weakness, pain in the legs, arms, and back, numbness, trembling, and shortness of breath. Extreme dryness of the throat and insomnia may be complained of. But drowsiness may appear at almost any stage, depending upon how much of the gas has entered the blood. In fact, it may be impossible for a motorist, for example, to open the door and escape if he allows what he thinks is "sleepiness" to go too far. With the advent of collapse there is little help for the victim unless his dilemma is discovered or his car runs off the road and stops.

But there is such a thing as slow, chronic poisoning. Here digestive disturbances, dizziness, and marked fatigue should be investigated by those who are exposed because of the nature of their work. There need be no question as to the cause because a sample of air, taken at different times of the day and at various localities within the plant, can be analyzed accurately and the proportion determined. Furthermore, a specimen of the patient's blood will show the exact ratio of the poison.

We are interested primarily in prevention, as no one relishes the thought that either the atmosphere at home or in the factory can constitute a health menace. We must realize that whenever any type of fuel is burned this substance is produced. But the construction of the equipment can be such that if the heat is not great enough to insure proper burning the flue will be adequate to carry all poisonous effluvia out of doors. This means that the chimney must be free—not clogged with loose bricks—and that the connections between the furnace and the flue are satisfactory.

If asphyxiation has occurred breathing must be maintained with artificial respiration. Naturally, the patient should be kept warm and be placed at absolute rest. Walking him about is just the wrong thing to do because it may hasten coma. Hospitals everywhere are provided with first aid devices which can be set into operation quickly—including apparatus for artificial resuscitation.

The introvert, however, tends to live within himself, somewhat hermit fashion, and dream. He usually works with things which don't talk back, or which cannot move out of place in his absence. Sometimes it is well to alter one's personality and become more interested in people. You can do this by developing extrovertive hobbies. You deserve one point for each correct judgment below in distinguishing between introvertive versus extrovertive hobbies.

A SOLDIER TO HIS DAD.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—A soldier son of a well known Illinoisan writes home from camp, saying:

"Dear Dad: All the fellows lie around here writing letters, sort of a suspended life. Considering the uncertainty of the goal that the politicians set I think the morale is fine. Every one regrets all that they have given up and they don't know just exactly why they are sacrificing it. If the doubt could be destroyed the fellows wouldn't feel so badly. The saddest cases of all are those fellows who were all ready to get married and then got drafted.

"Of course our lot could be worse. One sergeant told me that two of his friends are in the artillery and all they do is to set their gun in place and then waste time until it is time to dismantle it; they repeat this same process day after day. All the armies in the world are furnished equipment with our money excepting our own.

"With intensive training I could have learned in two weeks anything I have absorbed so far. There is a severe class distinction between officers and privates, but every private is the same; all are equal; the dumb boy who never went to high school and the college graduate. Our company commander was a bus driver in civilian life but now is in charge of 250 men. The army is the great leveler. All types from the divinity student to a Dead-End Kid from Chicago; from tavern keepers to executives. The army is the school of life, a cross-section of America. Just a bunch of good Joes who want to live and let live.

"Democracy has given way to complete regimentation. You come to realize the benefits of being a civilian and of having the cherished right of freedom of thought and movements. I thought economic slavery was an evil, but in comparison with this it is freedom of the highest nature.

"We have an invitation for a home Thanksgiving dinner. I have $2 now but would need more than that to go. You said not to be foolish but to let you know if I were really broke; I assure you it is impossible to be foolish on $21 a month. Try and buy essentials, like razor blades, four haircuts a month, insurance, movies, transportation, candy bars, etc., on this pittance and see how long it lasts.

"Twenty-four years old and I have to hitch-hike and ask you for money. Love from YOUR SON."

PROFIT IN FARMING.

Mendota, Ill., Nov. 24.—I want to answer P. M. M., who wrote to you about farming. I was raised on a farm near Mendota—owned, rented, and looked after land for other people for the last 40 years. I have had several farms that have paid better than 5 per cent above taxes for the last five years and some farms that paid 6 to 7 per cent last year and will pay better this year.

We have renters here who know how to farm and have the machinery to farm with. We can get the best of tenants; have renters on the list for one year ahead for farms.

The farmers are in the best position today with the government behind them, putting prices on the grains and paying the farmers for idle land. Corn and soy beans have doubled in price in one year and all live stock is higher, grains higher; also milk, butter, and eggs are highest for 12 to 15 years at this time of year.

Good, well improved Illinois corn land at $150-$175 an acre is the safes. investment and will pay good interest with a good tenant on share rental. J. A. E.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—During the last week I asked 10 different persons, at random, if they could tell me just how much money would constitute the equivalent of one billion dollars, and I was amazed to learn that only one person out of the 10 gave the correct answer—one thousand million dollars. Most of the others guessed it to be one hundred million, and one other person said he could tell better if he saw the figures in print.

I believe the grandchildren of our citizens who are born 100 years hence will not live long enough to see the debts voted by our present congress liquidated, despite a terrific load of income and other taxes. This situation, with a definite prospect of still more spending, is a challenge to the stability of our currency and a threat to the permanence of our democracy.

ONE OF THE OLD FOLKS.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—Is there no place in this man's town where lonely old people can find a bit of life without dressing to kill? which they haven't got—the clothes—and if they did have they couldn't use them anyway.

The shows cut their pictures to pieces to gather in all the shekels they can on the holiday. We are not hungry or starving. But just have nobody to go to and no place to go.

IN CHICAGO 75 YEARS.

ABOUT AIR LINE PILOTS.

Chicago, Nov. 24.—I want to challenge Mr. ¼ Million Mile Flyer who says he has quit flying because the best American pilots have gone into ferry service, flying American planes to England and because good mechanics are making and repairing planes for England which means that the American public must continue to use old equipment.

For your information, 17 first officers, or co-pilots, have joined the military service and not one captain of American Airlines has gone with the military service. The reason we have not lost captains is that all air lines of the United States are in what is known as a transport pool. The government will draw men from this pool when they are wanted, but so far they have been most successful in their training program and have not needed commercial pilots. Last year and this year American Airlines lost 20 officers out of 475 to the army, navy, and marine corps and has lost eight maintenance or repair men out of 800.

The aircraft of all the air lines in the country are under constant overhaul which keeps all transports 100 per cent standard at each overhaul. EDWARD G. BERN.

A HOLIDAY "LIFT."

Cedar Rapids, Ia., Nov. 24.—With Christmas leaves filling the highways with soldier hitch-hikers, why couldn't the commanders instruct them to travel singly and attach to their persons placards showing their destination in large letters? A timid motorist, or the boldest with his family along, wouldn't care to stop to inquire of a group of soldier hitch-hikers who would like a ride along his way. Any motorist would carry a lone soldier a great many miles if the placard showed the soldier was going in the right direction and to a certain destination.

I believe my plan would create a better Christmas spirit among the soldiers and the civilian motorists and heighten the morale of the soldiers on the road and at camp. DAY V. ELLSWORTH.

LAND PURCHASE.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—When buying 10 acres of unimproved [vacant] timbered land in Indiana on contract, with 10 per cent cash down payment and small cash monthly payments at 6 per cent interest per year [1] what papers should purchaser receive immediately upon signing contract?

2. Seller offers deed but abstract will cost the purchaser an additional fee of $15.

3. Do you advise an abstract or will a deed suffice?

4. When does purchaser receive deed, upon signing contract or when the land is paid for in full?

5. If purchaser pays for the abstract, is the abstract held by the purchaser?

6. Should the land be surveyed and if so about what would it cost?

7. Who pays this fee, buyer or seller?

8. How can purchaser find out about an FHA loan to build a home on this property? B. M.

1. This is a matter for negotiation. The purchaser might stipulate for immediate deed or he might more probably have only the contract until he had paid in about half of the purchase price.

2. If the contract has already been signed your rights depend largely on its wording.

3. When you come to sell, a purchaser will probably insist on an abstract or some other evidence of title.

4. Depends on the wording of the contract.

5. Yes. Unless the contract provides otherwise.

6. Depends upon whether the surrounding circumstances are such as to suggest possible disputes as to the boundaries.

7. Depends on the contract.

8. Take the matter up with a local bank. It is nearly always advisable for a purchaser of real estate to employ an attorney thruout, and we advise you to employ one now. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

LIABILITY INSURANCE.

Chicago, Nov. 19.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—I understand that insurance companies handling automobile liability insurance are resorting to the so-called "dram shop law" wherever possible in placing the responsibility upon home owners. It is difficult to understand that a guest leaving a private home after imbibing too much and apprehended after an automobile accident under the dram shop act, places the blame upon his host thru court proceedings instituted by attorneys for the automobile insurance companies.

1. Where the alcoholic influence was not acquired thru the process of sale, [2] it is inconceivable that the average home owner must resort to protection under the circumstances.

3. Should the average home owner take out insurance to cover instances along the foregoing lines? R. S. W.

1. The act makes no such distinction. Illinois Revised Statutes, Chap. 43, Sec. 135, puts the liability on persons "who shall by selling or giving alcoholic liquor have caused the intoxication."

2. On the contrary we would say that it is not only conceivable but wholesome that the host should be subjected to some pressure to see that a guest who is to drive home does not become intoxicated.

3. No, in the sense that he has the much more reasonable alternative of cutting off the supply at a safe point.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

TERMS OF WILL.

Cicero, Ill., Nov. 18.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—On Sept. 13, 1935, a will was read which was made by my mother two years before she passed away. Everybody was satisfied and signed the necessary papers and the estate was to be probated.

1. My youngest brother was appointed administrator. Neither he nor the brother to whom most of it was willed appeared at the hearing and from what I think [2] it was left just that way.

3. I do not hear from the administrator.

4. I have a chance to sell the estate and am willing to do what was specified in the will. It was made in Missouri as that is where the estate is located. I was present at reading of will.

5. I would like to know what can be done. B. K.

1. Ordinarily a will would name an executor so that there would be no need to appoint an administrator.

2. We do not understand what you mean at this point.

3. In general the personal representative is required to account to the court but not to the individual beneficiaries.

4. You state no facts to indicate that it is your job to sell.

5. What do you wish to do? It is not clear what legal questions you intend to raise. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

A STRANGE TALE OF A BOY SLAYER 18 YEARS LATER

It Couldn't Happen Here —But It Did.

Richard Putz of 5245 South New England avenue shot and killed a man in 1920. It was an unusually motiveless sort of murder. The victim was a haberdashery clerk who refused to sell Putz [then 16 years old] a pair of 30 cent socks for a dime.

At his trial expert evidence was introduced to show that Putz was a moron. One of the experts was Dr. William J. Hickson, head of the municipal psychopathic bureau.

Putz, who was known as "The Yuma Kid," confessed the killing and added that he had taken the socks and left the dime on the counter.

Taught by Father.

"My old man's been in lots of jails and asylums," the young man said. "He's in an asylum now. He taught me to steal."

A jury in Criminal court held that Putz wasn't as crazy as he seemed and convicted him. His sentence was 14 years in prison. He was released in 1928.

Sergt. Edward McBride of the Cragin police arrested Putz on Friday on the relatively light charge of driving a truck with a passenger car license.

Admits His Identity.

The police went thru their routine. They took the prisoner's finger prints, which proved he was the former convict Putz [he had given the name Angelo De Milio]. He admitted his identity. He also displayed a card which showed that he had served honorably as a member of the grand jury under the name of De Milio in March, 1938.

"Nobody asked me if I was one," retorted Putz. "What's wrong with it, anyhow? Some grand jurors indicted me and turn about is fair play."

Watchman in Refrigerator Finds Day on Chilly Side

Chicagoans enjoyed a relatively balmy day yesterday. That is, all but Edward Foster. Foster, 30 years old, a night watchman for the Columbia Packing company, 3170 South Ashland avenue, accidentally locked himself in the plant's sausage refrigerator. His cries for help were heard by passersby who notified Brighton Park police. An hour later Foster was freed.

ALLMAN DROPS MORALS SQUAD AS JURY URGED

New Gambling Inquiry Opens Tomororw.

Wilbert F. Crowley.

Acting on the recommendation of the November grand jury, which scathingly denounced police and conditions that permit gambling to flourish, Commissioner Allman last evening abolished the morals [gambling] squad and sent its members to other posts.

Allman acted a few hours after Wilbert F. Crowley, first assistant state's attorney, announced that the December grand jury, which will be sworn in tomorrow, will launch an investigation of individual communities and districts in the county where gambling has been reported. State's Attorney Courtney will return from the south to instruct the new panel.

Captains Transferred.

The order abolishing the morals division transferred its commander, Capt. Martin McCormick to the Gresham district, displacing Acting Capt. William Doyle. It also sent Capt. John I. Howe, who has been working out of the commissioner's office, to command the Warren avenue district, displacing Acting Capt. Walter McGloon. Doyle and McGloom were assigned to their present stations as lieutenants.

Two sergeants and 13 men of the morals division will be distributed among other stations. Three men of the division were assigned to the detective bureau. Meanwhile, all was in readiness for renewal of the grand jury investigation.

"The November grand jury found that gambling and bribery are widespread in Chicago and Cook county," Crowley said. "It did the preliminary work and set the stage for the new grand jury, whose first work will be to center the inquiry upon individual communities and districts. In these the syndicate's agents will be run to earth and its deals with officials brought to light."

Interest Centers in Three Towns.

Crowley declined to say what communities will be first on the list, but it was recalled that the November grand jury was much concerned by conditions in Cicero, stronghold of the old Capone gang, Chicago Heights, and Lincolnwood.

The inquiry will entail questioning of mayors, trustees, and police of the towns that come to the jury's attention, it was understood.

The first two days of the session will be occupied in acquainting the new panel with the work of the old, Crowley said.

He will first present the secret records and ledger sheets of the Guzik-Nitti syndicate which were published by THE TRIBUNE in October and which launched the investigation, Crowley indicted. The panel probably will begin hearing witnesses Wednesday.

The ledger sheets reproduced in THE TRIBUNE showed that in July of this year the syndicate, headed by Jack Guzik and Frank Nitti—old Capone henchmen—was paying bribes of about $300,000 a year to police and officials and was showing a profit at the rate of about $2,500,000 a year.

Mayor Kelly, who returned yesterday from Washington, was told of the jury's supplemental report, which stated gambling cannot flourish without official protection. He said:

"We are going to make every effort to clean up the situation and to keep it clean."

PAYS GAMBLING FINES WHEN NEW PLEA IS REJECTED

After a stormy habeas corpus hearing in the Criminal court yesterday, Royal Chapman, 43 years old, 4636 South Michigan avenue, paid $216 in fines and costs which had been assessed against him Friday by Judge Oscar S. Caplan in the South State street court on two charges of gambling. Chapman's plea for freedom was opposed by three assistant state's attorneys before Judge John F. Haas in the Criminal court.

His attorney, George M. Crane, charged Chapman's trial had been a farce and that bail of $2,000 set by Judge Caplan was excessive. Judge Haas, however, continued the hearing to tomorrow and ordered Chapman back to the Bridewell, where he was serving out the fines.

Chapman paid off upon being returned to the Bridewell.

HOOLIGAN AND BINGO GAMES BANNED IN LOOP TAVERNS BY POLICE

Loop taverans last night felt the backlash of the drive against syndicate gambling as Capt. Thomas Duffy of the Central police ordered his men to banish the dice games—hooligan and bingo—which are played on the 26 board; to keep all undesirable characters out of taverns and to see to it that all taverns close on time. Capt. Duffy emphasized that his order was directed to all his men.

He made it clear that delay or carelessness in enforcing the order would bring about consequences most unpleasant. So the captain's phone rang and rang all evening long. His men were calling in every 20 minutes to report:

"No violations in my beat, captain. . . . All is just as you would have it in my territory . . ."

HEAD AND TORSO OF MAN FOUND ON FOREST PYRE

Clews to Identity Are Lost in Flames.

The head and torso of a man, burned beyond recognition, were found in a remote part of Schiller woods in the forest preserve near River Grove yesterday. Coroner A. L. Brodie, who went to the scene, said the victim, apparently had been murdered.

Two Chicago boys, Roger Nielo, 10 years old, 2433 Fletcher street, and Kenneth Zak, 11, 2443 Belmont avenue, came upon the body when hiking thru the woods near Irving Park road and the Des Plaines river.

Leg Bones Missing.

The corpse lay across a pile of burned logs, the head a few feet from the torso. Altho arm and hand bones were found in the ashes, no leg bones were there.

Coroner Brodie said the unusual position of the head and the absence of legs supported his murder theory. He said he believed the corpse was carried from the winding roadway deep into the woods where it was placed on the pyre.

The only possible clews to the victim's identity were the teeth, bits of a dark blue overcoat found beneath the torso, and part of a shoe.

Seeks Expert Examination.

Brodie said he could not determine how long the body had been there. Joseph Komendanchik, Schiller woods caretaker, told him that he noticed the pile of logs last Monday, but did not investigate.

The coroner said he would ask Prof. Wilton M. Krogman, anthropologist at the University of Chicago, to examine the body and try to determine its weight and size. The body was taken to the county morgue.

Since the body was found on forest preserve property, Rangers John Byrne and George Hatch are in charge of the investigation.

POLICE HOLD TORRIO FOR SHOWUP; FREES SELF BY POSTING BAIL

Johnny Torrio.

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Johnny Torrio, erstwhile Chicago gangster and ex-convict, arrested on a Brooklyn street last night and charged with vagrancy, said in a police lineup today that he is a real estate broker with property in Honolulu, Florida, Maryland, and Brooklyn.

Despite this claim of affluence, which would negate the police charge that he has no means of support—his wife several years ago bailed him out of jail with $104,000 in cash—Police Capt. Michael Ledden told Torrio:

"You would better stay out of this state; you'd better go to Honolulu, Florida, or Maryland and start selling that property. You're not wanted here."

After about two minutes in the lineup in Manhattan, Torrio was taken back to Brooklyn for arraignment. Thru Attorney Joseph A. McKinney he pleaded innocent in Magistrate James A. Blanchfield's court and was released in $1,000 bail for further hearing next Friday.

The former racketeer, reputed to have taught Al Capone the bootlegging business and all that went with it, had $15 in his pocket when picked up in Brooklyn. Police say he is worth at least $1,000,000 in cash and Brooklyn real estate.

ART INSTITUTE'S TREASURES: THE PAST THEY BARE

Each Painting Tells Bit of Mankind's Story.

sented itself. More often than not, he got what he set out to get. Four galleries of paintings represent part of his acquisitions.

Beginning with gallery 43, the exhibits on the institute's second floor are arranged in chronological order. The sketchiest journey would start some seven centuries ago, when the Tuscan church painters, strongly influenced by Byzantine art, painted in tempera, using the white of an egg to bind their colors.

The 15th century brings Gentile Bellini, the Venetian, with the thinly painted canvas of "Two Orientals"—turbaned heads and the wise, sardonic faces of the east. Bellini had gone to Constantinople as court painter to Mahomet II., and he found models at every hand. There is a story that he wanted to paint a man whose head had been cut off, but could not visualize a decapitated subject. The sultan clapped his hands, indicated a slave, and showed Bellini not only the result but the process. Bellini stayed at court only a year.

A Caravaggio Disciple.

Across the room is the large canvas, "Resurrection," painted by a member of the Caravaggio school, dramatic in lighting and almost tangible in tactile sensation. Caravaggio's preoccupation with light is said to have been so extreme that he boarded up the windows of his studio so that light could be let in upon his subjects only from above.

In gallery 46, German art of the 16th century, the "Crucifixion" of Lucas Cranach the Elder is an example of how the early painters consciously and without apology indulged in anachronisms. The episode is of the life of Jesus; the figures that crowd the canvas are Cranach's friends and neighbors.

In the same gallery is Albrecht Altdorfer's "Nativity," unconsciously comic despite the reverent theme. The Virgin is a stout hausfrau, the angels have the faces of little old men, a cow peering at the newborn babe is a cow that Disney might envy, and a mean looking donkey embodying a donkey's recognition of the importance of the occasion looks as if he is about to burst into oracular utterance.

The First Surrealist.

Farther along is the "Garden of Paradise," in which the Dutchman, Hieronymous Bosch, father of surrealism, manages to portray Adam and Eve in the creation, during the temptation, and at the time of the expulsion, as three sets of figures all in the same canvas. The serpent who tempts Eve is a man from the waist up, and he is picking apples at a great rate, handing Eve one while he reaches up with the other hand to pluck another. Evidently one wasn't enough.

In the Spanish gallery at the head of the stairs is a testimonial to the institute's luck in having collectors in the right place at the right time. It is a large altar painting on wood, a product of the school of Navarre, given in 1396 by a Spanish nobleman to the Dominican nunnery at Quejana. If Charles Deering hadn't had a villa outside of Barcelona and if he had not become interested in collecting Spanish art, the institute would not now have this fine altar piece.

Six Goya Panels Shown.

In this gallery is Goya's dramatic series of six panels, "The Capture of the Bandit Margato by the Monk Pedro de Zalvidia." Fray Pedro, a poor monk, disarmed, shot and captured Margato after the bandit had robbed the purser of his monastery. He became celebrated thruout Spain. The king fixed an annual income on him. His exploit was the subject of popular ballads. Goya, in portraying the story, is a forerunner in use of the technique of the motion picture.

In the gallery of 20th century Americana is Doris Lee's "Thanksgiving," which won the Logan medal in the 1935 exhibition over Mrs. Frank G. Logan's complaint that it was "atrocious." Apparently institute visitors do not share Mrs. Logan's abhorrence of modernism. "Thanksgiving" has had the biggest post card sale of any reproduction offered at the institute desk. Grant Wood's "American Gothic" in the same gallery has had the second largest sale.

Popularity Is Unpredictable.

Popularity in paintings is unpredictable. In 1936 Jules Breton's "Song of the Lark" was put in storage by the institute because it was considered "sentimental and sweet." But at the Century of Progress exhibition of the world's great paintings "Song of the Lark" had won a popular vote as favorite picture. It was resurrected and now hangs in gallery 38.

Nothing would be easier than to continue endlessly listing the paintings in the institute's great collection, but there are many other beautiful exhibits. There are some quaint ones, too, as witness an 18th century Dutch warming pan of pewter, the great grandfather of the rubber hot water bottle; or a combination reading lamp and magnifying glass; or a 17th century German time lamp, something like an hourglass, but registering not by sand but as the oil burned low. Maybe the expression "burning the midnight oil" came from such time lamps.

An Idea for Wine Tipplers.

Nowadays some caterers make a specialty of delivering complete meals, hot from the oven. That was anticipated by the 17th century south Germans, with a pewter food can in graduated sections which were stacked one upon the other but could be carried as a single vessel.

Then there is a glazed pottery book-bottle, artful enough to deceive the minister if he called, with its binding aptly labeled, "Departed Spirits." There are two pottery pipes simulating coiled snakes. After seven winding circuits, such a pipe must have provided a cool smoke.

There are priceless exhibits of Wedgwood china. Some of them, designed by the artist, John Flaxman, duplicate the classic ware dug up at Pompeii and Herculaneum. There is also a chess set in china with the models of ancient Rome again providing Flaxman his inspiration.

There is some 10,000 linear feet of wall space in the institute and 420,000 square feet of floor space, so perhaps the reader may understand why this tour has not yet brought him to many of the greatest treasures of the collections.

Big Fire Reported Sweeping Turkish Port of Smyrna

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—The Vichy radio reported today that a violent fire is raging in the harbor of Smyrna [Izmir], big port on the Aegean coast of Turkey. The broadcast, heard here, said the cause of the fire had not been determined.

FIVE CIVIL WAR VETS GATHER AT ANNUAL DINNER

The dwindling ranks of men who fought on the side of the north in the Civil war and of sons of Union veterans held their annual father and sons dinner last night in the Hotel Sherman.

Only five union veterans out of the estimated 40 still surviving in Cook county chapter were able to attend. They were Capt. Thomas Ambrose, 93 years old, 4358 Drexel boulevard, present commander of the Memorial Association of Cook county; Albert E. Gage, 95, of the La Salle hotel; William Lockwood, 95, of 4457 Magnolia avenue; James Lewis, 101, colored, of 5401 South Wabash avenue; and James Harvey, 96, colored, of Rollins, in Lake county, formerly of Chicago.

The members of the Grand Army of the Republic, Cook county chapter, and the Gen. George A. Custer Camp No. 6, Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil war, had a great time swapping tales of the battles that happened nearly 80 years ago. Last year 22 Civil war veterans attended, the year before 36, and prior to that there was usually 100 or more.

VICTIM OF IOWA 'BEARDED BRIDE' HOAX PROTESTS

Portage, Wis., Nov. 29 [Special].—Back from Mount Etna, Ia., where he caused the arrest of Justain Butman, a bearded man of 42, on charges of posing as one Justine Butman, "a pure and kind hearted working girl" in search of a husband thru mail order channels, David J. Jones today told of his experiences and corrected what he said were errors in the story published in newspapers.

To begin with, he said, "I never gave or sent any money to Justain Butman. Nor did I go up there with the intention of marrying while there and bringing her back with me, as you know as well as I that there are legal things to be done before marrying, and that takes at least 20 days."

He also was misrepresented, he said, as "not lacking in trust."

"That is wrong," he said. "I won't trust any one till I personally know they are to be trusted."

He also denied he went to the house where his supposed bride-to-be lived. He merely went to Mount Etna and federal authorities did the rest—which included filing a charge against Butman of using the mails to defraud.

PLANT LONG SHUT BY STRIKE LOSES ARMS CONTRACTS

Business Half Century Old Faces Dissolution.

R. F. Lammert, president of the Lammert & Mann company of Chicago, yesterday saw the manufacturing business established half a century ago by his father approaching possible dissolution because of a strike called by the AFL Machinists' union.

Lammert's company, at 221 North Wood street, was busy turning out parts for gun sights and other armament material when the strike was ordered 30 days ago by the union to enforce its demand for recognition as sole bargaining agent for the employés.

Yesterday trucks were hauling unfinished armament parts from the Lammert & Mann company at the order of the war department, which has directed that the Lammert contracts be turned over to other plants because of the strike.

Loses 90 Pct. of Business.

"This means that probably 20 of my 30 employés will be without jobs if and when the strike ends," Lammert said last night. "The defense contracts made up 90 per cent of our business, and without them our activities will have to be curtailed drastically, if not ended entirely.

"The war department could not afford to wait on us any longer, I suppose," Lammert said. "Already assembly lines at plants using the parts we made were slowed up because our production had stopped."

The work his company was doing was turned over to the Pettibone Mulliken corporation, at 4710 Division street, and the Bendix corporation at South Bend, Ind., Lammert said. These companies will turn out the parts or sublet the contracts in turn.

Says Union Fears Free Election.

"Our negotiations with the union broke down over the question of sole bargaining rights," Lammert explained. "The union refused to agree to allow the workers to hold an election to determine whether they wanted the union to represent them unless such an election were held before they returned to work.

"Obviously, the union fears that my workers would vote against it if given a chance to express themselves after they had returned to their jobs and were freed of union surveillance."

James Sinclair, AFL business agent in charge of the strike, said that 95 per cent of the Lammert employés have joined the union. He argued that if the election should be held after they returned to work the company then would have the opportunity to influence the vote.

"We're not standing in the way of defense," Sinclair said. "The army ordnance department asked our permission for union trucks to take materials out of this struck shop. We gave our OK to go thru the picket lines."

U. S. AGENTS RAID 200 GALLON STILL AND ARREST TWO

Vincent Heinz, 28 years old, and Steve Rubino, 30, were arrested yesterday by agents of the federal alcohol tax unit. They were charged with possessing and manufacturing untaxed alcohol after the agents raided a 200 gallon still in Heinz's home on Skokie road near Simpson street, Skokie.

Heinz is a cousin of Theodore Heinz, chief of police in Skokie, who recently testified before the grand jury investigating gambling in Cook county. Chief Heinz said he knew nothing of the activities of his cousin.

United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker continued the case against the two men until Tuesday and released them on bond. Rubino lives at 3039 Lexington avenue and operates a gasoline station at Waukegan road and Dempster street, Morton Grove.

Thomas and Ald. Douglas to Debate Foreign Policy

Norman Thomas, Socialist party leader, and Ald. Paul Douglas, economist, will debate the question, "Is the American Foreign Policy Correct?" at a Town Hall meeting of Adolf Kraus lodge, B'nai B'rith, in the Covenant club, at 8 p. m. Wednesday. Thomas will argue the negative side, and Douglas the affirmative.

Judge Jarecki's Daughter Wed

Plan Southern Trip

Miss Marie Jarecki, daughter of County Judge Edmund K. Jarecki, was married yesterday at noon to Dr. Walter W. Fischer, a New York physician, in a quiet ceremony in the Jarecki home at 1946 Armitage avenue. A reception followed at the Drake hotel. Dr. Fischer and his bride will make a wedding trip thru the south and will live in New York.

'LADY MUSHER' FROM ALASKA VISITS CHICAGO

Miss Mary Joyce, diminutive former Chicagoan who dropped a nursing career a dozen years ago to become Alaska's most famous "lady musher," arrived in the city yesterday for a brief vacation before she settles down to her winter job as stewardess for Northwest Airlines.

From May to November Miss Joyce is the operator of Taku lodge, a summer resort and hunting and fishing camp on the Taku river, 42 miles north of Juneau. Last year, however, she gave up spending her winters in the snowbound lodge for the more exciting job of air line hostess of the Seattle-Billings run.

To the uninitiated, Miss Joyce explains that a "lady musher" is Alaskan for a woman dog team driver. She should know. In the winter of 1936 she drove a five dog team 1,000 miles, from Juneau to Fairbanks, "just to see if a woman could do it."

When Miss Joyce was graduated from Chicago's Mercy hospital in 1927 she looked forward to a long, if not too exciting, career as a nurse. But that career ended almost before it got well started.

"I went to work in California, and one of my first jobs necessitated a trip to Alaska," she explained. "I didn't return. Before very long I found myself with Taku lodge."

Here's To Women Drivers ... God Bless 'Em!

Over at our place we get along just fine with women drivers . . . and while I'm at it I want to say I know a'plenty of them who can handle a car like nobody's business.

But I started out to say . . . we get along fine with women folks. They seem to appreciate that a motor car is something beautiful... and should be taken care of that way... with pride and gentle skill.

Lots of 'em come in or call us about some little thing a man wouldn't bother about . . . 'til it got big. We like that . . . and oftener than not one of our boys can fix it quick as a wink—at hardly any cost.

There's one lady we're particularly fond of . . . brings her car in a couple of times a week. She's the one who could never back into a parking space . . . until one of us sat with her and showed her just how easy it is to do.

Maybe it's 'cause they use our place that we specially like 'em. That's what it's for—for you to use.

[ADVERTISMENT]
Kidney Strain May Cause Swollen Ankles and Backache

If you're feeling out o'sorts, Get Up Nights or suffer from Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes and feel worn-out, the cause may be non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. Worry, Colds, working too hard, or over-eating or drinking may create an excess of Acids and overload your Kidneys so that they need help to flush out poisonous wastes that might otherwise undermine your health.

Help Kidneys Remove Acids

Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters through which the heart pumps blood about 200 times an hour, night and day, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down when overloaded.
Fourteen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three simple ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages, and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, which may easily make you feel years younger.

Money Back Guarantee

Usually, in non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder disorders they very first dose of Cystex goes right to work helping the Kidneys flush out excess Acids, poisons and wastes. And this cleansing, purifying Kidney action, in just a day or so, may easily make you feel younger, stronger and better than in years. A printed guarantee with each package of Cystex insures an immediate refund of all your money unless you are completely satisfied. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose, under this positive money back guarantee. Don't take chances on any Kidney medicine that isn't guaranteed. Get Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c. The guarantee protects you.

FEW DAYS LEFT TO GET SMOKES OFF TO YANKS

Gifts Will Go to Ships and Distant Bases.

"Smokes for Yanks!"

They're coming in, promising smoke dreams for the American boys on the Atlantic and in the bases from Iceland to the Caribbean. But those boys are far away. There are only a few days remaining to give, if you want your gifts of cigarets or tobacco loaded on a boat in time to reach them for Christmas.

So don't delay—if you want to send Christmas cheer to the soldiers and sailors.

One of the most generous "Smokes for Yanks!" gifts came yesterday from Morris B. Sachs and the employés of the Morris B. Sachs clothing store at 6638 South Halsted street.

Insure Christmas Gifts.

The Sachs contributors heaped cigarets into "Smokes for Yanks!" boxes and hurried them to Tribune Tower to insure that they would reach the boys by Christmas.

Last night was "Smokes for Yanks!" night in the Continental room of the Stevens hotel. Del Courtney and his orchestra introduced a new song, "Smokes for Yanks!" over W-G-N. Words and music for the song were written by Dr. George A. Rose. Bud Jacobsen made the arrangements for the orchestra and Del Courtney adapted it for his band.

Girls coöperating with the Auxiliary Service Men's Center at 5111 Calumet avenue collected "Smokes for Yanks!" yesterday in the Regal theater, 4719 South Parkway. Arrangements were in charge of Miss Mildred Davis, director of the center.

Seek Smokes at Dinner.

"Smokes for Yanks!" gifts will be sought tonight at a dinner in the grand ballroom of the Stevens hotel, where Miss Genevieve Cacciatore, recently admitted to the bar after her graduation from the De Paul university law school, will be the guest of honor. Judge John J. Lupe will be honorary chairman and V. B. Cuttone, toastmaster. Guests will include Dean William F. Clarke of the De Paul law school and many lawyers and judges.

If you have a collection box that is nearly filled, please telephone the "Smokes for Yanks!" department at THE TRIBUNE, Superior 0100. A circulation truck driver will call for it. Collectors carry identification cards.

Many cigarets, many cigars are needed to insure a merry Christmas for the gallant boys of the armed forces. The gifts must be placed aboard transports for delivery to the soldiers and sailors.

Send Checks To Tribune.

Checks should be sent to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., Tribune Tower, Chicago. Cash and gifts of cigarets, cigars, and tobacco may be brought to THE TRIBUNE public service bureaus in Tribune Tower or in the loop at 1 South Dearborn street.

There are 1,420 cigaret and cigar collection boxes in stores and offices thruout Chicagoland. You may leave gifts in them.

But hurry!

THREE CANADIAN PATROL PLANES STOP IN CHICAGO

Three large Stranraer flying boats of the Royal Canadian air force which soon will be patroling Canada's western coastline, drew thousands of persons to the lake front yesterday.

On their way to the RCAF base at Vancouver, B. C., the planes landed at noon at the foot of Monroe street. The three officers and 12 men, commanded by Flight Lieut. Arthur Fleming, spent the night in Chicago and planned to take off early this morning for a Gulf of Mexico port.

They will then proceed to San Diego, Cal., and up the Pacific coast to Vancouver. The route across the United States was chosen, an officer said, because many of the Canadian lakes already are ice locked.

W. G. M'CORMICK, RETIRED CHICAGO BANKER, IS DEAD

First of Family to Be Born in City.

William G. McCormick, retired banker and a member of the farm machinery manufacturing family, died yesterday on his estate near Wheaton. He was 90 years old.

William G. McCormick.

Mr. McCormick was a son of the late William S. McCormick, who came to Chicago from Virginia in 1850 and was associated with Cyrus H. McCormick and Leander J. McCormick, his brothers, in the McCormick business.

Mr. McCormick was born June 3, 1851, the first member of the McCormick family to be born in Chicago. He was a brother of the late Robert S. McCormick, father of Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Founder of Fraternity.

Mr. McCormick attended the University of Virginia, where he founded the Kappa Sigma fraternity in 1869. This is now one of the largest college fraternities in the country, and Mr. McCormick was the last surviving charter initiate. The chapter house at the university in Charlottesville, Va., known as McCormick hall, was in part given by him.

In 1873 he married Eleanor Brooks of Baltimore, Md., who preceded him in death. He is survived by four daughters, Mrs. F. Louis Slade and Mrs. Herbert S. Stone of New York; Mrs. Marshal Fabyan and Mrs. Valentine Hollingsworth of Boston, and a son, Chauncey McCormick of Chicago. Also surviving are 14 grandchildren, including Mrs. Montgomery Orr of Wayne, and H. Stuart Stone of Chicago, and eight great-grandchildren.

Sponsor of First Bridge.

Mr. McCormick spent most of his life in Chicago, where as a child he rode to school on a pony and crossed the river on a barge guided by an Indian.

While a young man he served in the city council, where he introduced the bill which resulted in construction of the first steam operated bridge, at Rush street. Later he was for 30 years in the banking business, with offices in the old Board of Trade building.

Private Herman Nelson, 26 years old, of Fort Bragg, N. C., died in St. Joseph's hospital, Elgin, of injuries suffered a week ago in an automobile accident on U. S. route 20, 15 miles west of Elgin. His home was in Exira, Ia. Five other soldiers and a mother and two girls also were injured in the crash.

GENNARO PAPI OF OPERA FOUND DEAD IN HOTEL

New York, Nov. 29 [Special].—Gennaro Papi, conductor of Italian répertoire at the Metropolitan opera and former conductor of the Chicago Grand Opera company, was found dead today in his apartment in the Hotel Woodward. It was believed his death was caused by a heart attack.

The body was discovered by a maid an hour before Papi was to have conducted "La Traviata" at the matinée performance. He was clad in pajamas. His dress shirt was on the bed, ready to be donned for the matinée.

The maid said she had served him breakfast at 10 a. m. and he appeared to be in good health at that time. The Metropolitan was notified of his death 15 minutes before curtain time. Ettore Panizza was summoned to substitute as conductor.

Papi conducted the Italian répertoire at the Ravinia Opera company, Highland Park, Ill., from 1917 to 1931. There his discipline and musicianship were chiefly responsible for the high artistic standard which prevailed continuously at Ravinia until the opera company was disbanded at the close of the 1931 season.

Papi was born in Italy 54 years ago. He came to America in 1912 and became an American citizen in 1927. Officials of the Metropolitan said his wife, a son, and daughter live in Italy.

MOTHERS' GROUP IS UNDAUNTED BY NAVY'S CHARGES

Officers of We, the Mothers, Mobilize for America, said last night they will continue to mail letters of sympathy to parents of American seamen lost in the battle of the Atlantic despite charges by the navy department of an "organized campaign to undermine civilian morale."

The charges were made in Washington yesterday when Secretary of the Navy Knox made public copies of a letter sent by the peace organization to parents of crew members lost when the Reuben James was sunk last month. The letter, Knox said, had been forwarded to him by some of the parents.

Claimed Part of Campaign.

A navy department spokesman, commenting on the letter, in which the parents were asked to "call to account the real murderers of your loved one, the men who violated the Constitution of the United States by sending him into the war zone," said the letter was "part of an organized campaign to undermine civilian morale and the morale of the armed forces."

"That's not the purpose of the letter at all," declared Mrs. Lyrl Van Hyning, president of the organization. "We want the people of America to wake up to the fact that they are being fooled. We want the unfortunate parents of the men to realize who caused their sons' deaths."

"We'll keep sending these letters out," said Mrs. Grace Keefe, secretary. "We have a right to do so, as mothers and as citizens seeking to keep our country at peace. If any of the parents want to take legal action against any army or navy superiors who gave illegal orders, we will assist them with our attorneys. Legal experts have advised that if any soldier loses his life while executing orders which his superiors have no constitutional authority to give, then those officials can be sued as private citizens."

Letters Express Sympathy.

The organization's letter, sent to parents of casualties on both the Reuben James and the Kearney, expressed sympathy and noted that "these men were callously and needlessly sent to their deaths."

"Any movement," stated the letters, "to avenge these, our dead, by throwing away the lives of millions more of our American men to punish a foreign nation is but a false premise to involve us in war."

Mrs. Van Hyning and Mrs. Keefe signed the letters.

SOPRANO SOLOIST WITH ORCHESTRA STIRS AUDIENCE

Beal Hober Is Heard with Business Men's Group.

BY EDWARD BARRY.

The American soprano, Beal Hober, appeared as soloist with the Chicago Business Men's orchestra in Orchestra hall last night. The sweep and power and freedom of her singing and the size and beauty of her voice made a deep impression on her listeners.

Under George Dasch's direction Miss Hober sang "Dich Theure Halle" from Wagner's "Tannhäuser" and "Leise, Leise" from Weber's "Der Freischütz." Despite the apparent abandon with which she worked, it was obvious that she was concentrating constantly on the changing meanings of the music and suiting her voice colorings and all her nuances to these meanings.

Soprano of Heroic Type.

Miss Hober is a soprano of the heroic type, and the Wagner aria was especially successful. It was headlong and full of surging feeling, yet the singer's voice did not break nor the momentum of her performance develop to the point where it might get out of hand.

Because 1941 is the centenary of the birth of the great Czech composer, Antonio Dvorak, the orchestra devoted the entire first half of its program to his works. There was the familiar overture, "In der Natur," followed by the less familiar second symphony.

In Memory of George Lytton.

The Dvorak symphony was dedicated last night to the memory of George Lytton, founder of the Business Men's orchestra.

The performance was creditable, considering that new men have been absorbed into the orchestra this year and that the preparation of a full length program on a once-a-week rehearsal schedule is a herculean task. The orchestra will play with greater brightness and accuracy later in the season.

Show Must Go On

TALLULAH BANKHEAD.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 29 (AP).—Tallulah Bankhead's determination that "the show must go on," altho she was suffering from pneumonia, nearly cost her life, her physician said today. "It is remarkable to me that she pulled thru," Dr. A. I. Rubenstone said. "The diagnosis shows that she had been suffering with pneumonia for at least 24 hours before she collapsed." He said she now is "past the danger point." She collapsed backstage Nov. 17 following what critics said was a magnificent performance in the play, "Clash by Night."

AIR HOSTESS DIES WHEN HURLED OFF HER HORSE

Miss Ruth Armsteadt, 24 years old, an American Airlines hostess, was fatally injured yesterday when she was thrown from the horse she was riding. She died in St. Francis hospital, Evanston.

Police of Morton Grove, where the accident occurred, said Miss Armsteadt's horse apparently reared and threw her as she attempted to cross Church street near Austin avenue, in the suburb. There were no witnesses to the accident, they said.

NOTICE TO MEMBERS

The "Hood Lifters' Club" will get together today and every day from now on. New members welcome. See you at headquarters.

IF YOU'RE the kind of car buyer who wants more than good looks . . . if you like to "lift the hood" and look for in-built quality . . . then you are a charter member of the "Hood Lifters' Club," and you are invited to visit club headquarters—the nearest Hudson showroom.

There you'll find a car that's big and good looking . . . yet surprisingly low in price. One that's easy on gas and oil and always ready to go. One that has great safety features, and exclusive driving features that no other automobile at any price can offer you.

Best of all, you'll find the deep-down fineness and sturdiness you insist on. While important defense work in which Hudson is extensively engaged limits the quantity of 1942 Hudson cars, quality standards were never so high in all of Hudson's 32 years of engineering leadership. We'd like to prove this to you.

Every smart buyer finds it pays to be a "Hood Lifter." So why not stop in at headquarters today? You'll be welcome.

BY CECIL SMITH.

The third and last of this season's varied assortment of Carmens, Bruna Castagna, made her single appearance of 1941 at yesterday's matinée in the Civic Opera house. Since Miss Castagna's figure is not one to tempt her to indulge in unnecessary capers, she moved thru the action of the rôle like the capable Italian prima donna she is, keeping the story alive thru the animation and dramatic force of her singing.

She is a good Carmen, in the sense that she sings straightforwardly and capably, without allowing herself to become haunted, as some Carmens have, by the notion of coloring every note with exotic and seductive vocal timbre.

No Monkey Business.

There is no monkey business, either in singing or in acting, about her cigaret girl. Everything essential is present, and it is rather pleasant to encounter an artist who takes the most overinterpreted rôle in opera as no more than a part of the week's work.

I do not mean to imply that her performance was uninteresting, for such good craftsmanship as Miss Castagna's can never be dull. Her cool competence exerted an excellent control over Jan Kiepura, who presented a Don José for the most part reasonable in characterization and altogether superb in vocal freedom and beauty.

A Drab Performance.

The other chief performers were not unduly exciting. John Charles Thomas, who can be first rate when he gives some thought to a rôle, did not achieve his usual success as Escamillo.

Leola Turner, in the ingenue rôle of Micaela, turned in a rather drab performance which did not compare favorably with the charmingly inflected singing she achieved a few seasons back, when she first joined the San Carlo company.

Unpleasant Reminder.

The season's first "Il Trovatore" in the evening often provided distressing reminders of the scrappy and inconsequential performances this masterpiece used to receive five or six years ago when local opera was at its lowest ebb. Except for Virgilio Lazzari, whose Ferrando was as bold in sonority and as striking in dramatic accent as ever, the evening held a minimum of satisfying singing.

Mobley Lushanya, whose vocal development simply is not adequate, to the standard of a major opera house, presented the skeleton of Leonora's music without much of the flesh and blood. Coe Glade's impersonation of the old gypsy was fairly convincing to look at, and she gave evidence of excellent musical understanding in spite of a vocal method which thwarts her intentions.

Altho his voice was not very free, Giovanni Martinelli was, as always, a strong asset to the dramatic side of the performance.

10,000 TO WORSHIP TODAY IN LARGEST CHURCH IN WORLD

New York, Nov. 29:—Ten thousand persons are going to worship in a single church tomorrow—a church with no membership roll, no parish boundaries.

It is the largest Gothic cathedral in the world, the Cathedral of St. John the Divine. It is so big that one must hike a quarter-mile to encircle it. It is so long that the Washington monument could be placed lengthwise from the gold plated entrance doors to the high altar and still there would be left 46 feet. And no church built, down thru the centuries, ever had its center width.

They have been building it since the pre-depression days of 1925; in that time a total of $20,000,000 poured into the St. John coffers and now its growing pains are quieted. Tomorrow, with 10,000 present, British born Bishop William T. Manning, Episcopal head of the diocese of New York, will open the completed nave, the west front, and the narthex. The building rises from the rocks of Cathedral Heights, hard by Columbus university.

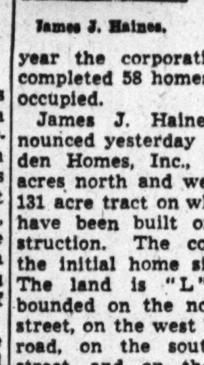
Plan 50 More 'Defense Homes' in South Chicago

29 UNITS NOW BEING BUILT IN 300 ACRE AREA

58 Houses Completed So Far This Year.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

While rushing work on 29 homes under an A-4 priority rating, said to be the highest Office of Production Management priority rating yet given any home builder in the Chicago area, Calumet Garden Homes, Inc., announced yesterday that plans for 50 more "defense homes" have been filed with the Federal Housing administration. So far this year the corporation has sold and completed 58 homes, all of which are occupied.



James J. Haines.

James J. Haines, president, announced yesterday that Calumet Garden Homes, Inc., had acquired 169 acres north and west of the original 131 acre tract on which the 87 houses have been built or are under construction. The corporation bought the initial home sites in May, 1940. The land is "L" shaped and is bounded on the north by East 95th street, on the west by Van Vlissingen road, on the south by East 102d street, and on the east by Hoxie avenue.

Housing Shortage Acute.

This original tract was replatted from 1,000 lots of 30 foot frontage each into 650 home sites of 42 feet in width. Part of the new 169 acre tract adjoining already has been platted into 250 lots, giving the development company 900 home sites. Later more of the new tract will be platted, it was said.

"The housing shortage in the Calumet industrial district has become so acute due to the influx of workmen on armament jobs that we'll be able to make only a small dent in the demand," said Haines. "We've been told, for example, that 5,000 new homes are needed in this section alone and that workmen are traveling in from as far away as Chesterton, Ind., on the south and Evanston, Ill., on the north."

To Get A-10 OPM Rating.

The new group of 50 homes in Calumet Gardens, which are being considered by FHA under Title 6 of the Defense Housing act, will receive a priority rating of A-10, according to OPM. This, of course, is not so high a rating as A-4 [given to enable the completion of homes already well under way], but it will assure the company of getting critical materials for the new 50 unit group.

"Dovenmuehle, Inc., which financed the original 87 homes, also will finance the new group," Haines said. "By staying within the $6,000 maximum set up for 'defense homes, which we'll be able to do by keeping construction costs down thru building for sale instead of to order, we expect to develop our entire area of 300 acres during 1942."

How a Priority Works.

Haines explained how a priority rating number works: "When given to a builder such as Calumet Gardens, it is then certified by this builder to each one of his contractors and subcontractors; by them to their supply houses, and so on thru to the original manufacturer. By use of the priority number, each firm using it is entitled to replenish its stock by passing the number on toward the original source of supply."

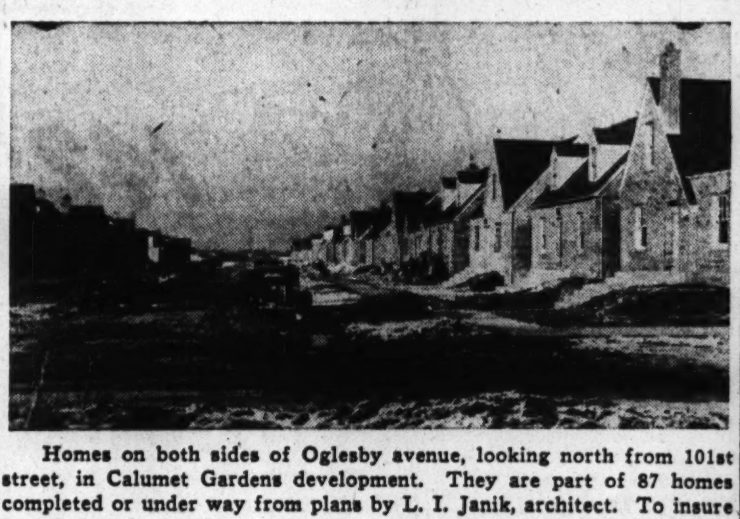
The homes being built in Calumet Gardens are of solid brick wall construction, with the same kind of brick used on all sides. There are four rooms and a bath on the first floor and provision for two additional rooms on the second floor.

News of the Architects

Following a dinner next Tuesday evening at Normandy House, 800 Tower court, the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects will hold a brief memorial to the late Frederick J. Thielbar, A. I. A., architect of the new Wesley Memorial hospital, after which a tour of inspection of the hospital will be made.

The architectural exhibition sponsored by the Chicago chapter of the American Institute of Architects will be held at the Art institute from Jan. 20 to Feb. 23, 1942. Architects of the Chicago area are invited to send examples of their best work to Samuel A. Marx, architectural exhibition committee, 333 North Michigan avenue, by Saturday, Dec. 13. Details regarding the exhibition can be obtained from Marx or from L. Morgan Yost, Kenilworth.

Get High Priority Rating



Homes on both sides of Oglesby avenue, looking north from 101st street, in Calumet Gardens development. They are part of 87 homes completed or under way from plans by L. I. Janik, architect. To insure completion the builders were given an A-4 priority rating for materials, said to be the highest OPM rating number in this area. Rated as "defense homes," they all cost under $6,000 for land and building. Privately financed thru Dovenmuehle, Inc.

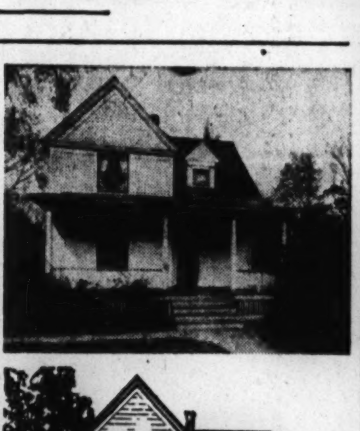
Home to Be a 'Guinea Pig' for Modernization Research Test

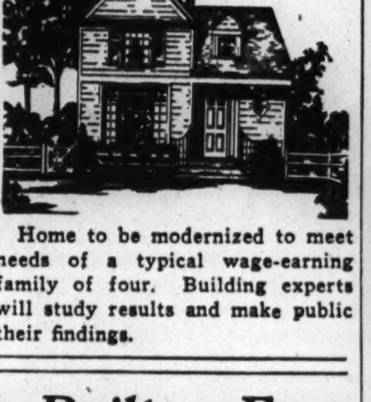
New data on practically every phase of home modernization will be developed for the public and the building industry during 1942 thru an extensive research project announced yesterday by the United States Gypsum company. A 60 year old six room frame residence at 313 Crescent drive, Park Ridge, will be the guinea pig in this building laboratory test.

It will be completely rebuilt from plans by Architect Eugene Voita, of Chicago, with nonpriority materials available thru regular building material dealers. During the construction period it will be studied by engineers and technical experts from the U. S. G. research laboratories in Chicago, and from independent agencies to develop new information on insulation, heating and ventilating, illumination, electrical and gas service, household utilities, fire protection and fire insurance ratings.

Other things to be studied by the experts will be family health and safety, home comfort and efficiency, interior design, decoration, and furnishing.

Records kept on quantities of materials and man hour units of labor will be published so that owners and builders thruout the country can estimate accurately similar work on the basis of prevailing local material prices and wage scales.





Home to be modernized to meet needs of a typical wage-earning family of four. Building experts will study results and make public their findings.

132 Homes to Be Built on Four Blocks Near Studebaker Plant

Construction is under way by Lad Vacek on 26 homes, first units in a residential program calling for 132 units, in the four city blocks bounded by West 53d street, South Kildare avenue, South Keeler avenue, and West 55th street. The remaining 106 houses will be "defense homes" and will cost $5,950 for land and building. The price puts them under the Office of Production Management $6,000 ceiling, and they also qualify for "defense homes" by being about three-quarters of a mile from the big Studebaker airplane engine parts plant.

All of the first 26 houses priced at $6,950, and so unable to qualify as "defense homes," have been sold and 7 are occupied. While waiting for an FHA commitment on the first 10 of the "defense homes" excavating has been started for several. Vacek said these would be built in groups of 10. Eight of the first 10 already have been sold.

The 106 "defense homes" will have solid brick walls, with four finished rooms and two unfinished rooms. All will have full basements and stand on 40x126 foot lots. All street improvements are in and paid for, it was said. Priority ratings have been applied for, Vacek said.

BUILDING CODE REVISION URGED AS CITY'S NEED

Prompt revision of the new Chicago building code to enable the use of substitutions in place of critical materials reported by government officals to be scarce, was urged yesterday by Elmer C. Jensen, architect and president of the Chicago Building congress. Action is necessary in order to encourage building construction, repair, and rehabilitation slowed up by federal curbs.

"The present emergency, causing extreme shortages of certain materials in the building field and the necessity for using substitute materials of proven worth and supported by sound engineering tests and general practice in other cities, compels us to believe that immediate steps must be taken to effect amendments to the Chicago building code," Jensen said.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 29 [Special].—Army's mule got in the first kick today, but later the Navy goat scored with two successive well aimed charges in Municipal stadium, and the 42d battle between the two service elevens went to the men from Annapolis, 14 to 6.

A crowd of 98,924, which sat in perfect football weather, saw the Cadets from West Point leave the field at the end of the first half with a 6 to 0 lead. But the Middies, noted this season for their strong second half tactics, swept into command after the rest period. They marched 69 yards with the kickoff to score and added the extra point to take the lead. Then, before this third period had ended, the Navy had once again punched the ball over the Army's last rampart, this time on a sixty-eight yard drive.

It's Old Stuff to Larson.

It was a day of triumph for Navy's retiring coach, Maj. Emery E. [Swede] Larson, of the marine corps, who will be transferred to Newport next month. He climaxed a perfect performance against the Army as player and coach. In each of his three years as the midshipmen's tutor his teams whipped the army. In 1919, 1920, and 1921 he was a member of Navy elevens which swept to victory over the Army.

However, Army at least had the satisfaction today of escaping a shutout for the first time in those six meetings. More than that, the scrappy, outweighed and undermanned eleven of Earl [Red] Blaik, who never before had coached an army team that lost to Navy, threw the huge crowd into an uproar of excitement by drawing first blood.

Late in the second quarter, Ralph Hill raced fifty-six yards with a punt from the toe of Sherwood Werner, taking the ball from Hank Mazur, the safety, and reversing the field to go almost all the way before the tricked Midshipmen could overhaul him.

Mazur Leads Army Drive.

In two smashes thru and outside left tackle, Mazur, a great back in his final performance, carried twenty-six yards to within a foot of the goal line and Substitute Full Back Jim Watkins bucked over for the touchdown.

Navy, the favorite, had made but a single first down to this time while Army previously had penetrated to the 12 yard line with a thiry-five yard pass. There seemed more than a good chance that Maj. Larson's record of invincibility against the Cadets was finally to be smashed in his finale.

In the second half, however, the Midshipmen proceeded to disillusion the Cadets. From the opening kickoff of this half, Navy went all the way for a touchdown, with Barnacle Bill Busik as the whole show. Then, after Army had elected to kick again, the Midshipmen came right back and did the same thing all over again, with little Howie Clark as the spearhead of the attack.

Busik Sparks Middies.

Busik, a great back with his running, passing, and an eighty yard punt, ran back the second half kickoff from the goal line to his 32. From there he either ran or passed for practically every yard until Phil Hurt, third string full back, ploughed thru the middle from the 1 yard line.

Of these sixty-eight yards, twenty-six were negotiated on a pass from Busik to Capt. Bob Froude, and just before Hurt went over, Busik, on fourth down, with six to go for a first down, went around left end for fifteen to the 1, after finding it impossible to pass.

The yelping cheers of joy that followed Bob Leonard's placement kick for the point that sent the Midshipmen ahead, 7 to 6, had hardly died down when Maj. Larson's two-ocean Navy was off to the wars again against a tiring Army force.

Army, with the option of receiving

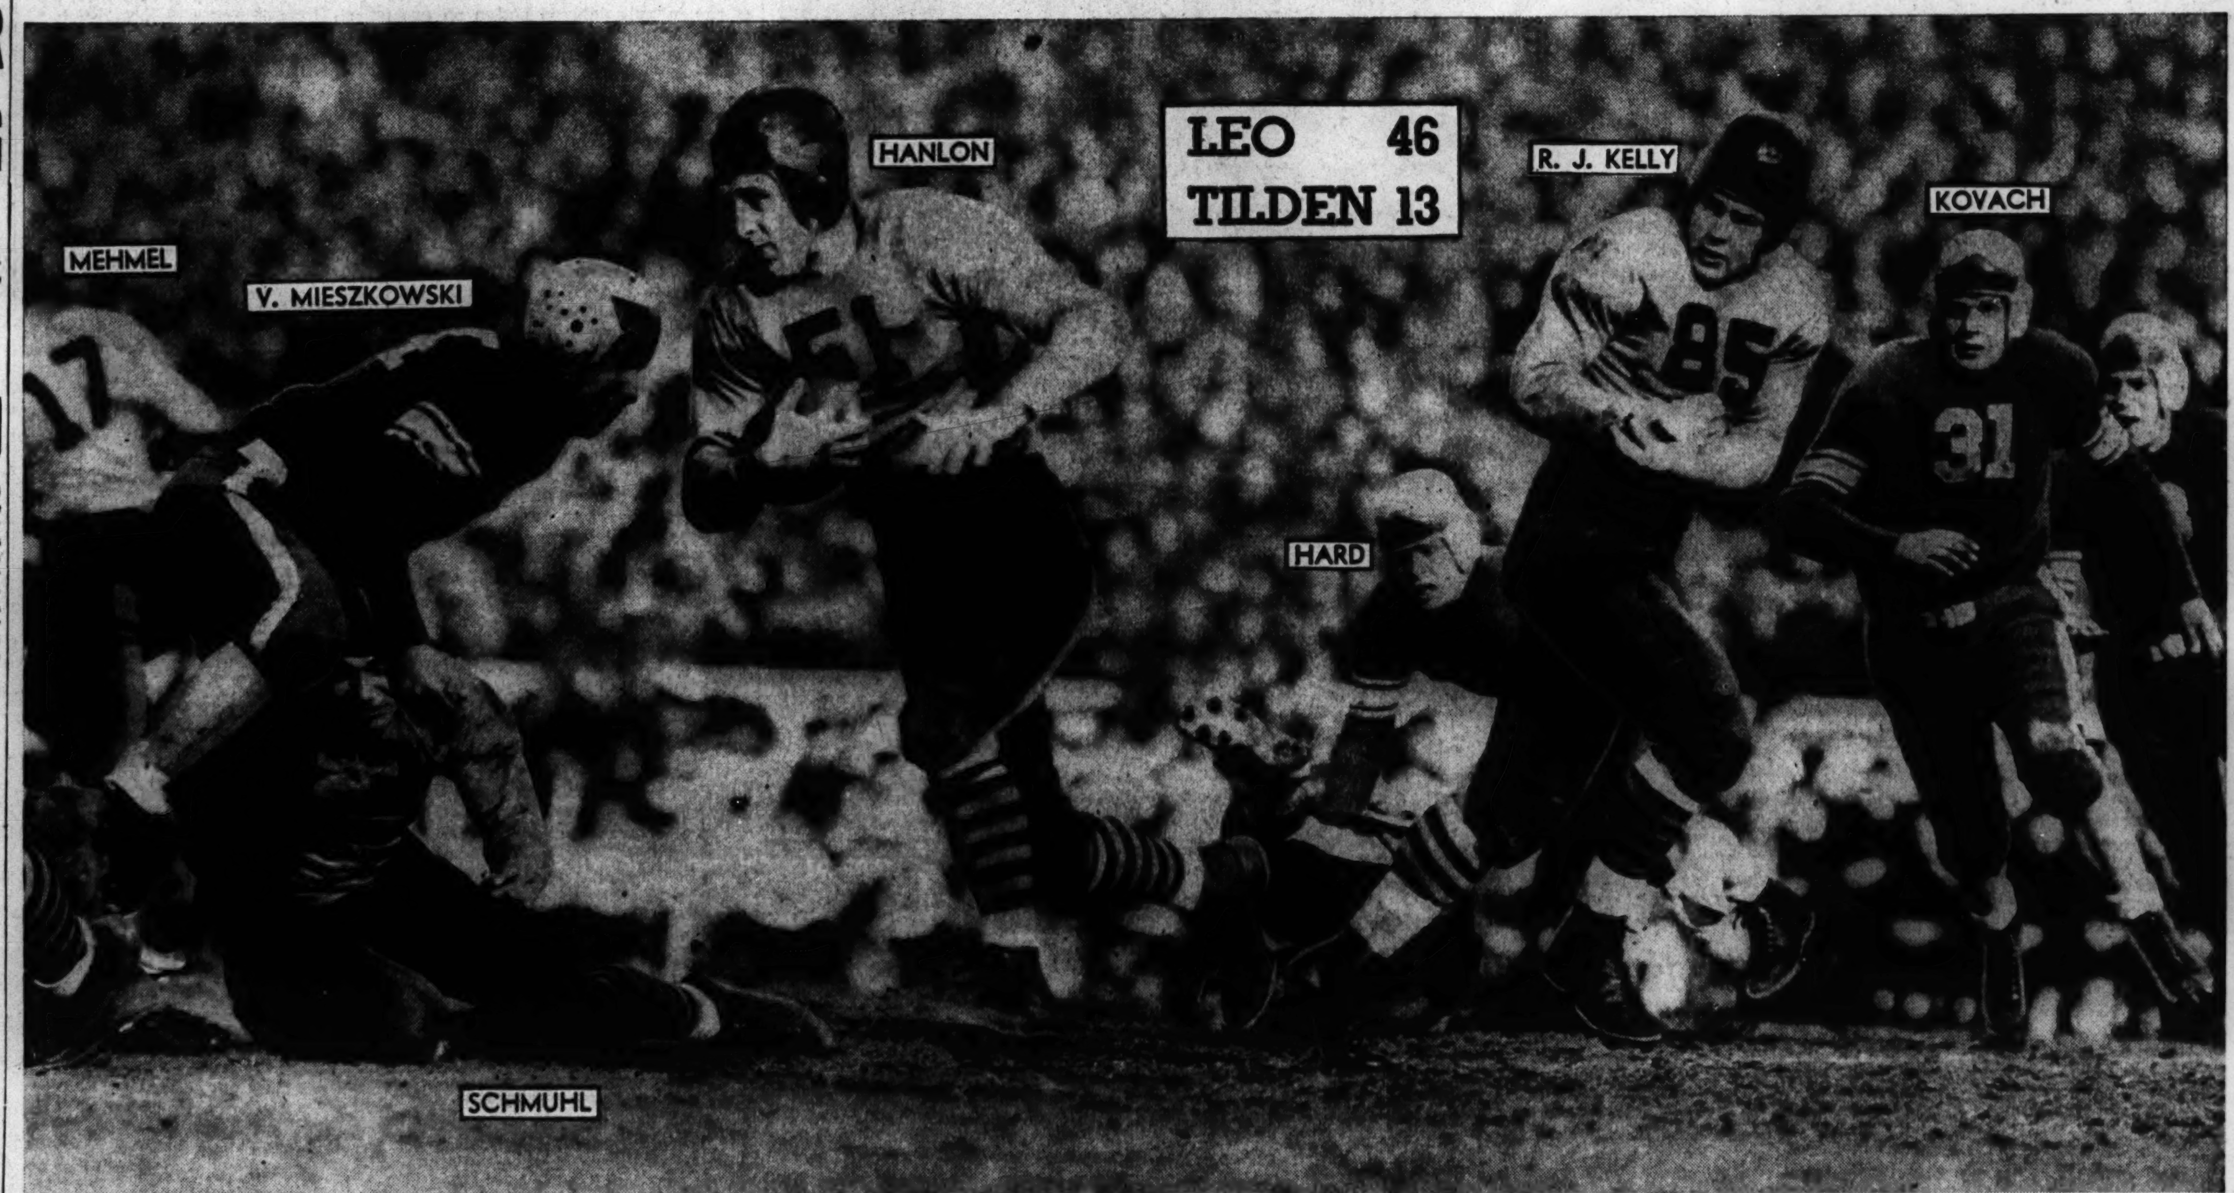
TILDEN STOPS LEO'S HANLON THIS TRIP, BUT BOB DIDN'T GIVE UP



Bob Hanlon, Leo full back, tries an end run, but fails to gain in yesterday's city prep title battle with Tilden Tech, played in Soldiers' field under the auspices of Chicago's Own Christmas Benefit fund. A crowd of 95,000, second largest in the history of the interleague series, saw the Catholic league champions decisively whip the public school representatives. Leo set a new scoring record for the series, rushing over six of its touchdowns in the first half. Hanlon traveled seventy-three yards for one of Leo's scores.

OREGON STATE RALLIES TO WIN COAST TITLE, ROSE BOWL BID

Eugene, Ore., Nov. 29 (AP).—Coming from behind in the final quarter, the Oregon State Beavers overcame a 1 point deficit today to defeat the University of Oregon, 12 to 7, and win the Pacific Coast conference football title.

A sixty yard drive, concluding with a twenty-eight yard buck and run thru center by Joe Day, full back, netted the richest touchdown in Oregon State's history.

For a while in the fourth quarter it looked as tho the conference championship scramble might wind up in a four or five way tie as Oregon held a 7 to 6 lead.

But the Beavers came back for their winning touchdown and were on the Oregon 5 yard line seeking another as the game ended, whereupon the Beaver subs rushed on the field and carried off the regulars on their shoulders.

The Beavers struck for a touchdown in the first seven minutes of the second half after a scoreless first half..

Penalty Helps State.

Half Back Bob Dethman returned a punt fifteen yards to the Oregon 38. Half Back Don Durdan threw an eleven yard pass to End George Zellick. On the next play "Choc" Shelton, full back, hit for two yards. An unnecessary roughness penalty cost Oregon fifteen yards to its 3 yard line from where Shelton sliced off right guard for the score. Sub Half Back Warren Sima's try for the extra point was wide.

Oregon went ahead on the first play of the last quarter when Curt Mecham faked a pass and ran fifty-three yards to score. Half Back Jimmy Newquist's kick was true and an upset was in the making when State put on its sixty yard drive.

STANFORD UPSET, 16-0.

Palo Alto, Cal., Nov. 29 (AP).—California's Golden Bears, rising to inspirational heights, wrote a stunning climax to an up and down football season today with a 16 to 0 upset victory over the defending Pacific Coast conference champions, Stanford's Indians.

A crowd of 70,000 fans, braving threatening weather to watch the 48th renewal of the west coast's most colorful gridiron game saw the 1 to 3 short end Bears blast Stanford's Rose bowl hopes with crushing defensive play after moving into a first period lead on a single touchdown run.

California struck with lightning speed a minute after the game opened to score a touchdown, add the extra point and go into a lead that never was threatened.

Nine more points were posted in a thrilling last quarter, when the Bears poured thru to block two Stanford punts. One resulted in an automatic safety, the ball bounding out of the end zone.

U. S. C. BEATEN, 14-13.

Los Angeles, Cal., Nov. 29 (AP).—Washington and Southern California clashed in another of their bitter football battles today, and the Huskies, riding on luck, pulled out with a 14 to 13 triumph. The Washingtons fashioned two plays, each good for fifty yards, to hold back a Trojan team which dominated the contest and all but tied it up with a touchdown in the last seven seconds of the game.

Just as a pair of missed extra points robbed the Trojans of a tie with mighty Notre Dame a week ago, so did two bad after touchdown place kicks—plus a missed field goal attempt from the 12 yard stripe—cost them a chance for a tie or a triumph today.

Fordham Its Foe?

CORVALLIS, Ore., Nov. 29 (AP).—Oregon State will represent the Pacific coast conference in the Rose bowl football game on New Year's day in Pasadena, Cal. President C. V. Ruzek of the university said tonight the school's team had been selected for the game by a majority of conference faculty representatives.

The Beavers, rated as tailenders at the season's start, won the undisputed conference championship today by defeating University of Oregon while California was upsetting Stanford.

Portland, Ore., Nov. 29 (AP).—Oregon State college tonight selected Fordham university as its football opponent in the Rose bowl New Year's day, the Portland Oregonian reported. The newspaper said it had learned of the secelction from "an unimpeachable source."

WILLIS HUDLIN NAMED MANAGER OF LITTLE ROCK

Little Rock, Ark., Nov. 29 (AP).—Willis Hudlin, veteran pitcher, was named manager of the Little Rock Travelers of the Southern association tonight, succeeding Bert Niehoff, who resigned this month after serving one season. Hudlin was given a one year contract.

He came to Little Rock as a free agent after 14 years with the Cleveland Indians, who let him go in 1939.

Orange Bowl Picks Georgia; Foe Not Named

Miami, Fla., Nov. 29 (AP).—Georgia will represent the south in the Orange Bowl football game New Year's day. An opponent probably will be named Monday, the schedule committee announced tonight. Committeemen said the choice lies among Missouri, Duquesne, Texas, Fordham, and Penn State.

An invitation was extended to Georgia, and was accepted, immediately after the Bulldogs whipped Georgia Tech today, 21 to 0.

Beaten Only Once.

The Georgians, coached by Wally Butts, scored 279 points against 59 for their opponents, winning eight, losing one, and tying one. They opened by downing Mercer, 81 to 0, and whipped South Carolina, 34 to 6, before being tied by Mississippi, 14 to 14. Sinkwich scored the touchdown that beat Columbia in New York, 7 to 3. The only defeat came the following week, 27 to 14, at the hands of Alabama. Since then the Athens team has beaten Auburn, 7 to 0, Florida, 19 to 3, Center, 47 to 6, and Dartmouth, 35 to 0, and finally Georgia Tech.

Committeemen waited for the action of other bowls, and meanwhile would not say which of the five schools indicated has the inside track.

Only One of Five Unbeaten.

Duquesne is the only unbeaten team in the list. Fordham and Missouri each have been beaten once, Texas was beaten and tied, and Penn State lost two games.

Both Missouri and Duquesne have made previous appearances in the Orange Bowl, Duquesne winning victories over Miami and Mississippi State, and Missouri losing to Georgia Tech.

MISSISSIPPI IS BEATEN, 6-0, BY STATE ELEVEN

Oxford, Miss., Nov. 29 (AP).—A tackle by mistake probably cost Mississippi university a tie or possible victory over Mississippi State here this afternoon, but State won, 6 to 0, and took its first Southeastern Conference football championship. A sophomore quarter back named Jennings Moates—an unknown until today—slithered thirty-eight yards thru an amazed Rebel eleven for the winning score.

Early in the second quarter the Rebels had the ball on their 45 where Junie Hovious passed to Ray Poole, who was in the open, but his teammate, Bobby Yandell, half back, tackled him by mistake and brought him down on State's 45.

For the third straight year State throttled the running and passing of Mississippi's Hovious and Merle Hapes, and for a third straight year—the 22d time in 39 starts—took the intrastate contest.

NATION'S 1ST ALL-STAR BOWLING TOURNEY IS JUST ONE WEEK AWAY

BY C. H. BEUKEMA.

The event that represents the most significant step in the advancement of bowling in many years will open next Sunday when the first annual All-Star eliminations and match game tournament begins in the Chicago Coliseum. The tournament will run for eight afternoons and eight nights and from it will emerge the national match game individual champion for 1942 and the 1942 challenger for the match game title.

The tournament is significant partly because it may be just the step that will transform bowling from a purely participants' sport to a spectators' sport as well. Bowling fans long have attended matches where no admission was charged or have paid small charges at the door. In this case, however, they will be asked to pay the entire costs of the event—just as the fan supports baseball, football, boxing, hockey, and many other sports. Ticket prices have been scaled from $1.65 for box seats at night to 55 cents for general admission afternoons, with special prices on tickets for women, service men in uniforms, and high school bowlers.

A Challenge to the Public.

If the theory of its sponsors, the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and the Bowling Proprietors Association of America, is correct, a movement to make the public pay for bowling as a spectacle rather than have a bowler simply shoot for his own money, as is done now, may result. Such a movement would elevate the stars among the nation's 16,000,000 bowlers to a place in their sport comparable to the places held by the stars in many other sports.

The tournament is divided into two parts—the final 40 game block of the individual match game championship competition and the All-Star contest. In the former Ned Day will defend his title against the challenge of Lowell Jackson, St. Louis bowler who gained the right to meet Day by winning an elimination last fall. When they meet in the Coliseum to bowl 10 games a night on each of the first four nights of the tournament they will have completed 120 games of their 160 game match. Day, as defending champion, will receive a purse of $1,500 and Jackson $750 at the end of the match.

12 Man Round Robin.

The All-Star competition likewise will be divided into two parts. All of the 70 shooters chosen by a committee to compete will roll a 20 game assignment the first four days, five games a day. After the fourth day the field will be reduced to the 11 high men—on a total pins basis—who will join the title match loser in a round robin in which each man will face every other man in the field in a five game match. In this latter phase of the challenge tournament, as in the Day-Jackson match, scoring will be done on the Petersen point system.

Winner of that event will be the 1942 challenger for the match game title. He will have earned that right—and the $500 purse it carries.

Day's Lead Cut

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 29 [Special].—Ned Day, national match individual bowling champion from West Allis, Wis., again won six of the 10 games shot tonight at Nelson Burton's recreation, but Lowell Jackson, St. Louis challenger, outscored him in pins, 2,010 to 1,832. The result cut Day's point lead to 66.17. Jackson's point total tonight was 45.10, Day getting 42.32. Jackson got an additional point for getting the most pins, altho winning the fewer games. Scores:

Day—165, 200, 219, 203, 155, 157, 173, 212, 151, 197—1,832.

Packers Face Redskins in Final Today

BY WILFRID SMITH.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29.—The Green Bay Packers drilled briefly this morning for their game tomorrow afternoon in Griffith stadium against the Washington Redskins by which they hope to insure at least a tie for the Western division championship of the National Football league. If the Packers whip the Redskins, who already have lost three games in succession, they can be tied by the Chicago Bears only if the Bears add a victory over the Cardinals Dec. 7 to the anticipated conquest of the Philadelphia Eagles tomorrow.

Thirty-six thousand, a capacity throng, will see the battle in Griffith stadium, which is expected to be a passing duel between the Packers' Cecil Isbell and Washington's Sammy Baugh. Today's springlike weather is on order for tomorrow.

Packers After No. 12.

If Green Bay wins it will be a 12th victory against an early season defeat by the Bears that was balanced five weeks ago by the Packers' 16 to 14 conquest of the Bears in Chicago. The anticipated playoff game for the

BY JAMES SEGRETI.

Leo's Lions no longer hold the dubious distinction of being the squad which couldn't score a point in the annual prep charity spectacle. The Catholic league champions revealed yesterday that they can produce touchdowns in abundant quantities as Tilden Tech's Public School league winners were crushed, 46 to 13, for the city prep championship in the presence of 95,000, who sat in bright sunshine.

The receipts of the game, eighth under the sponsorship of Mayor Kelly's Christmas Benefit fund, approximated $100,000 and will be used to purchase shoes and clothing for Chicago's underpriviledged children.

The touchdown spree began after the first two minutes of play, and six orange jerseyed players crossed the goal line in the first half scoring orgy, the wildest offensive exhibition ever seen in the contest. The Lions added another touchdown in the third period to surpass the scoring record established by Andy Pilney, Andy Puplis and their Harrison Tech teammates when they overwhelmed Mount Carmel, 44 to 6, 10 years ago.

It Should Have Been Close.

There were those who thought the game would be a closely fought affair because of the season's records of the two league champions. The calculations on paper also envisioned a duel between Leo's Henry [Babe] Baranowski and Tilden Tech's Ray Schumacher. But the contest showed the Lions have other able performers in their cast, including a brilliant group of linemen, who smashed the Tech ball carriers for a net loss of six yards in the first half.

Baranowski, who had scored almost half of the Lions' 249 points before the interleague game, scampered across the Tilden goal line for one of the touchdowns early in the second quarter on a twenty yard run, and his passes sailed menacingly thruout the afternoon, but the spectacular scoring plays were made by other members of the squad, including Bob Hanlon, who traveled seventy-three yards for one score, and Guard Frank Lauro, who went over on a fourteen yard dash after Left End Bob Baggott had blocked Schumacher's punt on the fifth play of the game.

Subs Take a Hand, Too.

There also were touchdowns by two substitutes in the Lions' vengeful victory over the Yellow Jackets. The helpful bench warmers were Edward Hayes, whose three runs of ten, thirty-five, and twenty yards scored the squad's sixth touchdown, and Bob Carr, who intercepted Len Mazzaco's pass and ran forty yards shortly

CUBS AND SOX GO SOUTH TO MINOR LEAGUE MARKET

Meeting in Jacksonville Opens Tuesday.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The White Sox and the Cubs are heading for the minor league meetings in Jacksonville, Fla., which open Tuesday, with the usual purpose of tooting their major league horns and also because they have a distinct place in the minor league setup. Never before have the Chicago clubs been so directly concerned with minor league operations.

It's all in line with the two years of progress in Billy Webb's White Sox farm system and the expansion of the Cub farm which gained impetus with the appointment of James T. Gallagher as Cub general manager. The Cub minor league responsibilities increased greatly with the recent acquisition of the Los Angeles Angels as an out and out farm adjunct. Previously the Wrigley owned Angels had operated independently. Clarence Rowland, for 10 years on the Cub staff, is the new director of Angel operations.

The Cub party, headed by Gallagher, leaves today. The Sox delegates, led by Secretary Harry Gallagher, start south tomorrow.

Plan Farm Alterations.

The Sox, in addition to the work of strengthening their Chicago team against the occasional fadeouts which nip them season after season just when they seem to be going places, are said to be contemplating a change in their farm policy. The Lubbock [Tex.] club has been sold by the Sox and there will be no working agreement between the clubs in 1942. While it is likely that the franchise held by the Sox in Waterloo [Ia.] of the Three Eye league, will be retained, any of the other arrangements may be altered, according to reports. Jonesboro [Ark.], Wisconsin Rapids, and Muskegon [Mich.], class D teams recently controlled by the Sox, may express a change in status.

The Cubs disavow holdings in the Milwaukee Brewers, but this club was taken over last midseason by the Cub treasurer, Bill Veeck Jr., who installed Cub Coach Charley Grimm as manager. Veeck and other Brewer officials will be members of the Cub Jacksonville party. The Cubs also are half owners of the Tulsa Oilers and these interests, combined with urgent Los Angeles alterations, will give the Cubs a busy week among the minors.

During his pause in Chicago, Manager Jim Dykes of the Sox revealed his main hunt will be almost exclusively for a new set of outfielders. Taft Wright, his leading hitter, is the only one of his 1941 gardening cast that he is sure to keep on the roster. Dykes, who almost swapped Mike Kreevich at the Atlanta meeting last winter, probably will go thru with a deal for the veteran if any one will make a reasonable offer for him.

Some Money to Spend?

Dykes appears to be ready to continue exclusively as a swapper. Tho he is managing a team that hasn't finished as high as second in 21 years, Jim generally is credited with having been a grand success to date. For many years the Sox were content to finish any place in the second division. Jim at least has brought 'em up to being content with third place, moreover has seen the club earn $200,000 in each of the last two seasons.

For a time there had been some forecasts that Jim would spend some of these profits to buy some class players with a view of giving Chicago a real contender. It is feared by some, however, that with December meetings at hand, the Sox skipper is again preparing to cast himself in his favorite rôle, David Harum.

Some of Dykes' most ardent admirers think that other managers will be pursuing Jim this winter, trying to wheedle him out of pitching talent, of which he is supposed to have an excess supply. The White Sox mound staff, tho carrying a little age in spots, is one of the best in the majors.

We've written several essays recently on the White Sox contentment with third place and even have had our hopes lifted to the thought that Dykes would like to boss a stable of thorobreds capable of a sustained complete race. If the Sox could go six months some summer as well as they always go two or three months each season, they could press the Yanks and might win a pennant. But, unfortunately there are just enough of the swaps—gone—wrong boys around to bog down the pace just when the fans are getting steamed up.

INDIANS' NEW MANAGER—AT HOME

PACKERS BATTLE REDSKINS; SEEK CLINCH FOR TIE

western championship is scheduled for Wrigley field, Chicago, Dec. 14, and the winner then will meet the New York Giants, eastern champions, the following week for the league title.

Most fans anticipate that the title will remain in the west, but today Curley Lambeau, Packer coach, wanted no conjectural conversation in the Green Bay headquarters in the Ambassador hotel. Curley's attitude is, "We play 'em one at a time, and I'll fine any player talking about playoffs."

The Packers arrived here late yesterday afternoon from New York, where the team drilled four days at the New York Athletic club quarters on Travers Island. While the invaders merely seek a victory that will assure continuation of their fight for the league championship they last held in 1939, they may break three league scoring records in the finale of the regular season.

Records in Peril.

Isbell needs to collect only 46 yards by forward passing to smash Sammy Baugh's league mark of 1,367 yards gained on passes which the one time Texas Christian star established last year. Clarke Hinkle, Packer full back, needs 4 points to break the 368 point life time scoring record of Jack Manders of the Bears, while Don Hutson, the greatest pass receiver of all time, needs 3 points to break Manders' life time record and 5 points to smash Jack's record of most points scored in one season, which is 79.

Altho Washington forfeited its last chance for the eastern division championship when beaten by New York last week, the course of that game, in which the Redskins once led, 13 to 10, as well as their battle two weeks ago with the Bears, indicate that Green Bay cannot take this contest lightly.

Boudreau Faces a Tough Task with Indians and He Knows It

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Champaign, Ill., Nov. 29.—Don't get the crying towel ready for Lou Boudreau, bachelor of science, shortstop par excellence, and now, at the ripe age of 24, manager of Cleveland's Indians, whose troubles in the last couple of years have outnumbered the hairs on a shaggy dog.

Awarded the job only a few days ago, the sprightly infielder hasn't come out of the daze completely, but he's far enough out to indicate that he knows some of the answers at least.

For one thing, and this has caused more than a little of the Indians' troubles, he isn't painting a pennant picture for unveiling next fall. The first division will suit him and he hopes the newspaper reporters will recall his guess when they start experting next spring. He also is hoping on a lot of other angles.

This Is Different.

Big league managers have been hired before without causing more than a one day commotion and sometimes no commotion at all. Boudreau's case is different. There's that age of 24 pitted against old campaigners, but that's only one item. A bigger one is that Indians' revolt of midseason in 1940, an amazing development that, if nothing else, taught the team how to make the headlines without winning a pennant. Of course, Boudreau had no part in it, but whether that will operate in his favor or against him will have to await developments.

If Boudreau could have his way he would agree to dismiss the memory of the revolt from his mind. He even would feel happy if the baseball writers would drop the subject, which they won't. Whether the surviving ringleaders of the move, which in time cut down Oscar Vitt's term as manager and indirectly may have contributed to the recent changing of Roger Peckinpaugh's title from manager to vice president, will break up their clique, is anybody's guess.

He Had No Hand in Revolt.

Altho Boudreau was a rookie at the time and was not called in when the team's anti-Vitt faction drew up its petition, the happening undoubtedly paved the way to his promotion after only a limited big league career.

President-Owner Alva Bradley wasn't sufficiently aroused at the time to take summary action either against the complainants or Vitt, the defendant. Neither has he explained the affair down to the last detail, a step that might have cleared up the whole situation one way or the other in the minds of the fans—not to mention the still curious baseball writers.

But, under his hat, the Indians' owner has experienced more than a few fretful moments, finally coming to the decision that the appointment of the youthful, popular Boudreau might be the means of eliminating the last traces of discontent. Boudreau thinks it can be done and that's as much as he cares to say.

Lou Plans to Go Shopping.

Boudreau will make his managerial debut on the trading floor at the Jacksonville [Fla.] minor league convention this week, but swapping schemes suggested by rival bosses aren't going to be swallowed instantly by the youngster.

"Those fellows know more about it than I do at this stage," he explained, "and I'll view them with suspicion. Sure, we'll trade. Nobody on the club is exempt, but if we give up something good, it will have to be for something good in return."

As for naming guys, say like Roy Weatherly or Jeff Heath, as being the first on his trading list, Boudreau would say nothing. But there is at least one manager in the league who will give Boudreau's ears a beating on these two men. It is James Dykes, the White Sox boss, but James once gypped the Indians out of Thornton Lee and, while this happened before Boudreau's time, he has heard all about it.

Will It Affect His Play.

As for what the managerial woes will do to his shortstopping, Boudreau himself would like to know. He's read, since his appointment, expressions on this point. The experts immediately began fearing Bradley had ruined a swell shortstop.

"Well, I won't know myself until I try it, but I can hope for the best," he declared.

Neither does the new boss think he made a mistake by accepting the job.

"The opportunity might not come again so why pass it up," he said.

In that respect he didn't err in his figuring. Even if he doesn't make good in his two year term, the best portion of his big league career as a ball player still will be ahead. But if he turns out another victim for the graveyard of managers, it will be the Cleveland club that will stand to lose. The Indians will have to trade him. New managers, if experienced, don't care about having their predecessors around.

Appointment Surprises Lou, Too.

Boudreau's appointment came about innocently enough, or at least it started that way. He went via Cleveland to the Ohio State-Illinois football match in Columbus. He just wanted to visit a few folks, among them Owner Bradley. Much to Lou's surprise the promotion was mentioned. Boudreau was for it.

But he didn't hear anything more until a week ago. Meanwhile the rumor had leaked, and Bradley countered immediately with a declaration that he would make the move without hesitation if the matter of youth wasn't involved.

In the meantime Bradley is said to have made up his mind that the solution could be found by picking from minor league ranks. He wasn't able to land what he wanted so he returned to toying with his first idea. It finally struck him that if unity could be restored it might be done easier by a fellow who liked all the other players and was liked by them. So Boudreau's 24 years didn't block him out.

SCHWENK HALTED BY ST. LOUIS U. IN UPSET, 25 TO 0

St. Louis, Mo., Nov. 29 (AP).—Showing surprising ability to stop Bud Schwenk, the nation's leading passer and ground gainer, St. Louis university upset Washington, 25 to 0, in a Missouri Valley conference football game today.

However, Schwenk shattered two more collegiate records by completing 11 of 34 passes for 127 yards and gaining 29 by rushing to increase his total for the season to 1,929 yards, surpassing the 1,847 yard mark made by Davey Brien of TCU in 1938. It also bettered the 1941 record for 1,842 yards, held until today by Bill Dudley of Virginia.

Schwenk established the new passing record a week ago, but today's results boosted his season total to 114 completions in 234 attempts.

Penn State Wins from South Carolina, 19 to 12

Columbia, S. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—Penn State won from South Carolina, 19 to 12, today in an intersectional football game, which attracted 12,000. Penn State scored two touchdowns in the first period and one in the fourth. South Carolina tallied in the first and third periods.

BEARS TO FACE EAGLES TODAY IN PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 29 [Special].—The Chicago Bears will make their only eastern seaboard touchdown raid of the season tomorrow when they meet the lowly Philadelphia Eagles in Shibe park. The Bears, tho heavy favorites, will be fighting to stay in the race for the western division title of the National Football league.

They must win here today and then beat their cross town rivals, the Cardinals, next Sunday in Comiskey park to gain a tie for first place with Green Bay's Packers, providing the Wisconsin eleven closes its regular schedule today with a victory over the Redskins in Washington.

The Bears and Eagles both use the modern T formation man in motion offense and this is the first time the systems have clashed on a league gridiron. The Bears are at full strength and so are the Eagles.

CARDINALS IN DETROIT

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 29 [Special].—A victory over the Lions by the Cardinals in Briggs stadium tomorrow will clinch third place for the Chicagoans in the western division of the National Football league. The Cards arrived here tonight after drilling all week in Chicago. They will be bidding for their fourth victory of the season and their second straight. The two teams played to a 14 to 14 tie in Chicago earlier in the season.

DISCUSS SALE OF INDIANAPOLIS AS A. A. CLUBS MEET

Seek Working Agreement with Major Team.

Columbus, O., Nov. 29 (AP).—American Association baseball leaders concluded their annual winter meeting tonight by postponing action on all controversial issues and turning their yearly gathering into a hot stove session.

Gossip and unofficial transactions overshadowed the business completed as the moguls delayed action on proposed changes in the 1942 schedule, the league's leading broadcasting agreement plan and the wrangle over postseason playoffs.

President George Trautman said these matters would be considered next Tuesday in Jacksonville, Fla., scene of the annual minor league meeting opening the following day.

Interest at today's gathering centered around a report that the Indianapolis Indians would be sold to a syndicate headed by Frank A. McKinney, Indianapolis banker, and Donie Bush, former diamond star and manager.

It's a Foregone Conclusion.

Dale Miller, Indians' business manager, said it was a foregone conclusion that the club would be sold before the season opens next April. Rumors among owners and managers at the meeting said the deal practically has been completed and might be announced at the Florida gathering, providing Bush is able to line up a connection with a major league team by that time.

Adding to this belief, President Alva Bradley of the Cleveland Indians announced in Cleveland that Indianapolis interests had approached the Tribe regarding a working agreement.

Other gossip involved the filling of St. Paul's vacancies. Walter G. Seegar, president-owner, said he expects to hire a new pilot soon to replace Ralph [Red] Kress, who resigned after last season. Seegar said Morris [Moe] Berg, Chicago White Sox coach, and Wade Killefer, Indianapolis' manager, were leading candidates. Killefer's selection, he explained, hinges on Indianapolis' future.

Some Business Was Official.

While the magnates devoted most of their time to gossip and speculation over possible trades, a measure of official business was transacted. This included:

1] Distribution of players' bonuses altered to give pennant winners $5,000 instead of $4,000 with the second place team to get $2,000 as in the past;

[2] By-laws changed to prohibit starting of doubleheaders after 7:30 p. m. with the home club given the right to determine which game shall be a seven inning contest;

[3] Adoption of a rule specifying that the annual league meeting be held only in an American association city and that it be held prior to the annual minor league conclave;

[4] Increase of the league waiver price, formerly $2,000, to $4,000, excepting players just down from major leagues on whom a waiver of $3,000 was established

ZALE TO RETURN TO GARY TODAY; MAY FIGHT CONN

Townspeople Will Greet Tony at Station.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Nov. 29.—Tony Zale, who once quit professional boxing because he thought himself a failure, returns home to Gary, Ind., tomorrow undisputed middleweight champion of the world. Last night in Madison Square Garden Zale soundly trounced young Georgie Abrams in 15 rounds to remove the last barrier to title recognition already conferred by the National Boxing association.

Zale had no more than returned last night to his 17th floor suite in the Edison hotel than the mayor of Gary, Ind., where Tony was born and reared, and other friends, telephoned to find out his plans. Scores of congratulatory telegrams were received by the former Gary Golden Gloves champion who now has become the third Chicagoland amateur to win a professional title. The other two are Joe Louis and Barney Ross.

Gets Home Today.

Zale left New York this afternoon at 3:30 on the Pennsylvania railroad's General. He will arrive in Gary shortly after 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. And if the enthusiastic telephone conversation was correctly interpreted Gary will give Zale a reception he long will remember.

Zale and Abrams collaborated in 15 rounds last night that stirred Broadway fight fans to conversational heights. Today these New Yorkers, who had made Abrams a 9 to 5 ringside favorite over a boxer they never had seen, unanimously chanted the victor's praises. Zale's courage and tremendous vitality precluded defeat despite his first round knockdown by the challenger.

Zale was dropped by a left hook to the jaw, but just as in his fights with Steve Mamakos and Al Hostak, he recovered quickly and came up readily at the count of 9 by Referee Billy Cavanaugh. Fifty seconds of the round remained and when Abrams couldn't follow up at once, he lost his opportunity just as he later lost his last chance for victory in the eighth round.

Abrams Staggers Zale.

Abrams' long overhand right staggered Zale momentarily in this round but before the bell Zale was again carrying the fight to his rival. The eighth was Abrams' last major offensive and Zale took every round thereafter with the possible exception of the thirteenth, which many believed to be even.

He won nine rounds, lost four including the sixth, which was officially taken away for low punches, and two rounds were even.

May Meet Conn Feb. 13.

Tonight it was feared Abrams' ring career might be at an end. Dr. Charles Turtz, an eye specialist, said the fighter had a 50-50 chance of recovering completely and continuing boxing. He said Abrams already has recovered partial vision in the injured eye.

It is reported a virtual agreement has been reached for Zale to box Billy Conn, former light heavyweight champion, in Madison Square Garden on Feb. 13. All points are said to be agreeable, except that Zale's managers are in favor of a 10 round route, whereas the Conn camp wants 15 rounds. There may be a compromise at 12 rounds. Conn would get 40 per cent and Zale 20 per cent. Conn will appear in two tuneup bouts before meeting the Gary strong boy.

PITT ROLLS OVER AN OLD NEIGHBOR, CARNEGIE, 27 TO 0

Pittsburgh, Pa., Nov. 29 (AP).—Edgar [Special Delivery] Jones carried the touchdown mail for the last time for Pitt today in delivering two 6 point missives as the Panthers swamped Carnegie Tech, 27 to 0, in the 28th renewal of Pittsburgh's back yard rivalry before 19,000.

After helping the Panthers in their first scoring drive in the second period, Jones broke loose for forty-five yards and a touchdown a few minutes later in the same quarter. Less than four minutes after the second half opened, Jones raced again into scoring territory from 18 yards out. Jones averaged 6.5 yards in carrying the ball 17 times.

Bill Dutton played a grand supporting rôle in Jones' finale. The Weston, W. Va., boy scored the first Pitt touchdown from the Tech 1 yard line in the second period and tallied the last score in the final quarter from the half yard line. In between, he gained seventy-six yards in 17 other tries.

EDDIE HAHN, SOX STAR IN '06, DIES IN DES MOINES

Hahn, an outfielder, later played with Des Moines and Wichita in the Western league.

BY WILLIAM FAY.

Doctor Glenn Cunningham came to town again yesterday. Usually when Doctor Cunningham comes to town he carries a little black bag. The little black bag contains spiked shoes and running clothes.

The last time Doctor Cunningham came to town on business he ran a 4:09.9 mile to beat Chuck Fenske in the 1938 Chicago indoor relays. Of course the Doctor can run faster than that—he set the American mile record of 4:04.4 on the Dartmouth college indoor track in 1938.

But yesterday Doctor Cunningham left his little black bag at home in Mount Vernon, Ia. When he got off the train he did not head immediately for the International amphitheater for a prerace rubdown. Instead, he strolled over to the Sherman hotel for the annual meeting of the Midwest College conference.

Doctor's First Time.

It was the first such meeting for Doctor Cunningham, who last April was named director of athletics, physical education, and student health for Cornell [Ia.] college. That's a job Doctor Cunningham has spent a long time preparing for. He worked his way thru Kansas university and was graduated in 1934; he earned his master's degree at Iowa university in 1935 and his Ph. D. at New York university in 1938.

All of which makes Cunningham the only man in history to earn a Ph. D. and set a new record for the mile within 12 months.

"No More Competition."

The doctor had to answer a lot of questions from his colleagues yesterday before he could get down to the business at hand. The questions came from all sides and his answers went something like this:

"I'm feeling great. . . . Sure, I still run every day, but just to keep in shape. No more competition for me. I'm tired running against that stop watch . . . like the new job fine. . . . Say, we had 85 boys out for football this fall—85 out of 300 students—that's a pretty good average. . . . We had a fine cross-country team—placed 11th in the nationals and one of our boys finished in fifth place. . . . Our student health program is coming along—make every student take a thoro physical examination before each school year. . . ."

Adopt Four Items.

Once the meeting started Doctor Cunningham was all business. He was a serious, intent young college executive hard at work. It's a new rôle for the doctor, but he plays it as he did that of the perfect miler—the relentless runner who always could make the crowd stand up by charging off the last turn and passing faltering rivals with the famous Cunningham kick.

[1] Reduction of minimum schedule requirements in football and basketball. Conference members now must meet only five opponents in football instead of six, and 10 basketball opponents instead of 12.

[2] Shift of the annual track, golf, and tennis meets from Cornell to Monmouth on May 15 and 16. The change was necessitated because the new Cornell track will not be completed by spring.

[4] Limited personnel of golf and tennis teams to four men each.

L. S. U. Upsets Tulane, 19-0; Students Fight

New Orleans, La., Nov. 29 (AP).—Louisiana State ended their season today with something that will make their supporters almost forget four earlier defeats—a 19 to 0 victory over Tulane. With about 50,000 spectators, one of whom dropped dead of a heart attack, and about 2,000 fist fights in the stands, L. S. U. outplayed Tulane—something no other team has been able to do all season altho the Green Wave had lost three games.

The Tigers led, 329 to 109, in net yardage, and 18 to 5 in first downs.

Students Fight After Game.

Students of the two schools apparently had heard nothing of an agreement by their student body presidents to prevent fights. They swarmed onto the field after the game for a half hour battle that ended with destruction of the goal posts despite efforts of Tulane boys and policemen to protect them.

Practically all the game was played in Tulane territory, as Leo Bird's passes kept the Tigers knocking on the end zone gates. L. S. U. was in scoring territory at least half a dozen times, besides its touchdown pushes. The Greenies stopped one drive on their 2 yard line and several others near the 20.

TENNESSEE WINS, 26-7.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 29 (AP).—Tennessee's Volunteers rose to their peak form to crush their traditional rival, Vanderbilt, 26 to 7, before 30,000 today and thereby dash the Commodores' hopes for a postseason bowl invitation.

Previously beaten only by Tulane and a convincing winner over Alabama last week, Vanderbilt was pushed all over the field by the savagery of the Tennessee play except for a brief fourth quarter rally. Then the Commodores marched forty-eight yards for their lone touchdown.

Given a big break when Jack Jenkins, Vanderbilt back and leading scorer of the Southeastern conference, fumbled on his own 34, the Vols bottled up the Gold and Black early on splendid kicking by Walter Slater and Johnny Butler.

Slater then sparked two second quarter touchdown drives of thirty-three yards each. The other two touchdowns were largely the doing of another sophomore, Bobby Cifers. He threw a thirteen yard end zone pass to End Bud Hubbell for a score early in the third quarter, and in the waning moments he raced twenty-four yards around end for the final Tennessee touchdown.

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 29 (AP).—A new and thrilling chapter in the long and bitter football rivalry of Georgia and Georgia Tech was written into the turf of Grant field today by the churning cleats of Frank Sinkwich as the red shirted Georgia Bulldogs buried the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech under a 21 to 0 score before 31,000.

Finding the Tech line charging hard and fast to break up the running attack, Sinkwich tossed passes for the Bulldogs' three touchdowns, and Leo Costa added the three extra points.

Georgia's victory, its sixth against one tie and a defeat by Alabama, enhanced the Bulldogs' chances of receiving a post-season bowl bid, with the Orange bowl in Miami the probable spot.

IAC TO COMPETE THIS WEEK IN TWO LEAGUE MATCHES

BY FRANK MASTRO.

All nine teams in the Chicagoland Amateur Boxing league will compete in fourth round matches this week. There will be fighting in five centers with all except the Illinois Athletic club's representatives appearing once. The IAC fighters are scheduled to engage in two league matches, against Fort Sheridan in the IAC gymnasium Wednesday and against the Madison Athletic club in the Madison arena on Friday.

There also will be a show Wednesday between boxers representing Ashland A. C. and West Suburban club in Cicero stadium. In the other matches Catholic Youth organization will face the Savoy A. C. in the Savoy arena Tuesday, and Camp Grant will oppose Milwaukee in the West Allis High school gymnasium in West Allis, Wis., on Thursday.

Camp Grant Shares Second.

Altho the IAC standard bearers have the heaviest schedule, it appears Milwaukee will have the strongest opposition. The soldier boxers from Camp Grant now are tied for second place with the Ashland club, they having scored impressive victories over the West Suburban club and Fort Sheridan in earlier competition. Milwaukee also possesses a decision over Fort Sheridan, but its color bearers rest in fourth position as the result of a default verdict they handed the CYO last week.

That forfeiture by the Milwaukeeans gave the CYO three triumphs as against no defeats and strengthened its hold on first place in the league standings. At the same time, the Savoy boxers are sharing last place with the West Suburban club due to the recent upset dealt them by the Ashland color bearers. Nevertheless, Coach Paddy Kane is not taking any chances of having his CYO proteges suffer a setback in the forthcoming event against the Savoys. He has named one of his strongest squads for the match. The personnel follows:

Worlds vs. Hood.

Not to be outdone by the CYO, Robert Mackie, manager of the Savoy A. C., has selected an equally strong team. He will pit Clayton Worlds against Hood, Fred Peeler against Stephens, Robert Satterfield against McDaniels, Thomas James against Dugo, William Jordan against Bausone, Alvin Bevil against Brown, Robert Jones against White, and Georgie Adams against Dade. The week's schedule:

Tuesday—Catholic Youth Organization vs. Savoy Athletic club at Savoy arena, 47th street and South Parkway.

Wednesday—Ashland Athletic club vs. West Suburban club at Cicero stadium, 19th street and 52d avenue; Fort Sheridan vs. Illinois Athletic club at I. A. C. gymnasium, 112 South Michigan avenue.

Friday—I. A. C. vs. Madison Athletic club at Madison arena, 4711 Madison street.

GEORGETOWN UPSET, 14-6, BY XAVIER ELEVEN

Cincinnati, O., Nov. 29 [Special].—Xavier university upset heavily favored Georgetown this afternoon, 14 to 6. Himmler and Mutryn, a scampering set of young backs, led a sixty-four yard touchdown march in the first quarter. Himmler scored for Xavier on a reverse from the 2 yard line.

Georgetown then passed to a touchdown with Pavich scoring, but missed the kick to trail 7 to 6. Mutryn then scored the second Xavier touchdown on a fake reverse, and Donadio clinched the victory with his second extra point.

Navy's Power Too Much for Army, 14 to 6

or kicking off after the Navy score, chose the latter and soon regretted it, as the Middies promptly drove down the field for their second score. Busik dodged his way back twenty yards and bounced thru the Army line three times on the next five plays which took the ball past midfield.

Here Busik, a bit weary from his labors, was replaced by Clark. The Middies rolled on relentlessly and the biggest gain was Clark's fifteen yard dash around Army's left end. This brought the ball to the 2 yard line. It was still there after Werner and Clark had bounced off the Cadets' forward wall. On the next play, Navy drew a five yard penalty. Then Clark, veering to the right as tho to pass, suddenly spurted and ran right past the Army defenders. Leonard came in and again kicked the extra point.

Army Threat Fails.

Army took the kickoff, and with Mazur again leading the way, worked down to Navy's 17 yard line. But Mazur, rushed, hurriedly passed and the ball was intercepted by Busik.

Navy gained only fifty-four yards in the first half to Army's 119. But it was reversed in the second half. The Annapolis boys picked up 202 yards and the Cadets made only 68. The total was 256 for the Navy to 187 for the Army. Statistics:

Lander to Box in East After Marigold Bout

Eddie Lander, west side lightweight, will invade New York after a 10 round bout with Vic Troise in Marigold Gardens tomorrow. Danny Spunt, manager of the Chicagoan, has signed to have Lander appear in three contests in Manhattan under the direction of Billy McCarney, veteran handler of fighters.

Lander, whose best weight is 134 pounds, will spot Troise about eight pounds since Vic does not expect to carry less than 142 for the impending encounter, his first in Chicago. This probably will be the New Yorker's sole advantage.

Eddie will be in quest of his fifth victory in seven appearances this year. After losing to Gene Ward he knocked out Andy Canal and defeated Bud Cottey. Lander then was held to a draw by Billy Seward, but in a return meeting Ed won the decision.

Nate Bolden, 1937 intercity Golden Gloves middleweight champion, is paired with Henry Jones, Detroit light heavyweight, in an eight round semiwindup. Four round preliminary contests bring together Johnny O'Brien and George Mericka, Buddy Smallwood and Richard Rigall, and Hymie Dabb and Kippy Dumas.

Amateur boxing shows will include those scheduled in Recreation hall, Forest park, tomorrow; in Duncan YMCA, 1515 Monroe street, Tuesday, and Kenwood club, 47th street and Lake Park avenue, on Wednesday.

NOTRE DAME FIVE TEES OFF WITH 49 TO 30 TRIUMPH

Notre Dame, Ind., Nov. 29 [Special].—Notre Dame opened its basketball season with a 4 9to 30 victory over Franklin tonight before 4,000 fans. The Irish were behind, 5 to 0, at the start, but went ahead, 6 to 5, after three minutes of play, and held a 26 to 18 margin at the half. It was the 300th victory for the Irish since George Keogan became head coach.

Charley Butler, Chicago junior forward, playing less than half the game, led the victors with 14 points. Dick Frazell, paced the visitors with 10 points.

Paul Hendrix, hard working Franklin center, got five points in the first two minutes, but Butler, George Sobek, and Capt. Art Pope soon put Notre Dame ahead. Butler maintained the advantage, getting 10 points in the first half.

The Irish used sophomore and junior reserves in the second half. They were slow getting started and led only, 32 to 23, halfway thru the period. Then Bob Faught, 6 foot, 5 inch sophomore center, and Jim Engel, junior guard, began hitting, each getting six points. Notre Dame meets Great Lakes here Wednesday night.

LEE HANDLEY OF PIRATES HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Peoria, Ill., Nov. 29 [Special].—Lee Handley, 27 year old third baseman for the Pittsburgh Pirates, was injured in an auto accident on state highway 150, eight miles west of Peoria early today.

Handley, suffering from head and back injuries, was taken to St. Francis hospital. Dr. C. P. Strause said he did not believe the injuries would affect Handley's baseball career. Handley told state highway police that he was driving east and was blinded by lights of an approaching car, lost control of the car and hit a culvert.

Handley's car was wrecked. He was unconscious when found by Harold Cecil, Brimfield truck driver, who brought aid.

Hawks Seek 5th Straight on Home Ice

Games Tonight

New York at Chicago.
Toronto at Brooklyn.
Montreal at Boston.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The Chicago Blackhawks, who haven't even scented defeat on their home ice in four games this season, tonight will meet the New York Rangers, ancient and honorable foes of the local lads, in a highly important National Hockey league battle on the Chicago Stadium ice.

The aforesaid importance involves a number of matters, notably the congestion in the standings among the Toronto Maple Leafs, the Boston Bruins, and the Hawks themselves. Then there is the immediate presence of the Rangers, who have suddenly aroused themselves from a slow start and have issued public proclamations to the effect that they are going back to the old knock-down-and-drag-out technique they practiced of yore. If their 5 to 4 victory over the Hawks in Madison Square Garden last Tuesday night is any example, a case in which they rallied from a 4 to 3 overtime deficit to win, the Broadway gents are not jesting.

Happy Days Here Again.

The Chicagoans, by the way, yesterday brushed up the SRO sign, one which they have had to hang out for their last three home contests in compiling an aggregate attendance that archive-diggers claim is a record for three consecutive matches. In that trio, the Hawks have played to successive crowds of 18,146, 18,122, and 18,491. All of these pleasing crowd numerals fall into the Stanley cup category, indicating that the local citizenry is right wrought up about the prospects of Manager Paul Thompson and his kids.

The Hawks have won four games on their home rink, but have won only one on the road [against the renamed New York Americans, who now receive their mail in Brooklyn], while tying the Canadiens in Montreal and losing to Toronto, the Rangers, and the Detroit Red Wings.

A New Ranger Goalie.

The Rangers tonight bring a new goalie in Sugar Jim Henry, a nimble young man who has assumed the duties of able Dave Kerr, now retired. James apparently is not only a frisky sort, but a generous one, also. In his first nine games, Henry permitted 33 goals. He has had single game barrages of 8, 6, 4, and 4 directed against him already. An importation from the Rangers' Regina farm, Jim must take the burden of the rap himself, for he still has three of the best defense men in the league in front of him in the persons of Art Coulter, Babe Pratt, and Ott Heller. The fourth New York rear guard party is Bill Juzda, late of Philadelphia, who has taken the place of Murray Patrick, son of the Ranger boss, Lester. Muzz is in the army now.

T. C. U. CONQUERS S. M. U., 15 TO 13, IN FINAL GAME

Fort Worth, Tex., Nov. 29 (AP).—Texas Christian closed the season today with a 15 to 13 victory over Southern Methodist.

A crowd of 15,000 saw T. C. U. finish the season with seven victories, one tie and two losses. The Horned Frogs thus wound up in a deadlock with Texas for second place in the Southwest conference standings.

A field goal by Frank Medanich, sophomore half back, put T. C. U. ahead in the third period, and a long pass to Bruce Alford clinched the game in the fourth quarter.

Arizona Trails, 14-0; Then Beats Kansas State, 28-21

Tucson, Ariz., Nov. 29 (AP).—University of Arizona, leading candidate to represent the Border conference in the New Year's day Sun bowl football game, defeated Kansas State, 28 to 21, today before 10,000 homecoming spectators. The middle westerners held a 14 to 0 half time lead, but Arizona scored two touchdowns in the third period and another in the fourth before Kansas State could punch over another tally in the last minute of the game.

1,200 Entries, 24 Breeds Seek Blue Ribbons.

BY BOB BECKER.

The main event of the fall season for Chicago's dog fanciers—the Western Specialty Clubs association show—drew over 1,200 prospective blue ribbon winners and more than 5,000 fans into the Coliseum yesterday for the opening of the two day schedule of breed judging and special events.

Altho only 24 of the 109 recognized breeds are eligible to compete in the specialty show, there was plenty of variety for spectators. Participants in the breed judging ranged from a tiny Chihuahua weighing only one and a half pounds to several Great Danes which topped 130 pounds.

To add to the contrasts there were puppies just a little over 6 months old benched alongside established champions, long coated collies and Chows as well as smooth haired Boston terriers and dachshunds, and working breeds like German shepherds and Setters sitting serenely on their benches while tiny toy dogs paraded down the aisles.

Award Diploma of Honor.

The first of the feature events was the awarding of a diploma of honor to Mike, a blind Irish setter owned by the Henry Glatke family, Glen Ellyn. Before losing his sight, Mike saved the life of Johnny Glatke by barking to warn his young playmate of an approaching truck while the boy was sledding.

Other features interspersed in the regular schedule of judging included trick routines by a troupe of standard Schnauzers and the first obedience test classes for German shepherds.

T. B. Maginnis, veteran Chicago breeder of Irish terriers and French bulldogs, made a clean sweep of the major awards in the Irish terrier classes when one of his dogs was selected as winner male and another won the triple award of winner female, best of winners, and best of breed.

Masterful Pat Winner Male.

The winner male was Masterful Pat, 2 year old son of Champion Aristocratic Rumhound, and the other Maginnis winner which went on to best of breed was Stormy Splendour. Splendour is only 11 months old, a daughter of Splendid Mavourneen by Champion Gallant Stormer.

Another local exhibitor, Helen Nowicki, took home one of the best of breed trophies as a result of the victory of her Pomeranian—Champion Gold Blackacre King. To win the major award King defeated a kennel mate—Gold Blackacre Queen—and a sable colored male owned by Mrs. Albert Palmer of San Antonio, Tex.

A 7 year old girl who handled a Dobermann Pinscher twice her size was the sensation of the children's handling class sponsored by THE TRIBUNE.

Little Girl, Big Dog.

The youngster is Virginia Lee Wirtz, 938 West 111th street, who weighs 40 pounds, and the dog she tugged into position, to the delight of the spectators, was an 80 pound Dobermann named Dolf von Steurhof. Virginia is a second grade pupil in the St. Catherine of Genoa school, 118th street and Lowe avenue, and when the judge, Thomas M. Halpin, handed her the first prize trophy, the crowd burst into spontaneous applause.

$10,000 Bowie Race Captured by Rosetown

Bowie, Md., Nov. 29 (AP).—George D. Widener's filly, Rosetown, got revenge on Miss Helen Hickman's Aonbarr today as she took a photo finish decision in the $10,000 added Bryan and O'Hara Memorial handicap.

Before a closing day crowd of 20,000 racing fans who basked in Indian summer warmth, Rosetown and Aonbarr put on a stirring stretch duel similar to their battle in the Prince George autumn handicap last Saturday, only this time the filly had the better of it.

Rosetown Leads from Start.

With Jockey Don Meade giving her a hustling ride, Rosetown led from start to finish of the mile and three-sixteenths route, except for one brief instant on the far turn when G. H. Bostwick's Nellie Bly showed in front.

Nellie Bly and C. E. Nelson's Rodin, rescued yesterday from a barn fire at Laurel, finished in a dead heat for third place, four lengths behind Aonbarr, which was the favorite in the large field of 14.

Rosetown, the second choice in the wagering, returned $9.60 for $2. She ran the route in 2 minutes flat and picked up a purse of $8,775 to increase her 1941 earnings to $28,395. It was her eighth victory in 21 starts this year.

Flying Duke Sets Track Mark.

A track record fell in the third race when Flying Duke beat Dizzy B. by a nose. Flying Duke covered the mile and three-quarters in 3:05 2-5, clipping one and three-fifths seconds off the old mark held by Fogarty.

SOUNDS PROTEST AGAINST DEER HUNTING LAW

Lansing, Mich., Nov. 29 [Special].—Abuses of the 1941 act permitting deer hunters to kill either a doe or a buck for camp use during the season closing Sunday brought condemnation of the law yesterday by Percy J. Hoffmaster, director of conservation. Hoffmaster said he would ask the conservation commission, at its December meeting, to go on record for repeal of the act at the next legislative session.

Hoffmaster said hunting parties took out 25,000 camp licenses, far in excess of the expected number, and investigation indicated relatively few of the animals resultantly slain were used for camp purposes. In many cases, conservation officers learned, small sections of meat were hacked from doe carcasses and thrown away to make it appear that some meat had been used in camp before the animals were brought home by hunters.

"Its is obvious," Hoffmaster said, "that hunting parties obtained permits for the sole purpose of getting meat to take home."

BIG 12 CONSIDERS DIVISION RACES; PROPOSE 2 PLANS

Bloomington, Ill., Nov. 29 [Special].—Two proposals that the Big Twelve High School conference be divided into sections, with playoffs to determine championships, were submitted at the annual winter meeting of the league here today in an effort to expedite schedule making, permit more games with natural rivals, and give the conference better championship races.

One plan calls for North and South sections. The northern group would consist of Peoria Central, Peoria Manual, Pekin, Streator, Bloomington, and Lincoln, and the southern of Urbana, Champaign, Mattoon, Danville, Springfield, and Decatur. The other provides for three divisions: North—Peoria Central, Peoria Manual, Pekin, and Streator; Central—Bloomington, Decatur, Springfield, and Lincoln; South—Urbana, Danville, Champaign, and Mattoon.

The conference voted to withhold definite action on the proposals until the March meeting. The stormy session anticipated over the Big Twelve rule which prohibits spring football practice did not materialize.

CITY FELLERS AND COUNTRY MEET—AT HORSE SHOW

Yes, Society Folks Play Quite a Part, Too.

BY HOWARD BARRY.

Once every year the society folks, the country people, and the city fellers get together for an entire week of fun. This sounds so much like a proclamation of the millennium that you may wonder what could possibly be the occasion. The answer is simple. The occasion is the International Horse show.

It opened last night before its customary capacity crowd in the International amphitheater. It will continue thruout the coming week with a succession of programs which will entertain all of the above named classes.

It will bring the society folks into spirited competition thru the medium of their horses. It will give the country people an opportunity to parade the products of their labor and skill before a highly appreciative group of spectators, and it will offer an opportunity for the city fellers to indulge in their annual return to nature.

Little Children, Big Horses.

The opening program proceeded in kaleidoscopic fashion. There were riding exhibitions by boys and girls, some of whom dramatized their tinyness by choosing gigantic horses upon which to demonstrate their skill. There were performances by sleek, smooth stepping saddle animals which went thru the walk, slow gait, trot, rack, and canter with a smooth, flowing motion that intrigued the most practical minded of the onlookers. Even tho an automobile may be a much more efficient method of locomotion, there were few in the crowd who failed to feel a touch of nostalgia after some of the harness horses had displayed their technique.

Of course, there were bands and more bands. There were the thundering six horse teams of magnificent draft animals. The Graham boys and girls, ranging in age from 4 to 19, renewed their brilliant wild western riding exhibitions. And a new sheep dog was on hand.

The Sheep Win One.

And speaking of sheep dog exhibitions—for the first time in many a performance the sheep won the opening engagement last night. Before the week is over, Tim, as the shrewd canine is called, may demonstrate that he is the complete master of his opponents but the sheep rared up and made him to everything but bark for help last night. It took officials, waving programs, white suited attendants and nearly every one but Andy Frain's ushers to get the sheep back into the truck following the performance.

Vanity Fair, a handsome chestnut mare, owned by Miss Arlene Hoier of Glencoe, was the first to make a bid for honors in the show. She took the blue ribbon in the event for three gaited saddle horses as a tune-up for her more important engagements later in the week. She will compete in the $250 amateur stake for horses of her class on Thursday and will try for the $1,000 three gaited championship prize in the closing performance next Saturday.

Snuffy Smith Beaten.

Among the rivals she conquered last night were two which will oppose her in the championship event—Gold Standard and Royal Jester. Gold Standard took second prize last night but Royal Jester was unplaced.

In another three gaited event, Golden Spirit and Bo Peep, owned by Delaine farm and Miss Joan Monroe respectively, finished one, two, in front of two eligibles for the $1,000 stake—Judy Starr and the veteran Snuffy Smith. Neither Golden Spirit nor Bo Peep are eligible for next Saturday's big event.

Wins Two First Prizes.

John F. Cuneo's Hawthorn Farm stable of Libertyville took two first prizes in the opening night's competition. His Wensleydale Pilot, champion of the New York show, in the class for harness horses, and his Stonehedge Rushworth scored in the harness pony event.

Two contenders for the $2,500 five gaited championship stake which will climax the show next Saturday, engaged in a preliminary skirmish last night. Princess Roberta, owned by the Delaine farm, was the winner over H. Leslie Atlass' High Tide. This pair finished one-two in the event for five gaited saddle horses. The show will be continued today with afternoon and evening performances.

A WAIT OF 8 YEARS ENDS FOR LEO—IT WAS WORTH IT

Dousing the Coach Just Part of Celebration.

BY RICHARD RAMEY.

Modest in triumph, even hushed down to a temporary whisper, the Leo High school football squad filed into its locker room under the east stands of Soldiers' field yesterday. They were waiting for Coach Aloysius [Whitey] Cronin to eat some of his own words. Whitey had said, earlier in the day, that he'd submit to a shower bath with his clothes on if Leo would go out and win the city prep championship. Well, Leo whipped Tilden, 46 to 13, so the coach had to keep his promise.

A half dozen husky youngsters shoved Cronin under the dripping water. That bit of hilarity, however brief, was the signal for the first outburst of jubilation—and for a big surprise. Cronin had only a split-second bath—his overcoat wasn't even soaked. Then he called for quiet.

"We're going to elect a captain for 1942, and name the most valuable player to the team for 1941," said Whitey. So Leo, already turning its attention to a year hence, had two elections, and in a hurry. Apparently there wasn't any question in the boys' minds. They did their voting in about two minutes.

Pick Arneberg, Hanlon.

James Arneberg, 163 pound center, and Robert Hanlon, 173 pound full back, were selected as co-captains for next season. And, as if you wouldn't know, Leo's most valuable player was named with shouts in unison: "The Babe!" That is, of course, Henry [Babe] Baranowski, 157 pound quarter back, the most talked of prep athlete this year in Chicago.

Arneberg and Hanlon succeed Frank Lauro, left guard, and Bob Quinn, right end, as Leo's co-leaders. Lauro's mother died last Sunday. He scored the first touchdown yesterday after scooping up a blocked punt.

Hanlon is one of the four sons of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Hanlon, 7201 Merrill avenue. Arneberg, who has two brothers and a sister, is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Arneberg, 8235 Marshfield avenue. Baronowski resides with his mother, Mrs. Sally Baronowski, at 10528 Bensley avenue. He has two brothers and two sisters.

Success—on Fifth Try.

Success, at last, after failure to score a point in four previous city title games, finally had caught up with Cronin and Leo, and the coach was frank to admit that he didn't care to see the team disband. "I'd like to see these boys play a post-season game, if we get an offer," he commented. "But even then the decision will be up to the school officials."

While dozens of hands were extending congratulations, Whitey interrupted in an effort to pass some of the laurels elsewhere. He pointed to Ed Johnson, his assistant. Johnson played quarter back and Cronin full back and half back with the Loyola university team of 1926. Ed has been Whitey's aid for 11 years, ever since Cronin moved to Leo following three years of coaching at St. Rita High.

Almost in cadence, the coaches turned their remarks to Baranowski, as follows: "That boy is a coach's A-1 dream. He can do anything: run, pass, block, tackle, catch passes and punts—and call signals."

All Even Now.

They also were concerned over the well being of all the players, only one of whom couldn't navigate under his own power. John Galvin, a substitute guard, was carried into the dressing room. He had suffered a wrenched knee. Hanlon suffered a rib bruise shortly after his seventy-three yard touchdown run in the first half, but was able to return to action in the fourth quarter.

Charles Harvey, Tilden coach, walked the long trail from the west side of the field to the Leo headquarters, to congratulate Cronin. Yesterday's triumph had evened the count in the rivalry of these coaches. Harvey and Tilden twice won over Cronin and St. Rita, in 1928 and 1929. Cronin and Leo defeated Harvey and Tilden in 1932.

Then Harvey went back to his discouraged Tilden boys. Four of them, he discovered, were injured. John Protopas, 180 pound end, gritted his teeth while a mouth and chin cut were covered with gauze and tape. Earl Hamilton, quarter back, had a sprained ankle; James Harmon, substitute center, a cleat cut on a leg; Ray Schumacher, full back, a severely bruised shoulder.

Long Wait—but Worth It.

"This is no disgrace, losing to a great team like Leo," said Harvey. "They did everything right; we did everything wrong in the first half. And that Baranowski—Bill de Correvont and Don Griffin didn't have anything on him."

The Tilden boys were in no mood to hold any elections. They'll name a most valuable player, a 1942 captain and honorary co-captains for 1941 at a banquet yet to be arranged. Tilden had no captain this season.

The Leo Father's club will honor the city champions tomorrow night at a banquet in the Palmer House. Tom Stidham, Marquette university coach, will be the principal speaker.

And, speaking of father's, the largest dad of a Leo player in the dressing room was Albert Forst, who, back in 1916, won the National AAU heavyweight wrestling championship. His son, Lawrence, plays right tackle for Leo.

Bill Bamrick, Coach Cronin's crony, voiced the sentiments of every one in the room: "We waited eight years for this."

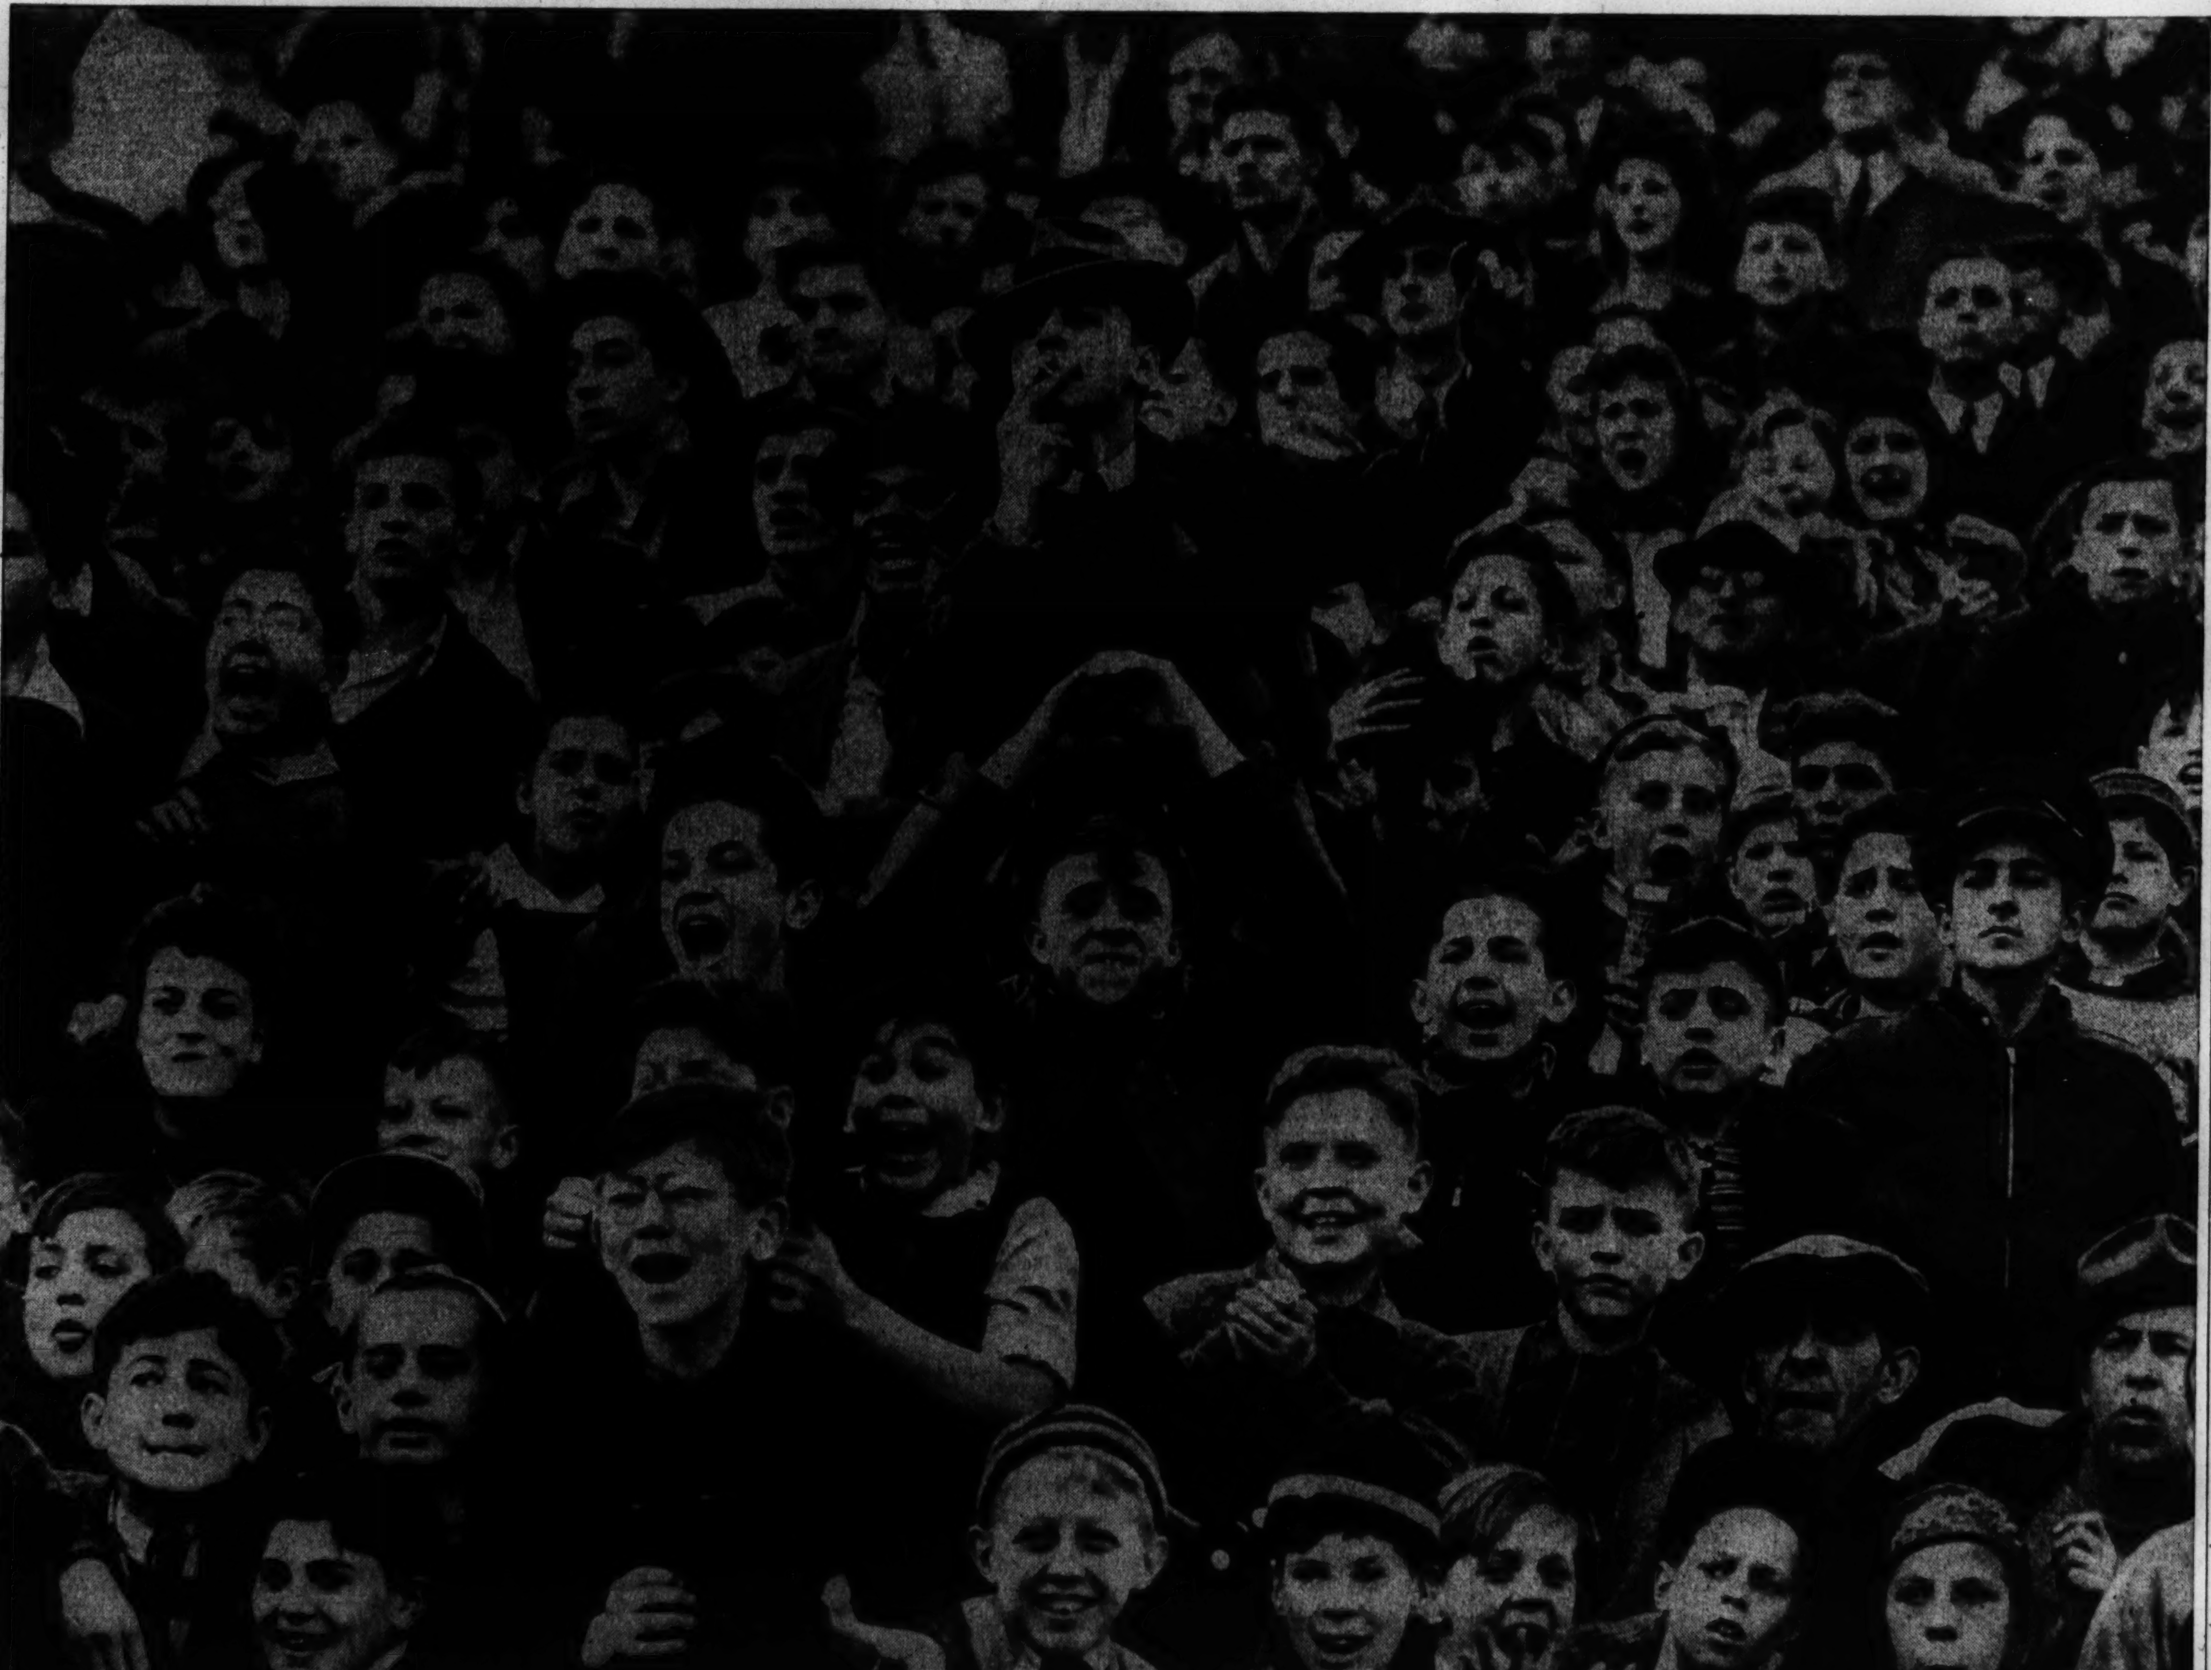
FORTUNES OF FOOTBALL ARE MIRRORED IN THESE FACES AT TITLE GAME



How the tide of battle affected them is plainly shown on the faces of these spectators at yesterday's city prep title contest between Leo of the Catholic league and Tilden Tech of the Public School league. Elation and depression are plainly visible in this candid camera study of part of crowd of 95,000 which saw Leo run over Tilden, 46 to 13, in the game played under the auspices of Chicago's Own Christmas Benefit fund. Leo's line as well as its ball carriers performed brilliantly, the Catholic league champions holding Tilden to a net loss of six yards in the first half.

MARQUETTE WINS FINAL, 28 TO 13, OVER IOWA STATE

Hilltoppers Pull Away in Second Half.

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 29 [Special].—Marquette's football team mixed its aerial and ground game today to roll over Iowa State, 28 to 13, before 8,000 in the final game of the season for both teams.

Half Back Jimmy Richardson of Marquette, by completing three of his six passes today, established a new all-time forward passing percentage record of .637 with 58 completions in 91 attempts for the season. The best previous national mark, .631, was set by Hugh McCullough of Oklahoma in 1938.

A brilliant pass play brought a score for Marquette on the first play after the opening kickoff. The Hilltoppers had received and returned to their own 31 yard line, whence on first down Half Back Bob McCahill threw a fifty yard pass which End John Harrington took in the clear on the Iowa State 25 and went the rest of the way for a touchdown. Quarter Back Chuck Beyer's try for extra point was low.

In the third quarter Half Back Lincoln Stewart of Iowa State intercepted one of Richardson's passes and went fifty yards to score.

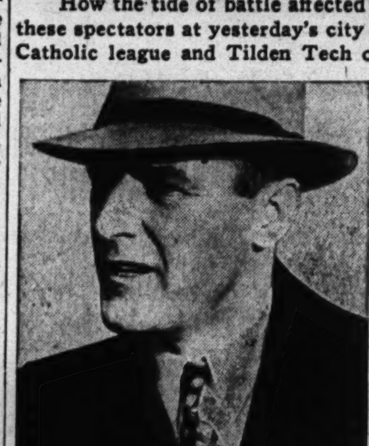
FOOTBALL DOUBLE HEADER.

The Greater Chicago Football league will present a double-header this afternoon in Weber park, Wellington and Ashland avenues. The schedule: St. Barts vs. Beutner Panthers, 12:30; Austin Blues vs. Black Panthers, 2:15.



Whitey Cronin, Leo coach, watches his team roll on to a scoring record for the series.

Fans Gather Early for Big Prep Battle

Dan Lamont, St. Rita High football coach, and Marv Adams of St. Philip were among the Catholic league coaches in Leo's dressing room before the All-City game with Tilden Tech in Soldiers' field yesterday afternoon. The Lions used the east side clubhouse, the lucky spot occupied by Fenger High for its championship engagements in 1938, 1939, and 1940.

There were approximately 60,000 in the stands at 12:45 o'clock, a half hour before the start of the battle. Many youngsters showed up at the gates as early as 9 o'clock and two hours later there was an estimated 30,000 in the lake front arena.

Jim Larkin, member of Tilden Tech's 1928 championship team, and Lou Rymkus, Notre Dame lineman, a graduate of Tilden Tech, were among those visiting the Public School league champions in their dressing room.

The Lions' triumph was the first the Catholic league has scored against the Public School league champions since 1933, when Mount Carmel conquered Harrison Tech, 7 to 0. There have been two ties since Mayor Kelly's benefit fund took over the game in 1934, Fenwick of Oak Park battling Austin to a 19 to 19 deadlock in 1936 and Mount Carmel rallying in the last half to tie Fenger High, 13 to 13, two years ago.

The 46 points brought the Lions' total for the season to 295 for 11 games. The Catholic leaguers have lost only one game in two seasons, the 18 to 0 setback by Fenger in the All-City game last year. It was the second defeat of the season for Tilden Tech, the Public School league winners having lost to West High of Waterloo, Ia., 9 to 0, early in the season. The Yellow Jackets finished the season with nine victories, rolling up 228 points to opponents' 83.

before the end of the first half, which ended with the Lions leading, 39 to 6. This gave the Lions assurance that they could forget those 6 to 0 defeats by Lindblom in 1934 and 1935; the 26 to 0 loss at the hands of Bill De Correvont and his Austin associates four years ago, and the 18 to 0 setback by Fenger High last season.

The Yellow Jackets gained an even break in only one statistical department. They had nine first downs, the same as the Lions. However, five of them were produced on passes, while the Lions gained one in the air and eight by rushing.

Hanlon Is the Hero.

Hanlon, who had taken a back seat while the Lions were hailing the widely publicized Baranowski in their march to the league championship, was the leading individual ground gainer of the game. The Leo full back made eighty-one yards in five attempts. Baranowski made seventy-one yards on six tries, and Hayes had seven chances in picking up sixty-four yards. Schumacher gained thirty-four yards in 14 smashes.

The tale of the Lions' triumph begins at the start of the game, when Baranowski kicked off to Uvodich, who returned twenty-two yards to the Yellow Jackets' 30 yard line. Mazzaco gained a yard, but Uvodich lost two on a reverse. Schumacher made three yards. Then, when he attempted to punt, Baggott rushed in to block the kick. The ball was scooped up by Lauro, who picked up a quartet of blockers and crossed the goal line standing up.

Bob Joins the Parade.

Bob Kelly, another substitute half back, set up the second Leo touchdown after Tackle Larry Forst had recovered Mazzaco's fumble on the Tilden 39 yard line. Leo was penalized five yards for back field in motion on first down, but, on the second play, Kelly, who had replaced Tom McDonald, dashed twenty-nine yards to the Yellow Jackets' 16 yard line. Leo received another five yard penalty, and Baranowski shot a ten yard pass to Baggott. Hanlon made a five yard gain and then Kelly went off his right tackle for the score, a few minutes before the end of the first quarter.

The third and fourth Leo touchdowns required little work. The Lions took possession after Chuck Mehmel's recovery of Earl Hamilton's fumble on the Tilden Tech 41 yard line. In two attempts Baronowski scored his only touchdown of the game, boosting his total for the season to 122 points in 11 games. The midget quarter back covered thirty-three yards on his first attempt, and then, on a fake reverse, went thru the middle of the line for the score. Hanlon a few minutes later made the score 26 to 0 by returning Schumacher's punt seventy-three yards.

Fencl Scores for Tilden.

Jim Gallagher, the Lions' junior tackle, was delegated to kick off after Hanlon's brilliant dash. The ball sailed into the hands of Bill Fencl, Tilden's end, who ran seventy-four yards for Tilden's first touchdown. Five plays later there was another Leo touchdown. Mehmel returned Hamilton's kickoff twenty yards to the Leo 39 yard line. Hayes then fumbled and recovered for a four yard loss. The substitute half back slipped away for ten yards and then added thirty-five yards, finally being brought down on the Tilden 20. On first down, Hayes streaked down the field for a touchdown and, after Donald Murphy's successful kick, the Lions led, 33 to 6.

Carr, substitute for Hanlon at full back, then took his turn at adding a touchdown to the Leo total three plays later. Bartkiewicz returned Hayes' kickoff thirteen yards to the Tilden 33 yard line. Mazzaco attempted a pass, but it was incomplete. He tried another shot and it was intercepted by Carr, who ran forty yards to give the Lions their 39 to 6 advantage at half time.

And Still Another One.

The final Leo score came late in the third quarter when Tilden Tech, deep in its own territory after halting a Lion drive, punted on fourth down. The kick went to Baranowski, who returned nineteen yards to the Tilden 23 yard line. Baranowski's first down pass was incomplete, but the second connected to Baggott, who was stopped on the 11. Mehmel gained three yards, but Baranowski was dropped. Then Babe passed to McDonald, who caught the ball on the 5 yard line and dashed over.

Tilden Tech's second touchdown occurred on the fifth play of the fourth quarter. Schumacher required only four drives to carry it over from the 33 yard line. He gained seven yards on the first try, then drove to the 9 yard line on the next. The big full back was brought down on the 1 yard line, but crashed over on the following attempt.

MICHIGAN STATE DEFEATS WEST VIRGINIA, 14-12

Morgantown, W. Va., Nov. 29 (AP).—Michigan State defeated West Virginia university, 14 to 12, today for another of the hard luck defeats the Mountaineers have suffered in the final half of their season. The men from Michigan made it three victories in three tries over the West Virginians before a crowd of 10,136.

Morgan Gingrass and Mike Schelb both smashed across the goal line in the third period and Bob Sherman made both kicks good for the margin of victory.

Bill Kern's West Virginians, defeated for the first time in two years on their home field, got a head start in the first half after Ike Martin edged over the goal line. Dick McElwee failed to add the point.

After the third period the Mountaineers spraddled into the spread formation which gave them a decision over Kansas four weeks ago and three long passes put the ball in position for Martin to take the ball over for his second score. Again McElwee missed the placement. Lineup:

STOCK RECOVERY FORCES NUDGED OUT BY SKEPTICS

Bad News Cancels Good; Average at New Low.

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—The stock market today emerged from a bad week and an equally poor month with recovery inclinations lacking in most departments. The list again had to contend with the United States-Japanese crisis and widespread tax selling. While cheering dividends and other favorable business items were plentiful, they were not sufficient to offset the general financial skepticism.

Declines of fractions were in the majority at the close, altho modest plus signs were pretty well distributed.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was off .1 at 38.8, another new bottom since June 11, 1940, and on the week showed a net drop of 1.2 points. For November the decline amounted to 1.6 points. It was the seventh successive session in which this composite had been unable to register an advance.

Dealings picked up at intervals and the two hour volume totaled 450,600 shares, largest for any short day since last Dec. 28. Pressing tax offerings helped put the week's volume to more than 4,600,000 shares, a peak since last June.

Boardrooms found little stimulation in battle bulletins from Africa and Russia, nor was much enthusiasm evoked by the house passage of the much battered price control bill.

American Telephone and American Can again stepped into new low ground for 1941. Others to retreat were Bethlehem Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, United States Rubber, Anaconda, Westinghouse Electric, du Pont, Chesapeake & Ohio, Great Northern, and Eastman Kodak.

Santa Fe, New York Central, and Southern railway edged forward altho friends of the rails were disposed to caution pending decision on the wage controversy.

NOVEMBER TRADING.

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Stock transactions in the New York Stock exchange in November totaled 15,052,272 shares, the largest monthly volume since July but far short of the 20,887,311 shares traded in November, 1940. The October total was 13,151,616 shares. Dealings in bonds amounted to $140,983,825 face value in November against $178,899,000 in October and $159,006,000 in November, 1940.

CHICAGO TREND MIXED.

Prices continued unevenly lower on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday in transactions totaling 23,000 shares. Twenty-one issues advanced, 35 declined and 26 closed unchanged. Volume leaders included Commonwealth Edison, 3,950 shares, unchanged at 22⅛, and Chicago corporation, 3,550 shares, unchanged at ⅝.

In the last half hour, after the New York close, General Motors and United States Steel advanced ⅛, while Commonwealth Edison, Libby, McNeill & Libby, Pressed Steel Car, Pullman, Inc., and Pure Oil all declined ⅛.

SHIFTS IN TRADE SEND INDICES TO LOWER LEVELS

Labor and Congress Dictate Trend.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

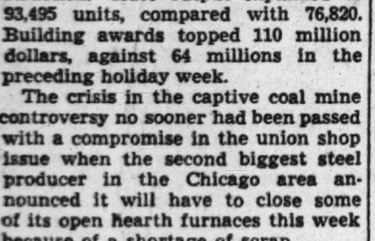
Downward movements predominated in the shiftings of indices of industrial activity last week as business men watched labor developments and actions in congress without getting any clearcut view of what is in prospect.

The only two key industries which pushed up decisively from the preceding week's levels were automobile manufacturing and engineering construction. Auto output expanded to 93,495 units, compared with 76,820. Building awards topped 110 million dollars, against 64 millions in the preceding holiday week.

The crisis in the captive coal mine controversy no sooner had been passed with a compromise in the union shop issue when the second biggest steel producer in the Chicago area announced it will have to close some of its open hearth furnaces this week because of a shortage of scrap.

Feel Pinch of Fuel.

While Chicago area mills pulled thru the coal mine troubles without any serious slackening of ingot output attributable to a lack of coal, plants in the east felt the fuel pinch.



Arrows indicate trend of Associated Press index.

As a result, the national average rate of ingot output dipped to 95.9 per cent of capacity—lowest since mid-August—from 97 the preceding week.

Another indication of a business slackening was an unusually large weekly drop in bank loans in Chicago and New York. Bank clearings decreased also.

Latest available figures on railroad freight loadings and electric power output showed setbacks, but the shrinkages were smaller than expected for the season.

Retail trade recorded a smaller year to year gain than was reported for the preceding week, but merchants were encouraged by the showing made a week ago Saturday following the Thanksgiving holiday.

Busiest Shopping Day.

That Saturday was the busiest the trade could remember for so early a date in the Christmas shopping period, Dun & Bradstreet said. Wholesale trade was reported spotty.

Despite actual declines in steel output, power production and freight loadings, the Associated Press index of industrial activity showed a small gain, because of allowances for normal seasonal tendencies. The index compared as follows:

	Latest week.	Previous week.	Year ago.
Steel mill act.	134.9	134.5	129.7
Electric power prod.	149.0	148.8	134.7
Total car loadings	90.2	90.0	77.5
Composite index	141.4	141.0	118.8

Prices in the stock markets failed to respond to favorable reports of corporation earnings and the continued increase in dividend payments. Traders and industrial leaders alike remained cautious as they waited for final determination of price control, anti-strike legislation, and other issues.

November Bank Clearings Rise; Week's Total Higher

Chicago banks cleared a bigger volume of checks in November than in the 1940 month—$1,714,300,000 against $1,448,500,000—the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. Last week's total was $427,900,000, compared with $391,000,000 in the preceding 5 day week and $334,400,000 in the corresponding 1940 period. Comparisons follow:

	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$63,900,000	$4,700,000
Tuesday	70,100,000	6,200,000
Wednesday	73,700,000	7,200,000
Thursday	78,900,000	9,500,000
Friday	67,000,000	4,800,000
Saturday	76,300,000	9,100,000
Total for week.	427,900,000	41,500,000
Last year	334,400,000	29,800,000
Nov. total	1,714,300,000	147,900,000
Last year	1,448,500,000	121,700,000

SHORTAGE OF SCRAP FORCES CUT IN INLAND STEEL INGOT OUTPUT

Ingot steel production of the Inland Steel company, largest independent producer in the Chicago district, will be cut to 93 per cent of capacity this week, in contrast to rates of 100 to 105 per cent of capacity which have prevailed for the last 14 months, company officials said yesterday.

Inland, which predicted several days ago that production would be curtailed because scrap supplies are nearly exhausted, said that 4 of its 36 open hearths will be taken out of production.

Despite the curtailment at Inland, the Chicago district's steel production rate will increase from last week's 100.1 per cent to 100.3 per cent. This is because the rate at Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, the district's largest producer, is advancing substantially.

Tax Yield Hits Historic Peak at 16.6 Billions

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—Taxes paid in the 1941 fiscal year to federal, state, and local governments were estimated today by the National Industrial Conference board at 16 billion 600 million dollars, an all time record. The former peak was in the preceding fiscal year, the private research organization said, when the collectors got 14 billion 107 millions.

People who paid less than $125 in all forms of taxes during the year got off lightly, the board's figures indicated. That per capita figure also was a record, comparing with $108 in 1938.

Federal Total Rises.

Of the total, the federal government took 7 billion 673 million dollars in the year ended June 30. In 1938, its best previous year, it got 5 billion 937 millions.

The board figured federal receipts for the current fiscal year would reach 12 billion 659 million dollars, an amount higher than the country paid in all kinds of taxes in any year prior to 1938 and more than double the maximum federal taxes of the World war.

State Sum Below Peak.

State collections for fiscal years ended June 30 or earlier were figured at 4 billion 137 millions on the basis of returns from 37 states and estimates on the others. Local taxes took 4 billion 790 millions, still short of the peak of 5 billion 18 millions collected in the fiscal year ended in 1930.

The boost in the income of various governments was a reflection, the board said, of rising national income, growing business activity, and new taxes and higher rates for old levies.

FORD SHIPS TO CARRY ARMS CARGOES; SOME HAVE GONE TO ICELAND

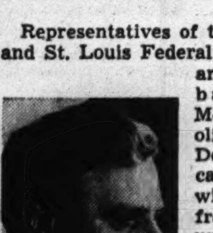
Dearborn, Mich., Nov. 29 (AP).—Ten of the Ford Motor company's ships have been assigned to carry armament cargoes, the company announced today.

Five belong to the Ford ocean fleet and some already have made trips to Iceland. These are the East Indian, Oneida, Onondaga, Lake Ormoc, and Lake Osweya.

The remainder, assigned to haul such vital materials as manganese and sulphur between Atlantic, Gulf, and Caribbean ports, are the Norfolk and Green Island, canal boats; the tug Humrick, and the barges Lake Frumet and Lake Farce.

Call Meetings on Control of Foreign Funds

Representatives of the Minneapolis and St. Louis Federal Reserve banks and of large banks in Des Moines, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Detroit, and Chicago will confer with officials from the treasury's foreign funds control division this week in Chicago.



Clifford S. Young.

Clifford S. Young, president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, announced yesterday that he had invited the bankers to the meeting, which will be held Tuesday and Wednesday. Secretaries of state banking associations in the five states in the Chicago reserve district—Illinois, Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, and Indiana—and also in Minnesota and Missouri, were invited by Young to join in the conference.

Will Visit Other Cities.

The treasury experts will visit six other reserve banks or branches—those in Cleveland, Denver, San Francisco, Dallas, New Orleans, and Atlanta—in the course of a tour which will begin tomorrow, when they will be in Cleveland.

The purpose is to hold extensive discussions on the complicated problems and regulations connected with the government's control of the flow of money and other assets to and from other nations in the asset freezing program.

Meet at 10 a. m. Tuesday.

Representatives of the American Bankers' association will accompany the treasury officials on the visit. The first meeting in Chicago will be at 10 a. m. Tuesday in the reserve bank. Tuesday evening a dinner will be held in the Union League club.

Young disclosed that the treasury group, in addition to aiding in the clarification of funds control regulations at the scheduled large city conferences, will organize speakers' bureaus so that speakers will be available for smaller future meetings.

Retain Larger Lake Fleet to Carry Freight

Shipping company officials said yesterday that an unusually large number of Great Lakes freighters will be operated in December to carry an increasing volume of shipments. The coast guard, meanwhile, said that two airplanes and three ice breakers will provide more assistance than ever in keeping northern shipping routes open.

The Lake Carriers association, which represents operators of 396 ships, said that a larger portion of the fleet will be in service than during any December in recent years. One shipper estimated the number will be twice as large as in 1940.

Altho good shipping weather has been prevailing recently, several days of extreme cold and storms could halt lake shipping abruptly for the winter, operators said.

First Use of Airplanes.

The airplanes, coast guard amphibians from Traverse City, Mich., will direct boats thru the ice areas, marking the first time planes have been assigned to this work. Coast guard officials said that never before have three ice breakers been placed on a regular Great Lakes schedule. The planes and ships likely will be in service two to four weeks, depending on weather conditions, they said.

Some boats are going out of service over the week-end because insurance generally expires on Nov. 30. Others will obtain extensions and operate until Dec. 12, when they would be required to take out new policies at much higher rates. Some of the larger operators, however, carry their own insurance and weather conditions will be the deciding factor in their activities.

Ore Supplies Are Large.

Chicago steel companies indicated their iron ore supplies are large enough to last until spring without further shipments, altho the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation is expected to receive a number of shipments by lake in December.

From Cleveland it was reported several American fleet operators forsook ore hauling during November to transport grain, which offered higher profit. With the winter storage fleet one of the smallest in years there isn't enough storage tonnage to meet demands, it was said. Many boats now loading for storage were chartered at 8½ cents, largest price ever paid by shippers.

DECEMBER ZINC AND LEAD POOL FIGURES FIXED

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—The Office of Production Management ordered producers of metallic zinc today to set aside in December a pool equivalent to 29 per cent of their August production subject to government allocation. Officials said this would produce a supply thruout the industry of about 21,000 short tons for allocation purposes.

All lead refiners were ordered to set aside 15 per cent of their December production, subject to allocation by the government. The December pool is expected to total between 6,000 and 6,500 tons. Metal not allocated from the pool for armament uses next month will be added to the government's lead stock pile.

DEALERS AND OPA TO STUDY AUTO PRICE FREEZING

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—Representatives of automobile dealers thruout the country will meet here Monday with Office of Price Administration executives to discuss possible establishment of a government price ceiling on new automobiles. Manufacturers conferred with OPA last Monday on the plan.

If prices are frozen at current levels, as has been suggested, OPA officials said the maximum probably would affect both wholesale and retail fields—marking the government's first advance into retail price fixing.

'Pendulum Type' Railroad Car

The Santa Fe railway will place its new "pendulum type" passenger car in service shortly on the El Capitan—39¾ hour all coach train between Chicago and Los Angeles—W. K. Etter, vice president, announced yesterday.

An innovation in railroading, the body of the new car is suspended on deep coil springs at its four corners, with the suspension points two feet above the car's center of gravity. This is said to enable the car to bank like an airplane in going around curves. The deep springing is said virtually to eliminate rail joint jolting.

Cortland T. Hill, member of the Hill railway family, backed the building of the car—one of three similar cars constructed by the Pacific Railway Equipment company, Los Angeles.

ONE FIRM BALKS AS COAL PARLEY NEARS DECISION

Crucible Refuses to Commit Itself.

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—President Roosevelt's three man board arbitrating the stormy union shop issue in the captive coal mines announced today that all except one of the steel companies involved had agreed to abide by the decision the board makes.

Earlier in the day the Crucible Steel company announced it was withholding a commitment as to whether it would abide by the forthcoming decision.

Dr. John R. Steelman, representing the public on the board, emerged from a four and a half hour conference with John L. Lewis, president of the CIO United Mine Workers, and Benjamin F. Fairless, president of United States Steel corporation, the other board members, and announced:

"All of the captive mine operators, except one, and the United Mine Workers of America have advised the arbitration board as to the evidence they desire to have considered. The Crucible Steel company, which operates only one mine, has not yet agreed to the procedure."

Meet Again Today.

Steelman said that the board would continue its deliberations until a conclusion was reached, and that the arbitrators would meet again at 10 a. m. [Chicago time] tomorrow. He said that seven steel companies had, by notifying the board as to the evidence they desired to have considered, thus signified directly to the board their willingness to abide by its decision.

The status of the Carter Coal company was uncertain, it was said, because the company was not a captive mine operator, but had been associated with the steel companies thus far in the mine dispute.

Steelman said it appeared unlikely that any representatives would appear personally before the board and added that the board most probably would arrive at its conclusion on the basis of documentary evidence now at hand.

States Crucible's Position.

F. B. Hufnagel, board chairman of Crucible Steel, informed Steelman that "I cannot agree blindly to accept as binding on this company the decision of the arbitration board." He said that he desired Dr. Steelman to advise him whether "it is within the province of the arbitration board to decide that the so-called closed shop or some condition tantamount to it shall be imposed upon the captive coal mines."

"I must have a clear understanding about this before making any commitment for our company," he said. "What questions or issues are to be decided by the arbitration board? The only issue in controversy, as we understand it, has been that of the closed shop.

Cites Roosevelt Statement.

"The President of the United States has declared 'that the government of the United States will not order, nor will congress pass legislation ordering, a so-called closed shop' with respect to nonunion employés of the captive coal mines; that 'the government will never compel these employés to join the union by government decree' because 'that would be too much like the Hitler methods toward labor.'

"With respect to its nonunion employés, this company's policy has been and is precisely the same as that declared by the President on behalf of the United States government and for the same reason."

TRADE UNIT HITS MOVE TO BOOST PAY ROLL TAXES

Directors of the Illinois Manufacturers' association yesterday adopted a resolution opposing additional pay roll taxes under the guise of social security or war emergency measures. The board also assailed what it termed "a movement to federalize unemployment compensation completely under the pretense that such a step is in the interest of national defense."

"The treasury proposal to raise funds for arms purposes under the subterfuge of social security is unfair and deceptive," the resolution said. "Special funds for war emergency purposes should be raised by measures of a temporary nature and should be plainly designated with the exact purposes of such proposals."

Green Appeals for Arms Job; 4,000 Made Idle in Evansville

Plea for Decatur

Springfield, Ill., Nov. 29 (AP).—Gov. Green sent telegrams today to OPM officials in Washington urging them to give "most favorable" consideration to a bid by the Mueller company of Decatur, Ill., manufacturers of plumbing supplies, on a 6 inch shell processing contract estimated at approximately $2,750,000.

The governor cited his recent conferences with federal officials in which he said "I was advised greater consideration would be given Illinois in defense business awards, since we now stand only 14th among all states."

Tax Payments Cited.

"We pay the second largest total of federal taxes and have purchased the second largest amount of defense bonds and stamps," the telegrams said. "We have unsurpassed industrial facilities and management and a great skilled labor supply; but our industries are shutting down and labor is unemployed thru basic materials curtailment."

Gov. Green's message said the Mueller company has never had a defense contract and that it was "impossible for this company to secure basic civilian materials, and defense work is the only means of continuing existence and employment of 800 skilled workmen."

No Relief in Sight

Evansville, Ind., Nov. 29 [Special].—With 4,000 workers thrown out of their jobs by the priorities depression and 2,000 more scheduled to be made idle by Jan. 1, Evansville today found itself classified as a distress area—with no relief in sight.

Layoffs at the Chrysler automobile assembly plant, the Briggs automobile body plant, and factories of Sunbeam Electric and Servel, Inc., have been increasing for three months, civic leaders said.

Circuit Judge John W. Spencer, who presided at the midwest conference in Chicago Sept. 12 in an effort to organize pressure to swing armament contracts to this area, said today there had been no success so far. The only ray of hope is the possibility of landing an airplane turret manufacturing contract. This deal is pending.

Losing Skilled Help Daily.

"We are losing skilled men daily," said Judge Spencer. "They are deserting Evansville for Louisville, St. Louis, Indianapolis, and Nashville.

"We have been classified as a distress area, altho we have a branch office of the Office of Production Management here. We also have a 15 per cent break on prices, but the situation seems to be getting worse. Manufacturers cannot afford to change over their plants for little contracts—and that seems to be all obtainable."

Guiberson Gets Another Diesel Engine Order

Guiberson Diesel Engine company, Chicago, shared in several large orders announced yesterday by the war department. The company's contract amounted to $2,455,301 and was for engines, but no other details were disclosed. Guiberson has received several orders under the armament program.

Award of an order to International Harvester company, Chicago, for $965,985 of tractors was announced by the department.

Award Smaller Contracts.

Smaller contracts placed with Chicago companies included:

Oliver Farm Equipment company, shells, $154,837; American forge division of American Brake Shoe and Foundry company, ammunition, $59,555; Nunn Manufacturing company [Evanston], shells, $66,285; Athey Truss Wheel company, trailers, $41,771; Liquid Carbonic corporation, ammunition, $83,389, and Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation, steel bars, $39,868.

American Distilling company, Pekin, Ill., received a $126,000 contract under which it will convert corn into ethyl alcohol.

Big Gun Order Announced.

Among the larger contracts placed with companies outside of Illinois was one awarded the Olds division of General Motors corporation, for $2,350,000 of guns to be made at Lansing, Mich.

McCord Radiator and Manufacturing company, Detroit, received an order for $2,307,368 of helmets.

Sanderson & Porter, construction firm which built the Elwood Ordnance plant near Joliet, announced it was awarded a $700,000 contract to build 10 additional warehouses at the plant.

The Chicago Association of Commerce reported that 113 Chicago companies received 156 arms program orders and construction contracts amounting to $9,255,000 last week.

People and Events

About 1,500 persons attended the annual dinner of the Illinois Motor Truck Operators' association in the Palmer House last night. Gael Sullivan, Illinois director of the Federal Housing administration, discussed home building as related to the arms program. Nathanial Leverone, chairman of Automatic Canteen company of America, was toastmaster.

C. O. Sappington, M. D., executive director of the American Conference on Industrial Health, will address a luncheon meeting of the Office Management Association of Chicago Thursday in the Morrison hotel.

Harold A. Shanafield has been named office manager of the American Finance conference, national trade association for discount companies, Chicago. He formerly was associated with Montgomery Ward & Co.

W. E. Hines has been promoted to the position of general foreign freight agent of the Santa Fe railroad with headquarters in Chicago. Hines has been with the road since 1908.

Appointment of S. F. Peterson of Aurora as petroleum engineer for the new oil and gas division was announced by the Illinois department of mines and minerals.

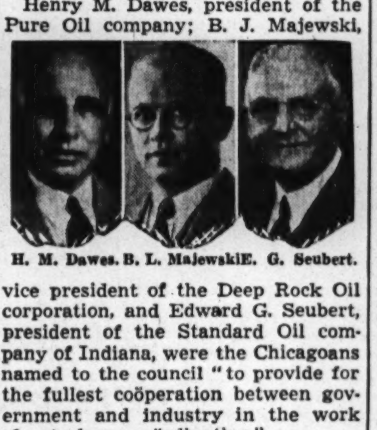
THREE CHICAGOANS NAMED BY ICKES TO OIL TRADE COUNCIL

Three Chicagoans were included in a petroleum industry council of 66 members whose appointment was announced in Washington yesterday by Petroleum Coördinator Harold Ickes.



H. M. Dawes. B. L. Majewski. E. G. Seubert.

Henry M. Dawes, president of the Pure Oil company; B. J. Majewski, vice president of the Deep Rock Oil corporation, and Edward G. Seubert, president of the Standard Oil company of Indiana, were the Chicagoans named to the council "to provide for the fullest coöperation between government and industry in the work of petroleum coördination."

Members of the new group were asked to attend a meeting in Washington on Dec. 8.

'JUSTIFIED' OIL PRICE INCREASES ARE NOT BANNED

Washington, D. C., Nov. 29 (AP).—Price Administrator Leon Henderson informed the petroleum industry today that his office would not prevent "reasonable and justified price increases" on petroleum products. He said he wished to clarify "some misunderstanding and misinterpretation" of his recent request that petroleum and petroleum product prices be stabilized by the industry at levels prevailing Nov. 7.

"The purpose of the request," Henderson declared, "was to prevent any further unauthorized price increases. It was not the intent to prevent any reasonable and justified price increases, provided proposals for such increases are first submitted to this office with proper and adequate data to demonstrate the reasonableness and necessity for the proposed increase and receive its approval.

"This does not mean that the prices which prevailed on Nov. 7 have received the approval of this office. Such approval must necessarily await the investigations being made by this office into crude, refining, marketing, and other costs and prices."

BORDEN TO SPEND 60 MILLIONS THIS YEAR IN MIDWEST

The Borden company will spend more than 60 million dollars in the middle west this year for dairy products, wages, and taxes, Theodore G. Montague, president, announced in Chicago yesterday. Employés in various company units thruout the middle west number 8,000, and stockholders number 10,000, he said.

"The dairy industry has been confronted by an enormous job as a result of the national preparedness program," Montague asserted. He said the upward trend in fresh milk prices thruout the country has not been as proportionately steep as other foods and cited figures of the United States bureau of labor statistics to support his statement.

BRITISH EXPECT U. S. GOLD AID IN POST-WAR PLAN

World Loan Scheme Is Discussed.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Twenty billion dollars of refined gold buried in vaults at Fort Knox, Ky., may be used as the basis for the postwar world reconstruction, according to reports circulating here this week.

What it describes as "very informal and tentative discussions" already are taking place between American and British authorities, says the authoritative Financial Times, on the "question of how best to dispose of the problem of the maldistribution of gold in the postwar period." The creation of an international loan fund based principally on United States gold is said to have been discussed.

The Financial Times emphasized the preliminary nature of the talks, but said:

"The United States authorities are known to be fully aware of the dangers attendant to the present one way traffic in the metal and are understood to be willing to give sympathetic consideration to a plan which has as its object the freeing of dealings in money and commodities generally."

Attitude of British.

The British attitude toward the problem of the redistribution of the gold, the paper said, is that such a redistribution would automatically occur in the court of time if removal of tariff barriers took place. Any move for the rehabilitation of world markets and producing areas could only be welcomed as likely to bring about an even quicker restoration of international trade than would develop without it.

Another aspect of the postwar gold problem was brought out by the financial editor of the Glasgow Herald, who reported the existence of a school of thought "which questions whether America will be prepared indefinitely to take gold—for which it had no present use—in exchange for goods." It is difficult to believe, he added, that the British empire, which is the dominant producer of gold, "will passively accept its demonetisation."

Note Circulation Rises.

Meanwhile the prospect of further increases before the end of the year in the Bank of England's fiduciary note issue—currency bills not backed by gold—became a practical certainty this week when official statistics showed that the active note circulation rose another 3,345,000 pounds [about $13,480,000] to a record total of 710,042,000 pounds [about 2 billion 840 million dollars]. This represents an increase of 117,000,000 pounds [about $468,000,000] in the last 12 months and 170,000,000 pounds [about $680,000,000] since the outbreak of war.

In a review of the situation, reported to have been derived from "authoritative quarters," and circulated this week, it was suggested that the expansion is likely to continue, altho possibly at a slower rate because of heavier deductions of income taxes from wages.

Contending that as long as the various government controls, such as price regulation and rationing, are fully maintained there is no harm in currency expansion, the review said that British currency circulation since the beginning of the war has risen by a smaller percentage than the United States' 39 per cent, Canada's 81 per cent, and Germany's 48 per cent.

Policy Viewed as Failure.

Altho Chancellor of the Exchequer Sir Kingsley Wood persistently has refused to admit the existence of inflation in this country, the rise in the currency is regarded by many financial observers as a measure of the failure of the government's stabilization policy.

During the next fortnight what is said to be the "biggest higher wage campaign in the history of the British trade union movement" will be in full swing and a showdown on the stabilization issue appears imminent.

More than four million workers, including shipbuilders and engineers, are involved in the claims which will come before the national arbitration tribunal. Their demands, it is estimated, would cost the industry more than 80 million pounds [about $320,000,000] yearly, which, added to the increase recently granted to agricultural workers, would add at least 100 million pounds [about $400,000,000] to the annual wage bill.

"AMERICANS PAY MORE."

Who carries the heavier tax burden—the British or the Americans—is a dispute which has grown in intensity in recent months. Attention has been focused upon this question as taxes here and abroad have soared with war and rearmament.

One of the latest studies of taxes in the United States and Great Britain seeks to prove that the American public pays more taxes. The "misconception" that the British load is the more onerous has resulted from the fact that certain income tax rates in the United Kingdom, particularly in the lower brackets, exceed some of the rates in this country's federal income levy, it is contended. British taxes were higher for some years after the World war, the study says, but American taxes began catching up with rising federal and state imposts and, with the new 1941 revenue act, now are in the lead.

The survey compares the taxes of the two countries per capita and in relation to respective national incomes. It asserts that merely to compare on the basis of tax rates, whether they be income, property, death or other levies, is not fair.

Federal, state and local taxes in the United States during the current fiscal year are estimated at 22.5 billion dollars. This was found to give an American per capita tax of $168, compared with $165 in Great Britain. Allowing for a full year of the new taxes in this country, the total is expected to reach 24 billions, or a per capita burden of $180 against $173 for the British on a comparable basis.

On the basis of an estimated national income of 90 billion dollars for the present fiscal year, the study calculates that United States taxes will consume 25 per cent. The British national income, it is said, amounts to 36 billions and will have 22 per cent taken by the tax collector.

The tax study learned that in the United Kingdom the national government is the principal taxing agency, imposing about 90 per cent of total levies. Our federal government imposes about 60 per cent of the total tax bill and until recently took less than 40 per cent, according to the comparison. It was further learned that nearly half the British tax receipts are from income and profits levies, while comparable taxes here produce about one-third of the total.

British local "rates," similar to the American general property tax, were found to be low and productive of only a small portion of tax revenues. On the other hand, the general property tax in the United States, it is said, was the largest source of public revenue until a few years ago and now gives state and local governments more than 4½ billions, or about one-fifth of all tax collections. The study disclosed that the United States uses indirect or "hidden" taxes to a greater extent, federal and state excise and sales levies accounting for about one-fourth of total revenue. British excises were found to furnish approximately one-sixth.

GRAIN FUTURES RISE TO MEET A HIGHER CEILING

Wheat Retains Half Its Early 2 Cent Gain.

BY PHILIP WARDEN.

Announcement from Washington that the price control bill passed by the house left plenty of leeway for a rise in farm commodity prices started trading in grain futures off with a rush yesterday. Wheat prices shot up about 2 cents a bushel until notices of intentions to make heavy deliveries on December contracts tomorrow stalled the advance.

At the close wheat was up ⅞ to 1 cent a bushel, with December contracts at $1.14⅛. Corn advanced ⅜ to ½ cent; oats, ¼ cent; rye, ⅝ to ⅝ cent, and soy beans, 1⅜ to 2⅜ cents.

Traders estimated deliveries on December wheat contracts tomorrow at 1½ million bushels. They placed corn deliveries at 750,000 bushels and said they expected deliveries on rye contracts of 1¼ million bushels.

May Rescind Concessions.

Grain men commented that even tho the bill passed by the house appeared favorable for the farmer, some of the concessions made by the administration to gain passage may be rescinded when the measure reaches the senate. They said the bill probably could not be enacted into law before January.

The bill forbids establishment of any agricultural commodity "ceiling" below 110 per cent of parity [the 1909-'14 level], below Oct. 1 market prices, or below the average price of the commodity between July 1, 1919, and June 30, 1929, whichever is highest.

The department of agriculture estimated yesterday that the parity price of wheat on Nov. 15 was $1.264 a bushel and that the farmer was actually receiving 74 per cent of this price in sales made on the open market. The average farm price of wheat on Oct. 1, was $1.231.

Corn Parity 91.8 Cents.

Parity price for corn on Nov. 15 was 91.8 cents a bushel and the department said the farmer was getting only 69 per cent of this price for his grain on that date. The Oct. 1 price mentioned in the price control bill was 81.9 cents.

Altho the department announced that it had under estimated the advance in prices of the things the farmer had to buy during the last two months, it said it would make no changes in its corn loan rate which is based on the Sept. 15 parity price.

When the department announced that it had had to revise both the Sept. 15 and Oct. 15 parity figures, there was speculation in the grain trade as to whether the loan rates would be changed.

The department stated that the difference between the revised parity price for corn on Sept. 15 of 88.6 cents a bushel and the price it had used for determining its loan rates [88 cents] was so small that no changes would be made.

NOVEMBER MEAT BILLS INCREASE TO 20 YEAR PEAK

Lend-Lease Buying Helps Send Prices Higher.

Consumers have paid more for meat this month than during any other November in more than 20 years, Chicago live stock interests estimated yesterday. Despite the fact tonnage produced and sold has been above normal, prices per pound are substantially above recent years, a survey of the markets disclosed.

High meat bills are attributed to large buying of lend-lease pork and lard for England as well as increased domestic consumer buying power. Only a few of the highest priced beef cuts, such as top loins, ribs, and best rounds were available in wholesale channels at lower cost than in November, 1940. Other beef cuts wholesaled 25 to 35 per cent above a year ago and 10 to 60 per cent higher than in 1939.

Butchers' Costs Advance.

Despite a seasonal decline in pork since late in the summer, costs to butcher shop owners ranged 29 to 65 per cent higher than in 1940, and 45 to 90 per cent higher than in 1939. Lamb cuts were as much as 44 per cent higher.

It was estimated that payments to farmers for the increased supply of meat animals were the largest for any November since 1920.

Farm Returns Soar.

Farm returns from hogs last week averaged $24.30 a head on the Chicago market, compared with $14.50 a year ago and $12.85 two years ago.

The three principal classes of meat animals, steers, hogs, and lambs, together averaged $10.95, compared with $9.25 a year ago and $7.95 two years ago.

A decline of 50 cents in the week's steer average from the 1940 level was more than offset by a rise of $3.95 a hundred pounds in hogs and a $1.75 advance in lambs over last year.

NEXT U. OF C. COURSE ON METEOROLOGY TO HELP U. S. AIR CORPS

Dr. C. G. Rossby, head of the Institute of Meteorology of the University of Chicago, announced yesterday a new meteorologist training program for the army and navy air corps, and the weather bureau. Some of the students also will go into commercial aviation as weather forecasters.

The new program, a renewal of the present course which will graduate 62 students this March, will begin July 1 and continue for three school quarters until March of 1943. Applications are being accepted now.

The army air corps will give 25 scholarships. Applicants who meet air corps requirements will become air cadets and receive $140 and $145 a month plus tuition. Upon completion of the course, they will be commissioned as second lieutenants and assigned to army air fields as weather officers.

The Civil Aeronautics administration will sponsor from 22 to 25 students who have completed their primary flight training program, paying their tuition and $75 for expenses.

CAA students, upon satisfactory completion of the program, may become army weather officers or navy ensigns.

SCHOOL BUDGET $954,373 OVER FIGURE FOR 1941

Pension, Bond Needs Cause Increase.

A tentative 1942 budget for Chicago public schools calling for appropriations totaling $72,377,659 was filed last night with the secretary of the board of education. This is an increase of $954,373 over the 1941 budget.

The budget is based on an anticipated decrease of $950,000 in the building fund tax levy. That decrease, however, is offset by an increase of $837,000 in the teachers' pension and retirement fund and $431,289 in the bond redemption and interest funds.

Cut Required by Law.

The building fund reduction is required by law. The tax rate for teachers' pensions was increased from 8 to 12 cents per $100 valuation by an act of the last legislature. This requires a $2,395,000 levy for the teachers' pension and retirement fund in 1942. It was $1,558,000 this year.

Levies for the bond redemption and interest funds will advance from $3,404,555 to $3,836,844 to meet requirements of previous bond issues, according to Howard P. Savage, business manager of the board.

The tentative budget will be studied by the board in committee sessions. A public hearing also will be conducted. After passage by the board it will be submitted to the city council.

A table showing the amounts available in 1941 and 1942 for expenditures, according to the business manager's estimates:

Fund—	1941.	1942.
Educational	$53,178,295	$53,490,778
Building	9,886,065	9,013,826

Bond redem. and int.	3,065,000	3,453,160
Total	$71,423,286	$72,377,659

The high school lunchroom fund, which is supported entirely by revenue from the sale of lunches, will have an increased sum available for expenditures because of the new student training programs in the schools.

BANKS PROTEST TREASURY RULES ON TRADE CREDIT

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—A group of leading New York commercial banks, it was learned today, has appealed to the treasury department to amend its general licenses covering foreign trade transactions.

The plea was reported based on a growing refusal of foreign shippers to accept irrevocable letters of credit of New York banks unless shippers were able to confirm the letters thru their local banks. Adopting this course, it was said, were many shippers in South America and the East Indies.

Considered a factor in leading to the present situation was the order issued by the treasury department recently to withhold payments on letters of credit issued to finance shipments of goods to French North Africa. The credits under which the goods were to be shipped were thought to be irrevocable until their status was changed by the treasury, banking sources said.

The financing of virtually all of the shipments to French North Africa has been handled by French-American Banking corporation, formed after the World war by American and French capital.

5 CIRCUIT JUDGES ORDER INQUIRY ON DAVIS OIL RULING

Act After Refineries File Formal Complaint.

Thomas R. White.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 29 (AP).—The five judges of the 3d U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals today ordered an investigation of a 1935 decision written by their resigned colleague, J. Warren Davis, in a case involving title to certain patents important to the oil industry.

On petition from several refining companies affected by the decision, the court appointed Thomas Raeburn White, Philadelphia attorney, as special master to conduct the inquiry and empowered him to call for all necessary records and witnesses.

The Circuit court's order directed White to "report to this court his findings and conclusions concerning the relationships and dealings, if any, between Universal Oil Products company, Morgan S. Kaufman, and former Circuit Court Judge J. Warren Davis . . . and whether there was in connection therewith such fraud, corruption, obstruction, or distortion of justice as tainted and invalidated the judgments rendered."

Kaufman of Scranton, Pa., was attorney for Universal.

Tried Twice in U. S. Court.

Davis and Kaufman were tried twice in federal court here this year on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States in connection with bankruptcy proceedings of William Fox, one time motion picture magnate. The government named Kaufman as "go between" for Davis and Fox.

Both trials ended in jury disagreements and the indictments later were dismissed. Davis submitted his resignation as a retired member of the court last week and President Roosevelt accepted it Tuesday. Impeachment proceedings against Davis have been asked in congress.

Fox pleaded guilty to the conspiracy and fraud charges. He has been sentenced to a year in prison, but is at liberty on bail pending an appeal.

Case Involves Patents.

The court's order today involves a decision by Judge Davis in favor of the Universal Oil Products company in patent litigation against the Root Refining company.

The case came before the United States Circuit court on appeal from the federal District court in Wilmington, Del. Universal won in both courts and the Supreme court refused to grant Root a review.

HITCH-HIKER SEES WORLD; CHOOSES TRAVEL AS WORK

Friers, graduated last year from the University of Michigan, moved here from Saginaw, Mich., with his pretty blonde bride, Betty, a few days ago. And the settling down mustn't be taken too literally. Friers and his wife today are in Denver, Colo., where he has a lecture date. They hope to make the filming of travel scenes their life work.

It all began when Friers was 12 years old [he's 25 now], sick in bed, and had nothing to do but study a highway atlas. As soon as he was out of bed he hit the road for Pittsburgh, Pa., which he'd always wanted to see. He made it there from Saginaw in two days and his doom was sealed.

Since that time [and this explains why it took him nine years to complete a four year course at Ann Arbor] he's been in 35 countries and bummed rides on or in autos, trucks, oxcarts, planes, burros, canoes, dugouts [a kind of boat] bicycles [in the Netherlands], and at least one motorcycle, that one driven by one of Hitler's crack SS 'guards.

BEDDING MAKERS TO STUDY EFFECT OF PRIORITY RULE

How seriously priorities will affect sound sleeping will be the major topic for discussion when the National Association of Bedding Manufacturers opens its 26th annual convention in the Stevens hotel Tuesday for a three day session.

Manufacturers of sleeping equipment face a shortage of materials needed for continued operations, it was said. Metal for spring coils and cotton linters are being diverted to armament production channels.

Several OPM officials are scheduled to speak at the meetings.

Kiwanis to Help Knudsen Publicize Arms Program

Cleveland, O., Nov. 29.—A campaign to spread facts of the national defense program will be undertaken early next year by Kiwanis International, President Charles S. Donley of Pittsburgh announced here today. He said William S. Knudsen, co-director of the Office of Production Management, asked Kiwanis aid, asserting that persons responsible for the defense effort could not do the job unless the minds of the people were prepared.

Priorities Jolt Middle Class; 100 Arms Jobs Await Takers

Men Over 40 Hit

The great American middle class, comprising persons earning from three to ten thousand dollars yearly, is hit hardest by the curtailed income and increased taxes that are offshoots of the arms program.

This was demonstrated in graphic terms yesterday by the Men-Over-Forty club, a self-help organization which finds jobs for executives over 40 who have lost their jobs thru no fault of their own.

Dozen Lose Jobs.

C. H. Monroe, vice president of the club, said that in the last few weeks the inroads of government curtailment into civilian business have brought 12 business men and executives to the club seeking new employment. Some of the casualties were:

A plumbing contractor who cannot serve his customers because he cannot obtain pipe and other materials.

A sales manager whose company's operations have been reduced to such a low level that it has little to sell.

A plant manager discharged by his company because operations had to be discontinued after stockpiles of raw materials were exhausted and could not be replenished.

Have Mature Experience.

Monroe observed that the applicants were trained and had mature experience in business and industry. They owned their homes in middle class communities and had assumed responsibilities which required a substantial income. Loss of positions which they had held for years, thru depression and recession meant an about face which entailed many hardships, Monroe said.

Priorities unemployment is a new threat to the executive group, Monroe said. However, other influences continue to throw men over 40 out of work.

Monroe referred to the case history of a customer's man employed by a La Salle street brokerage house. After many years in the securities business, during which he earned as much as $10,000 a year, the stock salesman found his income dwindling until it dropped to a level at which he no longer could support his family and maintain their home.

Brokerage Business Slipping.

"My objective," he wrote in his application, "is to make a connection with some firm where I can be of service, earn a living, and continue to live in the present manner and style of our local community [not high hat]. I feel that the stock and bond business is about all thru.

"With less and less speculation and more and more government control and regulation, there seems to me small chance that these business firms can survive. I have watched the trend year by year swing away from my type of business and now I want to make that change, if possible, which I should have made several years ago."

Open to Women

Approximately 100 skilled mechanics and ordnance inspectors are needed to fill jobs paying up to $9.12 a day in the Rock Island arsenal and in private plants manufacturing war materials, J. V. Swanson, district manager of the United States civil service commission, said yesterday.

The greatest need, said Swanson, is for ordnance inspectors. These jobs fall into three grades. The first, associate inspector, pays $2,000 a year and requires three years experience as a materials inspector. The other two grades are assistant, which pays $1,800 and requires two years' experience, and junior, which pays $1,620 and requires one year of experience.

Women May Apply.

"Women will be accepted for these jobs if they have proper qualifications," Swanson said. "We already have more than a score of women working as inspectors and they are doing a good job. Many women factory workers have the qualifications for the junior grade and they may, if they apply themselves, be promoted to associate inspector."

Operators of automatic screw machines are needed at the arsenal, Swanson said. These jobs pay from $7.52 to $8.64 a day and require six months previous experience. The same term of experience is needed for precision tool grinders who receive $6.88 to $9.12 a day.

There are also jobs at the arsenal, Swanson said, for sheet metal machine operators, tool makers, heat treaters, and heat treater helpers. The machine operators are paid $5.60 to $7.20 a day and must have a minimum of three months training or experience on metal working machines.

$7.28 for Heat Treaters.

Heat treaters earn from $7.28 to $8.88 a day and must have completed four years of apprenticeship. Helpers receive $5.28 to $6.88 a day and must have six months of experience. Tool makers are paid from $8.48 to $9.60 a day and must have four years of apprenticeship.

The age limits for most of the jobs are 18 and 62 years. Applicants may obtain blanks at first or second class postoffices, the civil service manager's office on the 11th floor of the Chicago postoffice, or at the civil service branch in Rock Island. Applications may be made in person or by mail.

$10,000—MUSIC IN ALL OF '42 FOR 1,000 CHILDREN

Civic Group Asks You to Help.

For $10,000 the Civic Music association of Chicago can take the luxury of good music into the lives of 1,000 additional children during 1942.

Today, the first time in 10 years it has been necessary to make a public campaign, the association is launching a membership drive. For a five dollar bill you can become an annual member.

Miss Werra Schuette, executive secretary, said yesterday that the drive is not merely to continue the present work in slum districts, orphanages and underprivileged areas, but to enlarge the work.

What Gift Buys.

Here's what your money will buy: Ten dollars provides music for one class during the entire nine month season; $25 provides teacher and music for one class for one month; $100 provides entire expense of one class for three months, and $250 provides class for a year.

At present there are 13 choruses, including about 1,000 children, in the city. Each week during the fall, winter and spring, the children meet and rehearse the songs they have learned.

At present the choruses are polishing up their Christmas carols and after the first of the year will rehearse for their spring festival.

Orchestra Organized.

At the suggestion of Dr. Frederick Stock, director of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, the association organized the Civic Orchestra of Chicago.

Miss Schuette outlined a few of the reasons for the association's existence:

"An opportunity to sing under competent teachers should be part of every child's heritage. And by acquainting these children with the best in music, we help to create a love of music. When those children mature, they will give much needed audience support to our symphony concerts and operatic presentations."

How to Enroll.

Membership applications, accompanied by money order or check payable to the Civic Music association, may be mailed to 410 South Michigan avenue.

Dr. Stock is honorary president of the association. Henry B. Vanzwoll is president, G. T. Hellmuth and Mrs. Frederic W. Upham, vice presidents; Miss Priscilla Carver, secretary; Edwin S. Fetcher, treasurer, and Marx E. Oberdorfer, musical director.

Druggists to Keep Public Informed on Price Moves

The executive committee of the National Association of Retail Druggists has ordered the creation of a consumer information bureau to keep the public advised on price conditions in retail drugs, and the formation of a committee to supply information to the Office of Production Management and the Office of Price Administration.

WAR CUTS OFF SUGAR SUPPLY OF BOOTLEGGERS

Buy 1 Pound Packages from Grocers.

Bootleggers are having a tough time in Chicago these days in spite of the new federal taxes which increased their potential profits one-third. That was the observation yesterday of E. C. Yellowley, district supervisor of the federal alcohol tax unit.

Like many other small, poorly organized industries, extralegal distilling is afflicted with creeping paralysis resulting from lack of raw materials caused by the war in Europe. Bootleggers' misfortunes are further aggravated, said Yellowley, by a new attack launched within the last two weeks by agents of the tax unit.

Both Yellowley's campaign and the war strike at the same vulnerable spot in the alley distiller's business—his supply of sugar. Without his pound of sugar the cooker can't make his gallon of mash and without his mash there is no illicit alcohol.

Harder to Divest Sugar.

"Large stills use enormous quantities of sugar," Yellowley said. "A still of 1,000 gallons capacity consumes 80,000 pounds of sugar a week. Now that sugar is becoming more and more vital to our defense effort supplies are more restricted. Consequently we are able to keep a lot closer check on illegal diversion."

"At the same time we are carrying on an educational campaign among sugar dealers. We show them that 100 pounds of sugar will yield about seven gallons of 190 proof alcohol and that the federal tax on that quantity will be $53.20.

"When we show that the merchant who takes a bootlegger's order for the 10 cents a hundredweight profit he can make is aiding the bootlegger to beat the government out of $53.20 we usually can be assured of his coöperation. If stronger persuasion is needed we can point to four or five dealers who are serving penitentiary sentences for diverting sugar to bootleggers."

Buy Now from Grocers.

How well the campaign is succeeding has been demonstrated twice within the last two weeks, Yellowley said. On one of these occasions agents raided a still at the rear of 2049 Dickens street and found a storeroom stacked high with one pound sugar cartons of a kind sold in chain stores.

The attendants told the agents that it was impossible to obtain sugar in truck and carload lots as they formerly had and that they now sent out men to buy the cartons five pounds at a time in different stores. Instead of paying $5.25 a hundred pounds they paid about $9 and a man with a car couldn't buy much more than 300 pounds a day. As a consequence the still ran only two or three days out of ten.

Third Source Cut Off.

Another still raided last week at the rear of 1413 Fillmore street was also operating on sugar bought in quantities of five to 10 pounds in neighborhood stores.

"One by one we have shut off the bootleggers' sources of mash," Yellowed said. "They formerly used corn sugar. When manufacturers agreed to refuse to supply it they turned to molasses. Coöperation of manufacturers cut off this supply also.

"When they began to use refined sugar we were confronted with a really tough problem since it has so many legitimate uses that diverting it was very hard to detect. Now, however, our new missionary work among the wholesalers plus the tightening up of the supply as a result of the war is beginning to show amazing results."

FIERCEST BRAZIL INDIANS TAKE TO WARPATH AGAIN

Slay Six of Peace Mission in New Outbreak.

BY ANTHONY PATRIC.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil [By air mail]—The Chavantes Indians, whose villages stretch along the banks of the tragic Rio das Mortes [river of death] in the jungle of Matto Grosso, once more have declared war on the white people. Latest victims of the fierce tribe were six members of an official commission which sought to make peace with the Indians. Altho the massacre took place about Nov. 14 the bodies of the victims still were being hunted two weeks later.

The expedition, after building a camp near the Rancador plateau, in the Araguaya-Xingu valley, made contact with the Chavantes, who invited the party to their village. There gifts were given to the Indians, who offered fine fruit and other food to the white men, whose supplies had run low.

Dr. Genesio Pimentel Barbosa, head of the expedition, told the Indians of the Brazilian government's wish to establish friendly relations with the tribe. Within a short time, however, the members of the party who had eaten the fruit given them by the Indians suddenly became ill. Sensing what was wrong Feliciano Oldra, who had not tasted the food, made his escape as the Indians massacred the other members of the peace commission with arrows and machetes.

Find Food Was Poisoned.

Feliciano Oldra took some of the food with him when he escaped and it was found to contain a powerful poison, which had drugged the other members of the party.

The Chavantes are reputed to be the fiercest Indians in Brazil and the most difficult to conquer and civilize. All previous attempts to establish friendly relations with the savages, undisputed owners of the Rio das Mortes and Rancador plateau region, have ended tragically. Among their victims is believed to be Col. Fawsett, a British explorer lost many years ago in the wilds inhabited by the Chavantes. Several other peace commissions have fallen victim to the Indians' poisoned arrows without attempting to fight back with their rifles, because of the Indian Bureau's rule that its expeditions must "die if necessary, but never kill."

While the Indian Bureau claims that practically every other Indian tribe has accepted peace offers in the last 10 years, the Chavantes have continued an inherent war against the whites. This is believed due to the parties of adventurers which have penetrated the Xingu and Rancador regions in search of the legendary mineral wealth of the area and mistreated the Chavantes.

Stalk Victims for Many Days.

On the other hand, Will Aurelli, a newspaper man and explorer who led an expedition to the top of the Rancador plateau, holds that the Chavantes kill merely for the pleasure of killing, often stalking a prospector or an Indian of another tribe for many days before slaying him with a poisonous arrow.

According to Gen. Candido Rondon, director general of the Indian Bureau, the Chavantes believe all civilized persons form a single tribe, the whites, who are powerful and cruel to the Indians. Because of this enmity, the Chavantes carry on a war against any whites who enter their jungle domain.

Explaining the Indians' hatred of the whites, Gen. Rondon related this story told to him by the Indian chief Arita of the Matto Grosso plateau:

"Amuri [great chief], everything that you see once belong to Arita. Fish, game, trees, and rivers were the property of Arita. But one day white people arrived here, they worked with us for a time, and one morning they captured us and took up to a city as slaves. This is the reason why we are bad and hate the whites."

Gen. Rondon said the expedition which captured the Indians was that of Antonio Pires dos Campos, which invaded the Indian territory in 1718.

Altho the latest attempt to pacify the Chavantes has failed, the Indian Bureau has sent another peace commission into the jungle in an effort to protect the farmers living along the Araguaya and Xingu rivers because it is feared that the massacre may be only the beginning of a bloody outbreak by the Chavantes.

SPEEDY DECISION ASKED IN FEDERAL ALUMINUM CASE

New York, Nov. 29 (AP).—The government sought a short cut today to a final decision in the Sherman anti-trust law suit against Aluminum Company of America, Aluminum, Ltd., of Canada, and 60 co-defendants.

Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold declared in federal court that "the importance of aluminum in this emergency is such that speedy clarification of the situation should be brought about without unnecessary delay."

Judge Francis G. Caffey reserved decision on Arnold's motion to dispense with the filing of formal findings of fact and conclusions of law. Last month he ruled in a lengthy oral opinion that the government had failed to prove charges of monopolization, conspiracy, and other misconduct.

Arnold asked the court either to designate his ruling as final or to dismiss the government complaint without opinion so that the case might be taken immediately to the United States Supreme court.

DAY by DAY on the FARM by BOB BECKER

Fox vs. Crow.

November 29, 1941.

TWO cunning strategists of the outdoor world, the red fox and the crow, matched their wariness this week on the Du Page county farm and the crow placed first. The story of how the red fox tried to close in on a couple of crows that were feeding in the field came to light because there was a little snow on the ground—enough to record the ground movements of all wild creatures from foxes to field mice.

One of the men on the farm was quick to read the story in the snow and see how Sir Reynard tried to stalk the crows. He followed the fox and crow tracks until the big black birds took to wing. There were no indications that the smart fox had been able to make a pounce on the smart birds, nor were there signs of a struggle. So the wary old crows fooled their adversary. This is not surprising because the crow, its wits sharpened by the constant watch it must maintain against human enemies, is hard to fool most any time or any place.

Another Fox Story.

The snow told another fox story this week, one that caused considerable comment among the farm workers. There were two of these animals in the fields earlier in the week. One of the men found the telltale tracks of the pair. He reports that the distance between the footmarks showed they were trotting together.

The Du Page county farm doesn't have a monopoly on foxes this season. Ralph H. Churchill, a Chicago sportsman, writes that while he was hunting rabbits near Dundee recently his two beagle hounds jumped a fox. The dogs drove the animal to him as tho Mr. Reynard was just another rabbit.

The tinkling Swiss bells worn by some of the Southdown and Karakul sheep on the farm still are getting attention from bell collectors. Recently Mrs. Joseph M. Johnson, Beverly Hills, visited the farm to obtain one of these instruments so that she could complete her collection of Swiss live stock bells. She has five graduated sizes of the bells all stamped with the same date [1878] and all bearing the name "Saignelegier," the Swiss town in which the bell foundry was situated.

[TRIBUNE Photo.]

One of the sheep bells being used on the Southdowns and Karakuls at the Wheaton farm. The date inscribed on one side (1878) signifies the year in which the bell die was cast. The name of the Swiss town in which the foundry was located also is inscribed on the bell.

More Woodpeckers Stay.

There is every indication that more redheaded woodpeckers will stay in Chicagoland this winter than in previous years on account of the bountiful acorn crop. We have discovered three of these birds this fall. [Last year we saw none this late.] The birds have taken up winter quarters near a group of oaks that produced unusually large crops of acorns and we have a hunch that they have stored up many of them in tree holes and bark crevices.

When we watched the redheads the other morning they were sparring with starlings for the most desirable tree cavities, which make winter quarters for the birds. If readers have noticed redheaded woodpeckers in their yards, especially around feeding stations, we would like to know the localities in which the birds are staying.

CASH FOR Winter Bills

Don't let winter expenses get you head over heels in debt. Ask the Commonwealth manager to help you. He will show you how to arrange small, convenient payments on any bills you now owe. He will also go over, with you, the numerous extra items of expense that are associated with the winter season and show you how to pay for those things with the very least effort and inconvenience. By providing you with the cash to buy what you need now, he can protect you against rising prices and thus save you much more than the cost of the loan. Why not stop in today, or better yet, phone for complete details.

EVEN IN HOLIDAY TIME TOURISTS LEAVE FIRESIDE

Winter Travel Season Opening Nears.

BY HAL FOUST.

Going away for the holidays? Thousands will point their radiators south in the next few weeks, and many more thousands will covet prospects. We're a restless generation of automobile owners to prefer a driver's seat to a fireside chair, maybe a little balmy when this preference continues thru Christmas.

But we're that way. Florida and California resorts are vying in their reports of early arrivals. New Mexico and Arizona are receiving dudes. The gulf coast is welcoming fishermen and golfers.

THE TRIBUNE'S public service office and the Chicago Motor club's travel bureau report an unprecedented number of inquiries about routes to the south. All indications are that the 1941-'42 winter travel volume will be another record breaker, following seven previous winters each a successive banner high.

Christmas in Tourist Camps.

In expensive Florida hotels, rich children will receive presents from carpets of white cotton under trees imported from Vermont. Red paper bells will hang from ceilings at expensive drinking places. Red and green lights will garland tropical gardens of expensive winter homes.

In the tourist camps of Florida, elderly couples will sing carols and wish they were home with the grandchildren for just that one day. Non-stop vacationists will continue their quest for the scene beyond the crest or curve ahead, pausing in observance of the holiday only long enough for the turkey special blue plate at road side lunch counters.

At dude ranches of Arizona and New Mexico, hired hands will ride broncs and rope calves in holiday rodeos and at some places a few overdressed Indians will be rustled into a tomtom shuffle for the entertainment of the palefaces. In Madrid, N. M., most of the residents of the small mining town participate in a nationally famous Christmas pageant.

California Spectacles.

California has its Christmas spectacles. At Altadena, a suburb of Los Angeles, a mile of cedars are illuminated with holiday colors. The Elizabeth church there, a replica of the Lourdes shrine, portrays a nativity tableau.

At Huntington Beach, Cal., an oil well derrick is decorated like a Christmas tree with rocker arms supporting Santa Claus. In Yosemite and King's Canyon, the national park service presents outdoor yuletide ceremonies.

If a winter vacation is designed to escape bad weather, it's an ideal time to tour the south, away from the dark of Chicagoland during the shortest days of the year. Many select the holidays for midwinter trips because children have two weeks' Christmas vacation from schools. But from a sentimental standpoint—well, a lot of the motor trippers far from home are glad when the calendars record Dec. 26.

VOICE OF TRAFFIC

A TOAST TO HAL FOUST.

Chicago, Nov. 28.—Hal Foust's article in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE was one of the most timely, instructive and elucidating articles on the subject of drinking and driving. It should be read by all who imbibe and by all who have anything to do with law enforcement, from policemen to judges. DR. A. A. HANSON.

ABSURDITY.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—The absurdity of passing a traffic ordinance and then not enforcing it is seen in the case of Dorchester avenue, designated as a one-way street in July. After four months the number of violations is quite noticeable. Too many are still using Dorchester as a two-way thorofare.

It is true that casual drivers will fail to see the many directional signs posted along the street but there is little excuse for residents of the neighborhood who know that this ordinance exists.

Apparently many disregard the law in this instance because it serves their personal convenience. This is true of those who turn left out of 47th place and north onto Dorchester from 48th. These turns, of course, are the short way to the Outer drive.

Altho originally opposed to naming Dorchester as a one-way street, I still believe that if the ordinance is to be continued that it should be enforced to the letter and spirit of the law.

Drivers who "get away with it" under such circumstances are strengthened in their belief that traffic regulations apply only to the other fellow.

SHERWIN MURPHY.

LAWRENCE AND WOLCOTT.

Chicago, Nov. 25.—A stop sign where motorists are inclined to debate whether to stop or not exists at Lawrence avenue and Wolcott. Pedestrians are confused and are not inclined to risk crossing. Recently a Negro chauffeur driving a "180" Packard shook his fist at me because he had to stop for me. I reminded him that Wolcott was a stop street. A policeman is on duty here part of the time but not at the time of this incident. L. B.

Chicago, Nov. 27.—If you really want a free Turkish bath try driving an automobile on either Seneca street or De Witt court in the Streeterville district of the near north side. Here are two narrow lanes with cars parked on both sides. It is absolutely impossible for two machines to pass each other on these streets which are parallel and only one block apart.

If one happens to drive on Seneca or De Witt and meets another petrol chariot, then the fun starts as either gas buggy custodian must give in, but who? The kids listen to some swear words they already know, and the best shouter wins.

I have written Ald. Dorsey Crowe requesting De Witt and Seneca be made one-way streets several years ago, but the finger bowl set of the near north side just suffers on and on.

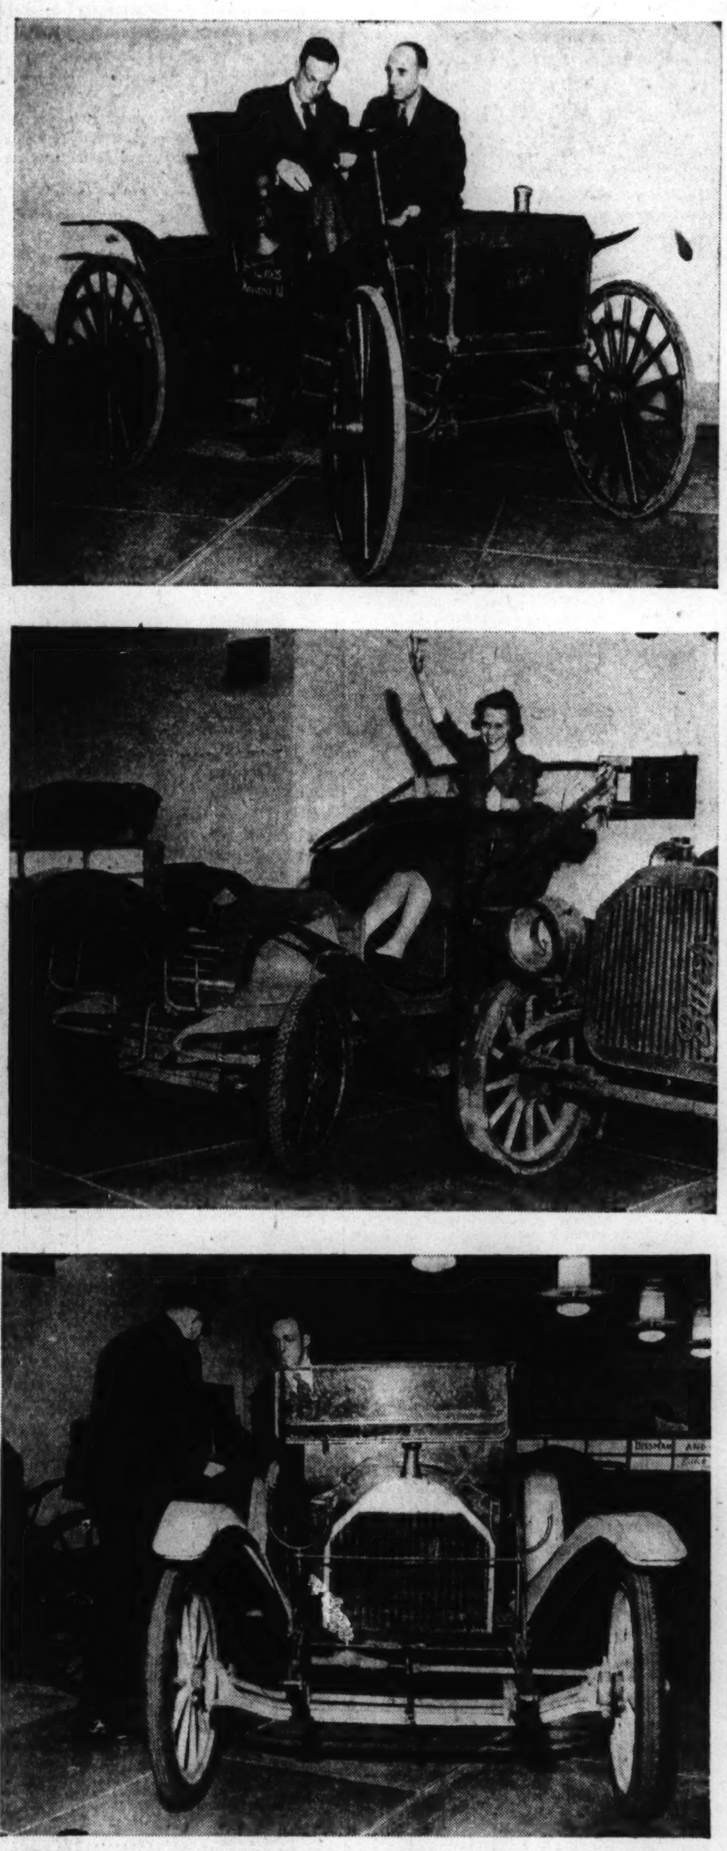
Autos from Yesteryear



Here are horseless buggies in a collection of pioneer motor vehicles at the Museum of Science and Industry, in Jackson park. (Top) Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, museum president, watches D. Roll Back the Years; Autos of Yore Are Restored in Museum

BY HAL FOUST.

An exhibit of old automobiles is being prepared at the Museum of Science and Industry in Jackson park. The cars are those remembered by folks with gray hair as vehicles for the venturesome, the butt of gibes from conservatives.

The venerable motor carriages are being restored to their original splendor, fresh paint for long wooden spokes and fresh burnish for bright brass work, bulb horns, and radiators. Mechanically the cars are to be complete, including chain drives for the older models with one or two cylinder engines under the seat.

Historic Authenticity.

Historically authentic environments are being prepared for the buggies. Figures in the car will be in costumes of the car's birth date. The same historical accuracy is sought for backgrounds.

When the exhibit is completed, about the first of the year, the museum visitor interested in the development of highway transportation will see true pictures of the early automobile era, in the first decade of the 20th century.

Remember These Names?

The collection includes the following names, some of them forgotten, some remembered vaguely, and others still prominent in the automobile industry:

Two cylinder Sears-Roebuck—1909.
Two cylinder Mier—1904.
Two cylinder Maxwell with top—1907.
Two cylinder Maxwell without top—1908.
Two cylinder Buick roadster—1905.
Two cylinder Buick truck—1909.
Two cylinder Auto Car—1904.
Locomobile Steamer—1901
Two cylinder Gleason—1906.
Two cylinder Rambler—1903.
One cylinder Cadillac—1903.
One cylinder Cadillac—1904.
One cylinder Cadillac—1905.
One cylinder Buick.
Four cylinder Buick—1913.
Two cylinder Schacht—1907.
Two cylinder Reo—1906.
Four cylinder Metz—1910.
Four cylinder Hupmobile—1910.
Two cylinder McIntyre—1902.
Four cylinder Franklin.
Two cylinder Model M Buick.
Detroit Electric—1918.
Corbin Electric.
Woods Mobelette [four cylinders]—1902.
Locomobile Steamer—1900.
Ford—1909.
Ford—1912.
Two cylinder Reo.

Recent additions to this list were from a collection assembled by H. C. Dissman and R. L. Sours of Havana, Ill. D. Cameron Peck, associate curator of the transportation section, is preparing the exhibit at the direction of Maj. Lenox R. Lohr, museum president.

NEWS AND VIEWS

A major farm transportation shortage looms for Illinois as a result of the curtailment of new car production, comments Lynn S. Snow, Oak Park, regional vice president of the National Automobile Dealers association. He says the average age of farm cars in Illinois is six years and the average farm truck is seven years. These figures are based on census statistics. Replacement of older cars must be made in the next two years if an efficient rural transportation system is to be maintained, he declares.

Officials of the Dodge division of the Chrysler corporation report that driving tests made with 720 new Dodge sedans recently showed that the group averaged 21.64 miles to a gallon of gasoline. Each car in the test was driven 100 miles. Drivers had to travel only at lawful speeds, with the usual stops and starts. The 720 runs were made in varying weather conditions.

Harold S. Vance, chairman of the board of directors of the Studebaker corporation, has been elected to the board of trustees of the Illinois Institute of Technology. Vance started working for Studebaker as an apprentice mechanic at the age of 20. He served for a time recently as the head of the critical machine tool division of the Office of Production Management, but had to return to South Bend because of the heavy Studebaker arms activities.

Here is one instance in which armament activity caused an automobile company to do something better. When the Cadillac Motor division of the General Motors corporation took over the manufacture of Allison engine parts electrical engineers advised the use of special fluorescent lighting bulbs on the inspection line. So well did the equipment work that the company installed similar lights on the inspection line for its automobiles. The lights were said to give a peculiar even and non-glaring illumination.

But Sittin' Pretty Is Hard Work

By LLOYD WENDT

SITTIN' PRETTY is an arduous business when it's done professionally. Your pulse may quicken at a luxurious Cleopatra, bedizened with jade and chalcedony, lolling beneath her canopy of monkey fur and parrot feathers, testing with carmined lips her brew of pearls and vinegar. But hold! Does the opulence of groaning Egypt tilt that haughty chin? Do those gilded fingers tremble for the touch of valiant Antony? Do her azure eyes smolder with the consuming fire of the exotic, ancient east?

They do not. Cleopatra is good and mad at the janitor, and when her rest period comes she is going to give him, or the monitor, or somebody, a piece of her mind. She watches her clock ticking away on the dais, flexes the calf of an elegant leg that has begun to feel like a pincushion, inspects her multitudinous goose pimples, and wonders why under heaven artists' studios must keep the temperature of a barn. And while she's about it Cleopatra is going to find out, too, why they don't install a couple of coat hooks in the models' undressing corner.

• • •

Rest. Five minutes. She can't smoke, for paint and canvas are inflammable. She can't leave, for not even a figure model can dress and disrobe again in five minutes. And she had best change her mind about speaking to the monitor, for contract jobs are hard to get. So Cleopatra tosses a smock about her shoulders, moves a heating unit closer to her frosty tootsies, and pats pose-weary muscles until it's time to play Egypt again.

There are about 500 woman models in Chicago, employed

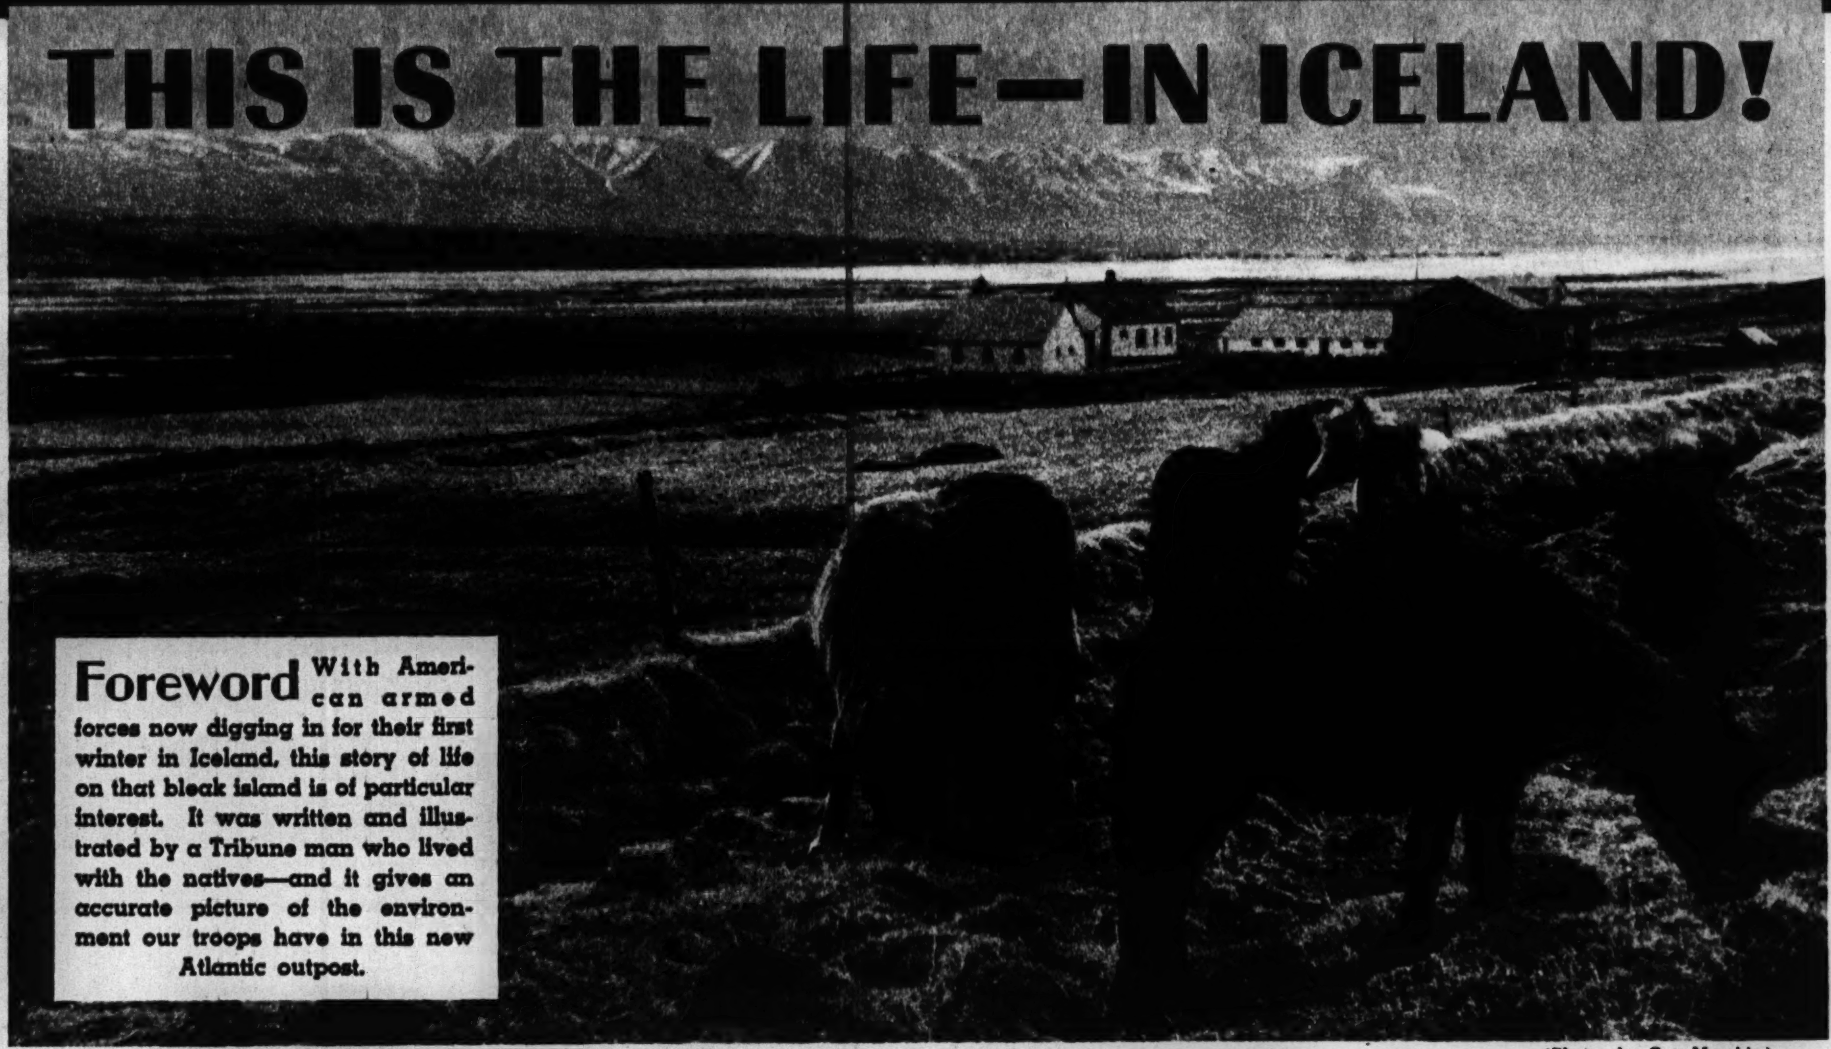
THIS IS THE LIFE—IN ICELAND!



Foreword With American armed forces now digging in for their first winter in Iceland, this story of life on that bleak island is of particular interest. It was written and illustrated by a Tribune man who lived with the natives—and it gives an accurate picture of the environment our troops have in this new Atlantic outpost.

Icelandic ponies feeding on a typical farm.

By GUY MURCHIE

Akureyri, Iceland.

ARNI GUDJONSSON is a successful farmer of northern Iceland. He has yellow hair, wears green overalls, and when he takes off his glasses he sees three of everything.

He neither knows nor cares how many hectares (1 hectare equals 10,000 square meters or 2.417 acres) of land he owns. It doesn't make much difference in Iceland because about the only land usable is the small cultivated patch near your farmhouse where your cattle graze. Outside of that the landscape is a treeless volcanic desert with occasional mossy reaches fit for ponies or sheep in season and a backdrop of snowy peaks or a steaming fumarole to break the monotony. The one scenic incident on Arni's lava-strewn tundra is a place where some ancient volcano tried to shake off the earth's skin and left 90 foot tentacles of igneous rock groping in the air in a petrified splash—a peculiarly Icelandic phenomenon that has been described as "frozen pandemonium."

The farm assets Arni Gudjonsson is most conscious of are (1) the 900 pony loads of hay he raises each summer, and (2) his two young boys. There is nothing in the world that Arni could less afford to give away than his hay crop. On it his cattle live for eight months of the year and his sheep for four months. He and his family in turn live on his cattle and sheep for all 12 months. As for his boys, they are the surest possible source of labor and they cost next to nothing.

• • •

The difference between summer and winter is a ponderable thing on Arni's farm. The Arctic circle is but a few miles away. In summer the sun shines 24 hours a day, permitting men and animals to spend almost all of their time outdoors enjoying their freedom from the black cold months just past and in one way or another preparing for the inevitable black cold months to come. In many countries winter is a time of whiteness and outdoor sport, but here it is chiefly a time of darkness, of milking cows by lantern light in the big hay barn, of reading by the fire and listening to far away music and merriment on the radio. The long hours of enforced confinement, however, have been responsible for the surprising degree of education and culture of many Icelanders, particularly of the older country people who grew up before the radio introduced an easy indulgence. One of Arni's neighbors is a 60-year-old farmer who reads eight languages besides Icelandic, owns the Encyclopaedia Britannica and is devoted to his large collection of English classics. He follows the daily news of the world on the radio and writes political essays—and yet he has never been more than six miles from his little farm, not even as far as the nearby port of Akureyri.

The animals on Arni's farm include 35 cattle, 150 sheep, 23 ponies, and nearly 100 chickens. The cows provide his principal cash product: dairy goods. The sheep give mutton and wool. Wool prices vary greatly here and farmers don't regard it as much of a source of income. Instead they send their wool to one of Iceland's two textile factories and get it back in cloth, most of which their wives make into clothes, curtains, or anything needed around the house. The ponies do much of the farm work and with a gentle efficiency that is remarkable. They vary in color from fawn to maroon and grow long, thick fur in winter that enables them to remain outdoors thru the fiercest blizzards without ill effects. Standing in a tight line so that their bodies protect and warm each other, they take turns in the windward position, each pony holding it for several minutes at a time. The snow, matting into their woolly coats, forms a white overcoat to soften the bite of the gale, and they are able to graze in snow a foot deep, cropping the buried brown grass stalks in a series of dives like hungry ducks in a pond. The chickens, which produce enough eggs to pay for their feed, are considered rather a luxury in Iceland and are evidence that Arni Gudjonsson is prosperous.

Iceland girls.

The most important part of Arni's farm next to the buildings is of course the "tun" or homefield where the best hay is produced. Arni and his forefathers had to make all of this land with their own hands; cutting off the grassy tops of the wild hummocks, plowing the black soil underneath, leveling it with spades and hoes, then replacing the sods and fertilizing them with manure. Arni has about 20 hectares of this precious land. He also gets a certain amount of hay from the unfertilized "outfields" beyond. Hay is so vital in Iceland that the British military authorities have had great difficulty in finding a place for the troops to play football. Every level field is almost sacred and a large amount had to be paid to the farmers' coöperative organization for the space finally selected. Even the roof of the old-fashioned sod shed behind Arni's hay barn is not forgotten as a source of hay. Each autumn one of Arni's little boys climbs up there with a scythe to reap the ripened crop and trim the eaves—looking like an arctic Jack the Giant Killer giving his victim a haircut before the execution.

• • •

Other things grown by Arni Gudjonsson are about a third of a hectare of potatoes and one-tenth of a hectare of turnips, with a small quantity of beets, radishes, cabbages, carrots, rhubarb, lettuce, tomatoes, and cauliflower. The lettuce and tomatoes are grown in a greenhouse heated with hot spring water, which is a very important fuel substitute in this land of no wood, coal, or petroleum. A few hundred years ago, say the sagas, Iceland was fairly well forested but for some not-generally-understood reason there is no trace of forest left today but one or two groves of scrubby brush in remote parts of the north and east. Oats, barley, and wheat were also grown successfully in Iceland by the viking settlers up to the 14th century, but today these grains do so poorly that even with modern fertilizers they are only in the experimental stage here.

It's about time Arni's family was introduced. There is his wife, Bjarnthora Benediktsdottir, who, like him, is in her late forties; his aged mother, Helgar Thorarinsdottir; his stepdaughter, Sigridur Stefansdottir; his small son, Viggo Arnason, and his nephew, Helti Zoëga, about the same size. The hired farmhand, who gets food, lodging, and the equivalent of $8 a week, is Skarphjedinn Ozurarsson. These names seem pretty formidable to the uninitiated, but there is a simple system about them that makes it easy for Icelanders to trace their ancestors back all the way to Erik the Red and his clan and their Irish slaves. Each Icelander has only one name given him, but it is followed by his father's name. Thus Arni, whose father was Gudjon, is called Arni Gudjonsson (Gudjon's son). His son Viggo is called Viggo Arnason (Arni's son). His wife's first husband was named Stefan, and so his stepdaughter Sigridur is called Sigridur Stefansdottir (Stefan's daughter). Thus all males have last names ending in son and all females' names end in dottir. A few newfangled notions about names are beginning to be imported into Iceland, however, and that accounts for nephew Helti Zoëga, the exception who proves the rule.

After supper on an Iceland farm there is the radio, and the sewing to do. The housewife at right wears typical matron's costume.

Hay is so precious even the crop that grows on the sod house roof is harvested. Drawn by the author.

Arni is up before 7 every morning to feed the cows, after which Bjarnthora or Sigridur milk them. Arni rarely milks because Icelanders consider milking purely a feminine chore, but he has done it enough to invent a device for keeping the cows' tails from swishing the milker in the face. Every cow in Arni's barn has her tail tied with string to a sort of trolley wire that runs the length of the barn, and before each one is milked her tail is hoisted by the halyard and hooked to the trolley far above the danger zone.

• • •

Most of Arni's day is spent like that of farmers the world over. He must clean the stables, spread the manure, drive the animals to water and break the ice for them in winter, perhaps drive to the slaughterhouse with some lambs or a load of potatoes and turnips to market. Delivering the milk and eggs is of course a daily duty unless being snowed in makes it impossible. Occasionally Arni digs some peat for the fire, for there is a small peat bog on his farm. But electricity is a commoner source of household heat in Iceland, where water power is plentiful and Arni's electric kitchen stove gets its power from a brook that runs past his house.

In winter evenings the family sit around the kitchen stove or by the radio in the sitting room for long hours. After the children get home from school, hitch-hiking the eight kilometers in the twilight, there is reading, sewing, and preparing of supper to be done. Icelanders are great readers. The population of only 120,000 supports five daily newspapers, one biweekly, and 13 weeklies. The national library contains 138,000 books and 8,500 manuscripts. Supper is rather Scandinavian in style, with large amounts of hors d'oeuvre, usually accompanied by soup, bread, cheese, milk, and mutton. The old ewes are made into smoked mutton each autumn, and a "hangikjok" or leg of smoked mutton is the traditional Christmas dish.

Sometimes the old woman likes to recite rimur lays or a saga while she and the other women are spinning or sewing of an evening. This old-world institution, known in Iceland as a "kvoldvokur," is rare now that the sagas can be read in books, but it still occurs occasionally. By 10 o'clock usually both radio and sewing machine are silent and all are in bed, snug under their elderdown puffs—huge white sacks of down collected from nesting grounds along the nearby fiords and which make blankets unnecessary in Iceland.

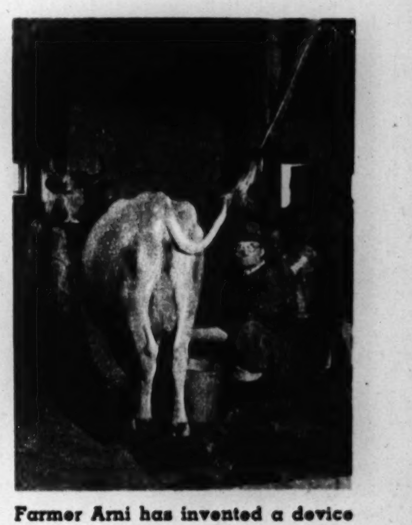
In conclusion it may be of interest to see how Arni's farm compares with Iceland farming as a whole. Two square miles is the average size of a farm in Iceland, but so bleak is the land that the average area cultivated is only six hectares, with about 32 hectares of grazing land. Vegetable gardens are few and tiny and in all Iceland their total area is only about 2 square miles. The first greenhouse in Iceland was built in 1923, but there are many now—some covering 65,000 square feet. In them are grown chiefly tomatoes, lettuce, cucumbers, and flowers.

There are approximately 7,000 farms in Iceland, and their average value is about $1,750. Four-fifths of them are privately owned, the remainder state property. Of the farmers about half are freeholders like Arni Gudjonsson, and the others are tenants either of private owners or the government.

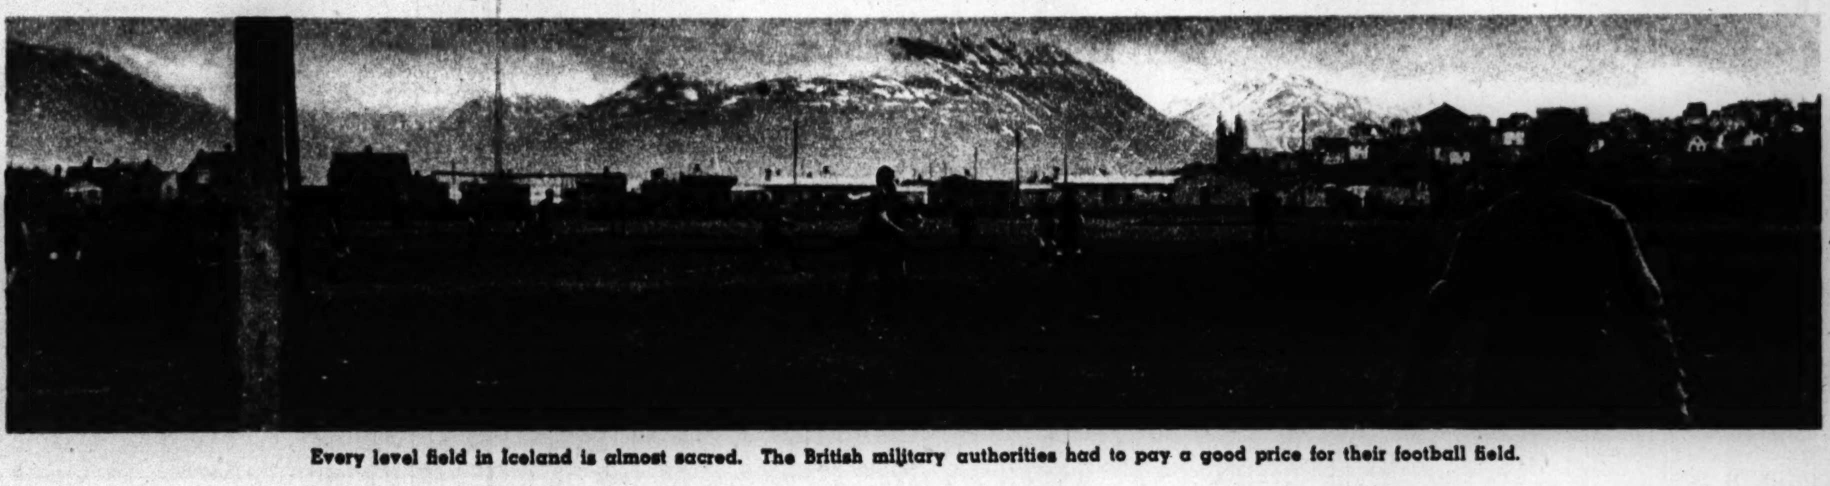
• • •

Sheep are the most plentiful animals in Iceland. There are six sheep for every inhabitant—more than in any country north of the equator. Bulgaria comes next with 1.5 sheep per inhabitant. Even in horses Iceland has more in proportion to population than any European country, a horse for every three inhabitants. Sheep, horse, and cattle breeding are being organized on scientific lines by the government.

Because of the nature of the soil and difficulties of communication, farming in Iceland is still fairly primitive, but revolutionary changes are now taking place. Trucks are replacing pack ponies, plows are being acquired, and there is a beginning in the use of harrows, mowing machines, horse rakes, and hay tedders. To encourage the farmers the government has voted an annual subsidy of $40,000 to the largest farmer coöperative society, the Agricultural Association of Iceland.



Farmer Arni has invented a device to keep the cows' tails from bothering the milker.



Every level field in Iceland is almost sacred. The British military authorities had to pay a good price for their football field.

BARB AND BOB

BARBARA STANWYCK

● Barbara Stanwyck's playing a strip-tease artist in "Ball of Fire" has been beset by difficulties, despite the fact that the first female movie star—Little Egypt, in 1896—was a bump-and-grind girl. Under modern movie conditions she can't strip. It matters not that C. B. De Mille had a nude lass bound to a post in a Roman amphitheater in "The Sign of the Cross," or that Claudette Colbert, as Cleopatra, took a milk bath and splashed around enticingly, or that Marlene Dietrich was a statue with nothing on but marble in "Song of Songs."

● Nowadays, apparently, you can go around saying you are a strip-tease gal for the purposes of a movie plot, but you can't work at the business. The Hays office banned any suggestion of Miss Stanwyck's disrobing for "Ball of Fire." Then a bright lad thought of something satirical. He suggested that Barbara do a number to strip-tease music and with all the old Gypsy Rose Lee undulations, but that she remove only a pair of earrings, a necklace, and a bracelet. The Hays office banned this, too.

● The Jack Bennys are the Taylors' closest friends. Bob and Barbara are dance fiends, but would rather go to a big dance hall than to an exclusive night club. They also dote on western movies, make a weekly visit to Hollywood's Hitching Post theater, which specializes in western double bills. Bob loves steaks, automobiles, and flying; a licensed pilot, he is now taking lessons in instrument flying and navigation, and owns his own ship. Barbara won't go up with him. Barbara is a good horsewoman, likes swimming, hiking, and football. She eats well and keeps her 115-pound figure without effort.

Hollywood.

STOCK in the firm of Taylor and Stanwyck is booming. Barbara will hit the screens in two pictures almost simultaneously, and enthusiasm about each of them runs high among the bosses whose business it is to sell them to Cuthbert Customer. Robert, who has stuck thru as hurtful a kicking around as any Hollywoodian ever received, will reach the theaters about the same time in a flicker which is expected to prove that, in addition to being handsome, he is one fine actor.

Miss Stanwyck won't be competing with herself exactly, for her two pictures are vastly different. In one, "Ball of Fire," she's the Zipper Girl—a strip-tease comedienne in the leggy habiliments of her first stage hit, "Burlesque." Samuel Goldwyn has teamed her with Gary Cooper in this one, and it's all for fun. In the other, "The Great Man's Lady," she's the heroine of an epic pioneer drama in which she is pictured from early youth to great age. Paramount, which made the film, has a hunch that Barbara may get the Academy award for her work and is aiming a campaign in this direction.

Mr. Taylor, the hero of a Metro melodrama called "Johnny Eager," is a gangster who gets killed in a big street gun fight. Sneak previews indicate that Robert has turned in an excellent dramatic performance in one of the best pictures Metro has turned out this year; and if this proves true the lad who almost was kidded out of pictures will have a pleasant revenge.

• • •

Bob Taylor is the son of Dr. and Mrs. S. A. Brugh (his real name is Spangler Arlington Brugh, and he was called Arlington), and grew up in Beatrice, Neb. When it came time to go to college he went to Doane, at Crete, Neb.

At Doane his music prof, Herbert Gray, was certain Taylor would be a concert cellist. Professor Gray got a new post with Pomona college, Claremont, Cal.—and Arlington Brugh, his prize pupil, was offered his old job at Doane. The prize pupil, however, did something unexpected; he decided to follow Professor Gray to Pomona.

At Pomona life took a nasty turn for the future Bob Taylor. The other students marked up this handsome youngster as a stuck-up beauty and dubbed him the Sheik. He was hurt, but patiently he won friendships and showed he was good at anything from track and tennis to brain work. He had been in many college plays, and in February, 1933, he played Captain Stanhope in "Journey's End." An M-G-M talent scout caught the performance—and Spangler Arlington Brugh was about to become Robert Taylor.

His first break didn't come until February, 1934—a year after his promising appearance in "Journey's End"—and it wasn't a break in pictures. The late E. E. Clive gave him a stage rôle in something called "M'Lord the Duke," and he did so well that Metro discovered him all over again. This time, he was given a real contract. Metro promptly loaned him to Fox for a bit in Will Rogers' "Handy Andy," then put him out on loan again in another picture. His first job at the home studio was in a crime-does-not-pay short, and his name didn't even appear on the screen. Metro's first knowledge that it really had something in its young Nebraskan was when letters came in asking who the unidentified youngster was in the crime short.

Ida R. Koverman, L. B. Mayer's secretary, pulled the Robert Taylor name out of thin air. Robert Taylor got small rôles in feature pictures like "Wicked Woman" and "West Point of the Air," and the fan letters increased in number. So pretty soon he was playing opposite stars like Joan Crawford, Janet Gaynor, and Barbara Stanwyck.

And pretty soon life became hell for Robert Taylor. He was the maidens' dream, and men hated him. One of the gravest problems M-G-M faced was to persuade American males that Robert Taylor was all right.

That job has been pretty well accomplished, and "Johnny Eager" should cinch it.

Bob Taylor is 30. Barbara Stanwyck was born Ruby Stevens in Brooklyn 34 year ago, and she spent her childhood either in an orphan asylum or boarding out in families and working for her keep. When she was 13 she wrapped bundles in a department store—but she had ambitions to be a dancer. She saved money, took lessons, and finally tried for a night club job on Broadway across the river. She was pretty and could dance, so she landed at the Everglades, then the Club Anatole.

ROBERT TAYLOR

When she was 15 she was in a Ziegfeld "Follies," riding an elephant and wearing a beaded G string. She worked later in Shubert and George White musicals, and her first legit acting job was a small rôle in Willard Mack's "The Noose."

• • •

In the Mack show Ruby Stevens became Barbara Stanwyck. Mack and David Belasco picked the name from some old programs on the walls of the greenroom at the Belasco—the Barbara from "Barbara Frietchie," the Stanwyck from a player's name. The following season Arthur Hopkins cast her as Bonnie in "Burlesque," and both the play and the girl were great hits. In 1928, during the tour of "Burlesque," Miss Stanwyck married Frank Fay; she divorced him just seven years later.

Metro had given Barbara a screen test when she was in "The Noose," but nothing ever came of it. When "Burlesque" became a hit Hollywood got interested—but in the play, not Barbara. Paramount finally made the film version with Nancy Carroll as the star. Half a year later Joseph Schenck, then with United Artists, brought Miss Stanwyck to Hollywood for "The Locked Door." Since then she has starred for every major studio in town and now is a free lance.

Bob Taylor wipes lipstick off after greeting by ardent fan.

● When Taylor and Stanwyck co-starred in "His Brother's Wife" there were reports of a romance on the lot. When they played leads in "This Is My Affair" the reports continued—and they were accurate. Spangler Arlington Brugh and Ruby Stevens Fay were married in the spring of 1939. Not until recently did they work out what they consider a satisfactory home life.

● Trouble was they both had ranches in the San Fernando valley. Barbara had gone into partnership with Zeppo Marx on a horse breeding farm called Marwyck Stables. About a mile away Bob had a bachelor home. And they both wanted to live in town. Barbara sold her place—the home part, not the acreage for horses—to Jack Oakie. Bob traded his to Tom May, department store executive, in return for May's well appointed but not gaudy house in Beverly Hills, and it is in Beverly Hills that the Taylors now live.

Youth on the Iowa State Campus

They don't go in much for beauty, personality, or popularity contests. The unofficial ratings are important, tho. "B. M. O. C." He's captain of the cheer leading team and will be general chairman of "Stars Over Veisha" in the May festival. . . .

There are two Chicago girls among the candidates for bomb beauty queen—Ruth Bilhorn of Mary Lyon hall and Virginia Fehrm, representing Chi Omega. Final selection of the yearbook queen is made in the spring. . . .

The babies in the home management practice houses are all champs this year. In these houses, where home economics students spend six weeks of their senior year, the girls put to actual practice what they have learned in the home ec. laboratories. They plan, prepare, and serve the food; budget, entertain, and care for the house. They even feed, bathe, and dress the child enthroned in each house, and the children are among the best tended in the world. Not toys, either, but objects of intelligent care and solicitude. Each house thinks its baby is the healthiest and handsomest, and this year the rivalry is especially intense. They're all beauties. . . .

This is the warning stressed by many washing experts. Normal perspiration is acid. The human body gives off over a pint of it daily—and it can rot stockings.

Ivory Snow is a remarkable new soap, in quick-dissolving "snow-drop" form. It's pure—Ivory-pure. Gives rich suds in 3 seconds, even in cool water. Quickly, surely removes acid perspiration and other soil.

Don't be careless about washing stockings—it costs money! Tests show that daily Ivory Snow care helps you get up to 1/5 more wear—it's like getting a new pair free every 2 months! Ivory Snow's gentle care helps pretty undies wear far longer, too!

ONLY IVORY SNOW COMBINES BOTH THESE ADVANTAGES

1. Pure soap made under a patented process in tiny "snow-drop" form . . .

2. You need only a little Ivory Snow to get rich suds in 3 seconds, even in cool water.

A THOUSAND SHALL FALL

● This is the story of a daring young Nazi hater from Austria, a successful newspaper man, who enlisted in the French army as a foreign volunteer, only to find he had to fight tanks with a rifle and to contend with the amazing blunders that brought France's downfall. He has just entered the heavy fighting as this instalment opens.

INSTALMENT III.

I CANNOT BE the historian of the battle of Ste. Menehould—I was there, but those who are in the midst of a battle can see only a small part of it. I don't even know how many divisions held the town of Ste. Menehould; perhaps there was no more than one, the 35th, to which we belonged. But today I can clearly see the plan underlying the battle of Ste. Menehould and how the battle came about—insofar as the savage slaughter of Ste. Menehould can be graced by the name of "battle."

The strategic plan underlying it was apparent even to the humblest private. French units, defeated without a fight, had converged on Ste. Menehould from five great highways coming from the north, the northeast, and the northwest. The troops streamed into Ste. Menehould, in order to take the southeasterly road — the only one open to our retreat.

I am unable to judge whether the plan was to have us carry on the fight with our backs against the Maginot line, or to have us cross the Swiss border, extending from Basel to the Jura. Most probably there was no plan at all at that time—unless it was the treacherous plan of "promenading" us thru the countryside until the military situation should make an armistice inevitable, or until the psychological moment when every soldier had only one desire—to lay down his arms unconditionally.

• • •

Whatever the explanation may be, several armies had converged on the little town of 3,000 souls, which they could leave only by a single road leading to Verrières-Passavant-Commercy. The Germans had to be stopped at the crossroads until the retreat south from Ste. Menehould could be organized—or what they called "organized." The lovely little town, formerly recommended to tourists as a headquarters for visiting the Argonne battlefields, was excellently adapted for a desperate stand. Completely surrounded by the Aisne and the Aisne canal, Ste. Menehould is a natural fortress, the approaches to which are particularly difficult for tanks. Since the 35th division had been the last to reach Ste. Menehould, it was only natural that it should be chosen to cover the "orderly retreat" of all the troops who had previously passed the town, and to "keep the Germans busy" as long as possible. So far, everything was comprehensible. The crime of Ste. Menehould is to be sought elsewhere.

Any one, even a layman, who visualizes the situation of Ste. Menehould will realize that the bridge on the northern end of town should have been blown up, after the last man of the division—or divisions—destined to defend the town had crossed it. The bridge at the southern end should have been kept intact so long as the division—or divisions—assigned to defend Ste. Menehould remained in the town, so that the only avenue of retreat would not be closed to the fighting troops. And what happened? The northern bridge was left intact, providing the Germans with a comfortable and unhoped for road of entry into the hospitable shelter of Ste. Menehould. By contrast, the southern bridge was blown up by French engineers while most of my division was still in town—no doubt to cut us off from the possibility of a "premature" retreat.

Since the battle of Ste. Menehould, where our regiment lost half of its effectives, I have often asked myself how this absurd slaughter could have come about. Was it negligence or crime? The memory of my dead comrades has forced this question upon me. In sleepless nights I may have been guilty of treason toward my dead friends, as I tried to find excuses for the slaughter. For the failure to blow up the northern bridge, I thought, an explanation might have been found. Possibly the disorganization and lack of information were so complete that the high command did not know whether we were the last division retreating; possibly they did not know that the Germans were following close on our heels. But no possible excuse can be found for blowing up the southern bridge.

The only possible explanation is that the high command wanted to keep the Germans busy massacring us, in order to gain as much time as possible for the troops retreating southward. The consequence was that on one single morning, 400 men of our regiment were killed. At least two-thirds of them were not killed on the spot; they were only wounded. But as the bridge had been blown up, and the only way the unwounded could escape was by swimming across the canal, the wounded were left behind. They bled to death or their bodies were crushed by the German tanks and armored cars.

When we heard the first German tanks entering the town, the panic started. Soldiers ran up and down on the square looking for cover. There were practically no officers left; at least none appeared on the square. Even today I believe that some of the men lost their minds at this moment. I still can see Sergt. Rupin dashing madly about the square on his bicycle, around and around, like a participant in a six day bike race. Again and again he flitted by my nose, and I couldn't stop him. Adj. Lesfauries stumbled by me asking, with an infinitely stupid look, whether "there was anything new." He did not wait for my answer. Some lay flat on the pavement, pressing their guns to their shoulders. This gesture—only natural on the battlefield — here seemed grotesque. Men with rifles, with knapsacks on their backs, lay on the pavement of the main square like toy soldiers on the carpet of a nursery. The first planes appeared. We could no longer distinguish between the sound of the planes and the tanks. A bomb fell in the middle of the square. Stones hurtled thru the air. You could hardly tell whether it was day or night. Each bomb that fell spread light and then darkness.

• • •

Suddenly, in the midst of the deafening noise of the circling bombers and the slowly advancing tanks, I heard a familiar sound—the rattle of a machine gun not far from me. The sound was almost friendly, almost musical. I looked up. From the second or third floor of the adjoining house a machine gun was firing—firing at the approaching tanks. And the same thing happened that always happens when a man turns up in a faint hearted crowd. Suddenly firing started from all sides. It was a childish effort. Our experience had taught us that even the antitank guns were powerless against the heavy German units. Only the 75s obtained some success. And now we were firing our machine guns and old carbines. But what did that matter? There was a sudden patter from all the houses. I quickly ran to the other side of the street. Bullets whistled past me on both sides. Our soldiers had made up their minds to lay a barrage across the street.

I ran up the steps. It was a little old house with wooden stairs. Halfway to the first floor, a door was open; the door to the W. C. Nothing on earth is funnier than a W. C. when the whole world is collapsing.

• • •

I did not know the machine gunners. But at the window of the adjoining room stood a man whom I immediately recognized even from behind. It gave me a feeling of indescribable joy. I say "indescribable," because a normal human being in his daily routine rises to the joys of his existence from a settled level of mediocrity. One must fall to the depths to understand what it means to find a friend. At the window stood Saint-Brice.

I called him. He made a sign to me with his left hand, but did not turn around. I stepped to his side at the window. His round, good natured, boyish face, now framed in an unkempt red beard, was calm and collected as usual. His big, round spectacles were exactly in place. He quickly held out his left hand to me, then balled it into a fist to support the barrel of his revolver. I quickly loaded my old Remington, tho I had little hope that it would actually fire its single shot.

For some unknown reason, the tank, followed by innumerable others—the street was so narrow that they could move only in single file—halted. At the same time the roar of the airplane motors redoubled in intensity. The tank stood at the northern end of the Rue Camille Margraine. The machine guns stopped rattling. Half hidden in our room, we looked down into the street. Fallen soldiers lay on the asphalt. Blood ran down the gutter. It is so easy to write these words, forgetting what they mean: blood running down the gutter. In writing, everything seems two dimensional in effect, without background. Blood in the gutter; nothing behind it. No suffering, no pain, no meaning. Red water in the drain. Gurgling red water. You move as in a film, watching yourself. And that is what makes it all bearable.

A few steps from our house a wounded soldier was screaming. From time to time the upper part of his body rose. Each time he fell down again, he stopped crying. Again and again we believed that he was dead. But at regular intervals he sat up. At regular intervals the dead man screamed.

Behind the tank, German motorcyclists appeared. As the street was too narrow, they formed on the sidewalk. Each cycle had a sidecar with two men in it. Each of them was armed with an automatic rifle.

At last the motorcyclists started. They emerged at the right and left of the armored car. One of the two men on each motorcycle held his automatic rifle upwards, the other horizontally down the street. They fired without interruption. In less than a fraction of a minute, they were in front of our house. At least 15 of them arrived at the same time. I was half crouching under a window. Saint-Brice bent forward. I saw that he was taking aim. I made ready to shoot. Saint-Brice pulled the trigger. I followed him immediately! The miracle occurred—my Remington went off! I reloaded in feverish haste. Despite the infernal noise that was suddenly unleashed—motorcycles, armored cars, airplanes, bombs, machine gun fire, rifles — I distinctly heard orders shouted in German. Somebody cried: "Rein ins Haus!" (Into the house.) Simultaneously the pane splintered. They were firing at our window.

I crawled into the adjoining room for ammunition. A bullet whistled by me. Curious, I thought unconsciously; this shot cannot come from the street. Then I heard somebody saying beside me: "O, les salauds!"

I crawled to the three men at the machine gun. And then I saw what, for the first time, struck me with horror. In a window of one of the few undamaged houses on the opposite side of the street — the same house under the gate of which I had been hidden a short time before—a machine gun had been set in place. Behind the machine gun a German steel helmet emerged and quickly disappeared. But the man could not disappear quickly enough; I saw his face. His eyes stared at me. It was probably only my imagination, but it seemed to me that I had never before seen more evil eyes.

"Rein ins Haus!" somebody cried out downstairs. I translated quickly. One of our men at the machine gun, a boy with deep, black eyes—must be from the south of France, I thought —made a sign to the two others. Everything happened with incredible speed, in silence. Half crawling, they dragged the machine gun to the stairs. The very next moment it began to rattle; the boys were shooting down the stairs that the Germans intended to climb.

• • •

Saint-Brice still stood behind the window. I could not hear him, but he signaled to me that he was out of ammunition. A hand grenade fell in the adjoining room but failed to explode. The planes circled above us. I still had two cartridges. I held them in my hand and felt them growing warm.

Suddenly I realized that Saint-Brice had seized me by the arm. The nasal German voice was roaring.

"We've got to get out of here!" Saint-Brice whispered into my ear. I followed him. He pushed me forward and covered our retreat with his unloaded revolver. He must have explored the premises in advance; he took me thru a narrow corridor, thru a half demolished room, down a wooden staircase, and finally thru a store room. And then we were outside.

French refugees flee before the German advance.

We must have left the house by the back door. We stood in a little vegetable garden, bordered by an old stone wall. Suddenly we found ourselves in the midst of a summer morning. I stood still, breathing deeply. The din of the battle was muffled.

"Come on," said Saint-Brice.

We ran across a field. What did we care whether planes spotted us? We breathed. We were alive.

But there was no time to pause. To reach the bridge we had to go back thru the town. Meanwhile the Germans had moved in everywhere. But our regiments were resisting desperately. I saw soldiers firing from behind corpses, resting their guns on the bodies of their dead comrades. The town stank of corpses, smoke, and sugar. I had a glimpse of Col. de Buissy, trying, with a few men, to erect a tank barricade. Then a ghostly apparition rose from the mist of powder smoke. It was Mayer —Mayer-Mayerescu from Bucharest.

I had only a fleeting glance of him as I rushed by. He stood near the bridge. I couldn't tell whether he was able to go on. He stood there leaning on the parapet; he had forgotten to throw himself on the ground. He still had his glittering pot on his back. His steel helmet still sat on his head like a mournful black derby at a funeral. His face was gray with soot. His faded blond hair hung down over his narrow, red nose. I called out to him once again. But his look remained fixed. He stared—I did not know at what.

A single machine gun was holding the south bridge. A young Frenchman of the 11th regiment whom I knew and a Negro of the same regiment were tending the gun. Suddenly the Negro clutched his chest and collapsed. From the bridge I saw Mayer-Mayerescu of Bucharest throw himself on the dead man. He lay on the Negro's body and guided the machine gun belt.

Soldiers of the engineering corps ran across the bridge with me. Quicker than I could think, with the town still full of our men, they carried out their orders. I had scarcely passed when the bridge blew up. It was the only avenue of retreat. In the cloud of dust and smoke I saw something glitter on the other side of the bridge. It was Mayer's pot, shining in the sun.

We had separated when we saw the colonel. We agreed that I would wait on the other side of the bridge. Unseen to one another, we had crossed it at about the same time. Then suddenly we found ourselves side by side. I told him about little Mayer's exploit. He thought for a while. Then he said: "Come on! Quick!"

We ran along the river bank. At one place the river was particularly narrow. Saint-Brice sat down on the grass and began silently to pull off his boots.

"What are you doing?" I asked.

"I'm going to get little Mayer!"

I said nothing. I sat beside him and tried to unbuckle my puttees.

"What are you doing?" Saint-Brice asked with annoyance.

"I'm going with you."

"What for?"

"So that you won't be alone."

He looked at me, smiling behind his glasses.

We hid our shoes and our tunics in the bushes. When we came out, Saint-Brice said: "I'll get little Mayer by myself. But do you see that house over there?"

He pointed to an ancient ruin.

"Yes."

"In the cellar you'll find the scouts of the 2d battalion. I told them to wait there. They're unarmed."

"Right."

"Show them this part of the canal. It's the narrowest. The Germans don't seem to know about it yet."

"Entendu."

He had left his glasses on his nose. Now he took them to the bushes. Then he said: "Have a good bath! A tout à l'heure!"

He jumped into the water first.

When I left my watch—a gift from my father, to which I was particularly attached — in my shoes, the time was 2 o'clock in the afternoon. When I came back with the soldiers whom I had found in the place indicated by Saint-Brice, it was 3 o'clock. Little Mayer was sitting on the grass. But in the meantime Saint-Brice had returned to the burning town. He had "delivered" Mayer only a short while before, and had immediately gone for another bath. Between 2 and 7 in the evening he made three trips to the town, which had meanwhile been completely occupied by the enemy. Each time he saved seven or eight soldiers from certain death. Around 7 o'clock he finally decided to "dry himself." He sat in a clearing by the canal, wiped his glasses, and pulled on his boots. He behaved as tho he had just returned to his office after a brief call at the courthouse.

We lost 36 hours in Passavant.

I owe the authentic story of those 36 hours to an eyewitness. I shall relate it briefly, adding and subtracting nothing.

Col. de Buissy, at the head of his regiment, had defended Ste. Menehould with heroism. De Buissy was nearly 60 years old. He had been wounded seven times in the World war. He had spent 18 years in Africa, commanding the 4th Foreign Legion, most famous of all the famous regiments of the Foreign Legion. He had distinguished himself in the great Moroccan battles. At the outbreak of the present war, the colonel, who had been pensioned shortly before, left his home in Lille and offered his services to France. In consideration of his particular abilities and merits, he was immediately appointed commander of the 1st foreign volunteer regiment, which was later renamed the 21st. He was an officer of the Legion of Honor and bearer of almost every high distinction that a French officer can achieve.

Col. de Buissy was ordered to appear at Passavant at 9 o'clock on the night before Saint-Brice and myself reached the village. The general commanding our brigade waited for the colonel in the notary's house. It proved impossible, however, to interrupt the battle of Ste. Menehould according to a prearranged schedule. If the retreat of the innumerable regiments streaming southward was to be even partly covered, we had to hold the enemy in and around Ste. Menehould. Col. de Buissy reached Passavant at 5 in the morning, on foot, totally exhausted, having escaped death by a miracle. Lieut. Costa, a brave Corsican who com-

DISTINGUISHED AMERICANS

DANIEL BOONE, frontiersman, Indian fighter, and colorful character of American history, was born near Reading, Pa., on Nov. 2, 1734. By the time he had reached the age of 12 he was an expert woodsman and a crack shot with a rifle.

In 1751 he moved with his family to North Carolina, settling at Buffalo Licks on the north branch of the Yadkin river. As a teamster and blacksmith he accompanied the ill-fated Braddock expedition against the French and Indians. He escaped on horseback when this expedition was defeated in the woods near the present site of Pittsburgh on July 9, 1755.

Remembering accounts of the Kentucky wilderness given to him by a hunter named John Finley, whom he had met on the Braddock campaign, Boone set out in the autumn of 1767 with a companion or two and penetrated as far west as what is now Floyd county, Kentucky. In the spring of 1769 a party which included Boone traversed the trackless "dark and bloody ground" to as far west as what now is Estill county, Kentucky. Acting as the agent of a land company, he led a group of settlers in 1775 to a tract of land in Kentucky that had been called Transylvania. There these pioneers built a fort and established a settlement which they called Boonesborough.

When Kentucky was organized as a county of Virginia in the autumn of 1776 Boone was made a captain of militia. Later he was promoted to major. In February, 1778, he was captured by Shawnee Indians, but after three or four months managed to escape. His experiences on this occasion provide material for one of the most thrilling true stories of American frontier days.

Daniel Boone

The repudiation by the state of Virginia of many of the land titles granted to Kentucky settlers caused Boone in the spring of 1780 to start for the east with about $20,000 which had been collected from these settlers for the purchase of land warrants. On the way he was robbed of the money. When Kentucky was divided into three counties Boone was made a lieutenant colonel of one, and in 1781 he was elected to the legislature. The following year he was made sheriff, county lieutenant, and deputy surveyor.

On learning that his titles to Kentucky land had been improperly entered in the records, Boone in 1786 moved to Maysville and instituted a number of lawsuits to support his claims. In 1788, however, he abandoned Kentucky and moved to Point Pleasant, at the mouth of the Great Kanawha river, in what now is West Virginia.

Some time in 1798 or 1799 he moved into the territory which later became the state of Missouri, obtaining a land grant on Femme Osage creek. In 1800 he was chosen magistrate of the district in which he lived, a position that he held until the cession of the territory to the United States as a result of the Louisiana purchase. Altho his title to Missouri land was voided by federal land commissioners, congress, after many delays, confirmed it in 1814. In the meantime, probably in 1810, he returned to Kentucky to settle his debts. Tradition has it that only 50 cents remained after they were paid.

Boone died Sept. 26, 1820, too soon to enjoy very much of the fame that has made him the outstanding figure of the old frontier. It was the seven stanzas that Lord Byron devoted to him in the eighth canto of "Don Juan," published in 1823, that made Boone a world-wide celebrity. The painting by Chester Harding, after which the accompanying portrait was engraved, is believed to be the only authentic representation of Boone ever made. The painting was executed shortly before his death.

SITTIN' PRETTY IS HARD WORK

by artists, advertising agencies, photographic and commercial motion picture studios, publicity counsellors, department stores, catalog publishers, and wholesale houses. About 300 of the girls earn a living at the business. The rest are housewives, radio actresses, stenographers, and sometimes debutantes and college girls, who work part time each week or earn a fee now and then.

Modeling is a hard, uncertain business. A girl may work 15 hours one day, none the next. If she's very good and much in demand she may average $75 a week. Usually she's lucky to average $30. Even a figure model, on contract with an artist or an art school, cannot expect much more than $30. But the figure model, of course, does not have the expense of an extensive wardrobe, which the commercial photography girls must possess.

There are two main types of models. Those employed by the School of the Art Institute of Chicago and by artists and other painting schools usually cannot get work of any sort in commercial photography, and the photography girl is rarely used by any brush artists save the commercial painters. The artist wants a girl with a distinctive, unusual personality, one that may inspire him in creative work. She need not be beautiful. She may be so thin and angular as to provide a fine class lesson in bone structure, or possessed of handsome curves, easy to draw, and beloved by painters generally. The commercial photographer seeks a perfection of beauty that will make his model universally acceptable to the public. He wants a fine example of a feminine type. He wants an animation that will help sell gears, lingerie, and clothespins.

It is the photographic model who is the most numerous, the best paid, and has the easiest job. Her profession has advanced swiftly with the improvement of color printing, the wide use of motion pictures in selling fields, and the tendency of mail order houses to use photographs rather than drawings for their catalogs.

• • •

One of the most successful of Chicago photographic models is lovely Eunice Forde. When she was attending Ferry hall in Lake Forest, and later the Aiken School for Girls, St. Petersburg, Fla., she intended to write for a living. But one day John Jennings, art director for an advertising agency, spied her and asked her to pose for a series of schoolgirl advertisments. That was eight years ago.

Eunice liked the work and decided to make a career of it. She joined an agency, as a model must if she hopes to succeed in the business. The agency people, who work on a 10 per cent commission, promptly began her buildup, suggested ways for her to get the best photographic effects, pictured her in the agency's catalogs, and began selling her to clients.

Eunice took an apartment close to the business district and began expanding her wardrobe. A good wardrobe is important. A girl must have clothes for every possible kind of picture. She must be able to reach an assignment quickly, and she must always be available by telephone. These "musts" are as important as natural beauty and sparkling personality.

First jobs for Eunice were largely schoolgirl pictures. Neither her agent nor the clients could see her as the young matron or the sophisticated woman. But finally she had an opportunity to portray the radiant bride, and soon more such rôles were offered. Now, backed by much experience, Eunice is completely versatile, playing ingénue or sultry siren a few minutes apart. Consequently she's one of the busiest models in town.

In addition it is Eunice's excellent fortune to have small and shapely hands and feet—6½ glove and 4-B shoe. This has given her unlimited opportunity to pose for special shots of gloves and footwear, rings, wrist watches, corn plasters, and the other thousands of illustrations that ornament the mail order catalogs. The variety of work for which she's qualified sometimes keeps her busy from 7 a. m. to 10 at night. She rarely knows from one day to the next how much time, if any, will be her own.

MODEL ROUTINE

Popular Model Eunice Forde has a simple beauty formula: "Soap and water and a light cream . . ."

Followed by "a light, wholesome breakfast."

Eunice stays close to the phone, because that's where the job calls come.

Like all models, she must have a varied and smart wardrobe.

(Tribune photos by Andrew Pavlin.)

"Our work is erratic, but fun," said Eunice. "What we like best is motion picture commercials and color slides. I suppose it's because we have a chance to move about and act a bit. Every year a group of us go to Detroit for the automobile motion picture commercials, and we love it. Our work is never dull. We never know what may be required next. I may start the day playing a housewife, then turn nurse, and finish up as the Dragon Lady. That last rôle was fun, even if it did take two hours to put on artificial nails and slant my eyes with Scotch tape."

Girls hoping to succeed as models must learn the tricks of makeup, they must have poise, and, says Lee Parker, director of a Chicago casting bureau, they must "feel animation."

"You've got to feel it from the stomach," pronounced Parker with enthusiasm. "You've got to make the picture tingle with it. A model has got to think that the telephone or pair of socks or cake of soap she's holding is the most beautiful thing in the world. And she must get that feeling over to the public. A girl must have a wide-open smile and not be afraid to use it. She must have poise and spirit and enthusiasm for her work."

The typical Chicago model, Parker added, is "sweet mid-western-to-Texas." Ultrasophistication is left to New York, heavy glamor to Hollywood. Consequently Chicago photographers seek girls who are pretty and natural. A girl need not have special training to succeed as a model. But she must know her good points and how to make the best of them. If she has natural poise and muscle control she'll quickly learn from her agent or the photographers the little tricks for winning the camera's special favor.

When Theresa Goll came to Chicago from Swanton, O., about three years ago she was unaware of the existence of the modeling trade. She came to study at the School of the Art Institute, learned about models, soon needed funds, and applied to an agent.

"I looked terrible when I walked in," Theresa recalled, "but the agent decided I could do all right. He told me how to walk, how to dress, how to fix my hair. I'm small, so he placed me in catalog work to begin. The catalog people want little girls; it makes their furniture and things look large. A fashion model, you know, must be about 5 feet 8, and the average photographic model is about 5 feet 6. Well, I went from catalog work to other things. When I began earning a good income my agent saw that I started a bank account. He advised me on my wardrobe. A wardrobe is a model's greatest expense. Usually you wear out clothes just carrying them around. That's the only thing I dislike about this business—the eternal luggage we must have with us."

• • •

A beginning photographic model will receive a minimum fee of $5 for the first two hours or part thereof and $2.50 an hour for the remainder of an assignment. Nudes, few in the photographic business, charge double rates, altho there are some, not recognized by the model bureaus, who work for camera clubs for smaller fees. A popular costume model posing for photographers will sometimes ask a double rate and get it, and if she becomes nationally known she may demand a special fee, determined not by agency rates but by what she thinks she can get.

Photographic models work for newspapers, advertising agencies, commercial and educational motion picture studios, and the nine large Chicago studios doing catalog work. The fashion models, who must wear clothes well but need not have the physical perfection of the photographic girl, are employed by stores and shops for special shows.

There are innumerable special jobs. A beautiful girl may be hired to ride a new streamline train, passing out pamphlets and posing for publicity pictures at all stops. She may spend a week at a summer or winter resort, posing advertising or publicity shots. Or she may get a job riding in a parade float or ornamenting an exhibition booth at a convention.

Girls avoid this latter work, and modeling gowns in wholesale houses, if at all possible, for the pay is low and their experiences have not been happy ones.

"Often when you work a convention the salesmen and buyers think they own you," one pretty model said. "They've heard wild stories about models, and they think we live a bohemian life in the Latin quarter and are terribly anxious to go out on dates after work. Besides that, they get to drinking and think they can paw us as we do our work. There's one convention man we know as Chief Pawnee. Get it?

"A model has got to think that the telephone or pair of socks or cake of soap she's holding is the most beautiful thing in the world." Eunice Forde has the knack of portraying that enthusiasm.

• • •

"The wholesale business is even worse. Of course there are many men in the wholesale business who are thoroly honorable and treat girls properly. But too many of them don't. There's one certain section we call the 'wolf district.' Most wholesale models receive only $18 to $22.50 a week, and some endure plenty for that. What I've said is not true of the entire wholesale district, of course, but the bad men there have given the innocent ones an evil reputation."

Most models are hard-working, intelligent, sweet girls who tend strictly to business, marry well or get bids from Hollywood. But there are some who misbehave and make it difficult for the rest to be accepted as the thoroly respectable young women they are.

In the trade they call such girls the "murder crew" for what they do to the reputations of the good girls. The better bureaus will not continue to list a girl who drinks excessively or is indiscriminate about her man friends. That soon drives her from modeling work, but of course does not keep her from claiming to be a model when she actually has other means of livelihood.

The nudes who pose for artists and classes at the Art institute and other schools are particularly subject to advances from men outside the art world

THEY NOT ONLY POSE—THEY TEACH

By ANTOINETTE DONNELLY

(Copyright, 1941, By News Syndicate Co., Inc.)

"TODAY'S MODEL is not only selling the American woman style, but she is influencing her in countless ways, teaching her grace, self-possession, self-confidence," one learns from that informative book on the subject of models and modeling by John Robert Powers. Powers girls have become as well known a type as the Ziegfeld girls of the last generation.

Is there a technique to being a model? Must you have inordinate good looks to be considered?

"There is no typical model," Powers assures us. "They have no typical background. What I look for chiefly is not the finished product. That is comparatively rare. I look for potentialities."

It is more important that the structure of the face be good, that the cheekline and hair should be pleasing, that the cheekbones be high and the jawline feminine, that the nose be not prominent, than that there should be large and beautiful eyes combined with a really bad feature. Aside from these qualities there are two primary attributes of great importance, poise and self-confidence.

In the waiting room of a famous model agency you are struck by the difference between the professional, established models and the girls who are waiting to apply for work. The professional walks with a lithe, graceful carriage without excessive movement, quietly but smartly dressed, wearing inconspicuous makeup, simple in appearance as a schoolgirl, but completely unself-conscious. The other for the most part is wearing unsuitable or ill-fitting clothes, excessive makeup which alters and distorts her features. She obviously is ill at ease.

"Terrific importance" is attached to carriage. No matter how beautiful the girl may be if her carriage is poor she is a loss, a rule that applies to every woman, as do many of the other rules attendant upon the good model production.

The girl with potentialities is inducted into a corrective course before she is put to work. The first rule Powers gives, oft quoted, reads: "Lift your head out of your shoulders, your shoulders out of your waist, and your waist out of your hips." This means stretching full length all of the time, the constant stretching contributing to body suppleness and a liquid flow in motion, instead of awkward, jolting movements.

GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER PRE

1 Jeff Lambert (Bing Crosby) has become so intrigued with the low-down blues music played by New Orleans levee Negroes that he is trying to organize a white band to play such music. With Pepper (Jack Teagarden) and Louey (Rochester), the family butler, he goes on a hunt. When they learn about Memphis, a hot cornetist in jail, they hastily sign him for the Basin Street Hot Shots—then set out to raise his bail.

2 Luck is with them. The hack carrying Betty Lou Cobb (Mary Martin) to another town breaks down, and Jeff rescues her. "Now, Miss Cobb, if you'll just loan us $10 I can get Memphis out of jail and the other boys will drive you to your destination," says Jeff. Slightly bewildered, Betty Lou agrees.

3 Memphis (Brian Donlevy) and Jeff finally reach Jeff's quarters, only to find Betty Lou there, very stern. "I was going to visit my grandfather," she says, "but when I got there he had died. Now I need my money to get back home. And you, Mr. Memphis, keep your distance. My Aunt Phoebe is with me."

4 At that moment Aunt Phoebe comes sliding down the bannister plunk into Jeff. She is really Betty Lou's niece (Carolyn Lee). Confessing her subterfuge, Betty Lou agrees to take over Jeff's quarters until he can raise the money.

Jeff her offer to wait for the money so he can the horn, but refuses to let her sing with the band.

6 Undaunted, Betty Lou gets a job in a cheap cafe and wangles a tryout for Jeff's Hot Shots. They click, and get offers from a swank club, only to be warned by their employer, Blackie (J. Carroll Naish). "You go to that dude spot and we'll wreck the joint."

7 The Hot Shots go, however, and Betty Lou with them. They are sensational successes until Blackie makes good his word and makes a wreck out of the club. In the fight Louey, the butler, is seriously injured.

8 There seems to be no way of reviving Louey from his coma until his wife begins singing "St. Louis Blues." The band joins in, and soon Louey blinks his eyes. "That's mighty pretty music, suh," he whispers. "They'll like it in Chicago." "Chicago?" says the surprised Jeff. "O, yes, suh," Louey says. "Ah fo'got to tell you; this telegram offers you boys a big job there."

9 So to Chicago the Hot Shots go - and one night when Betty Lou and Jeff are singing a duet she suddenly starts ad-libbing the lines to the effect, "Why don't you wake up and learn I've been dreaming of you?" Amazed and delighted, Jeff responds with something about how he thought she loved Memphis, but now he no longer had the Memphis Blues. (THE END.)

CASE OF THE TURBANED STRANGER

(Tribune Studio photos.)

A young woman sitting among the loungers rose when she saw him.

By LLOYD WENDT

THE LITTLE MAN with enormous brown eyes inscribed his curious signature at the clerk's desk while a train of boys brought up his shiny luggage. He was exquisitely tailored and his tiny shoes looked like dancing pumps, but what particularly fascinated McGrath was the huge diamond in his sky blue cravat. McGrath loves diamonds. He rubbed the gem on his own finger and sidled close to see who this man might be. The writing looked something like the chains of paper dolls people snip out in madhouses, but McGrath finally determined that it should read: Chait Singh, Ahmadabad.

McGrath had never been interested in geography, but he divined that the guest was from India. He took a good look at the diamond and saw that it was held by a cluster of little gold serpents with wide-spreading heads and tiny emerald eyes. Cobras, McGrath assumed, almost shuddering. He ran his eyes carefully over the baggage, hoping he would discover no air holes punched in. He had never forgotten the time that vaudeville snake charmer smuggled one of her pets into the hotel, only to have it escape. It was a young boa, and was finally discovered sleeping comfortably in the upper reaches of a floor lamp near a radiator down the hall, having evidently been attracted there by the warmth.

Mr. Singh's baggage seemed harmless enough, and McGrath chuckled, thinking how the bellboys might perform if he whispered to them the suspicion that had crossed his mind. He shot another glance at the Hindu mincing toward the elevators and thought that the man seemed ill. His lips, a moment before smiling so genially, had become tightly drawn, there were little beads of perspiration on his forehead, and his dusky complexion, which had first impressed McGrath by its rich warmth, now seemed characterized by a kind of livid pallor.

"What do you make of him?" McGrath asked Jones, the room clerk, as Singh and the retinue of bellboys entered the elevator.

"I'd like to have his money," Jones answered.

"Did he have a reservation?"

"No. Just walked in. He wanted the best we had, and I gave him the Governor's suite."

"I don't like foreigners," mumbled McGrath. "Did you see that sparkler?"

"Am I blind?" asked Jones. His telephone buzzed. "Mrs. Thomas in 1914," he said to McGrath. "Her bags are missing. She thinks a boy has stolen them."

"Ten dollars says they're still at the Union station," said McGrath. "Maybe our Hindu friend has made 'em climb a rope."

• • •

A half hour later Mr. Singh was back in the lobby. If he had been ill he was quickly recovered, for his eyes were lustrous, his dark color was fully restored, and he walked with a springing step. A young woman sitting among the loungers rose when she saw him. Mr. Singh bowed smartly to her, and McGrath saw the gleam of his teeth as he smiled. Together they went out to the street.

"This boy works fast," McGrath thought to himself. "She wasn't a bad one, either. Can't imagine why American girls fall for some one like that." He tried to remember whether he had ever seen the young woman before.

"There ought to be more fellows like that guy," said the bell captain, nodding. "He knows how to pass out the dough. He got cramps in the elevator, and Charley helped him to his room, and he gave him $5."

"Did he call a doctor?" asked McGrath.

"No. Said it was nothing, to forget about it. Charley says he's nervous as a cat, an' talks like he was rubbing velvet."

It was nearly 11 when Jones called McGrath. "Mr. Oston in 1224," he said. "He's complaining about some kind of smell. Says it's kind of sickish sweet, like something dead, or like snakes, or something."

"Like snakes?" gulped McGrath. "Like snakes? He's next to the Governor's suite!"

Jones' eyes widened. "You don't think——!" he stammered. "I—I never smelled a snake."

"Just keep quiet," McGrath ordered. "If it's what I think it is, and anybody finds it out, it 'ud empty this hotel like a 5-11 fire. It may be just somethin' those damn plumbers did. I'm going up."

"Need help?"

"I'll call. Don't worry th' boys. I hope I'm wrong."

McGrath did not want to go up. He remembered the foul odor of serpents he had seized as a boy to snap their heads. The recollection nauseated him, but they had been harmless garter snakes, and Mr. Singh's tie pin indicated the Hindu had a fondness for cobras.

McGrath tapped softly at Mr. Oston's door. It was immediately opened. Oston was a tall, spare, grumpy man who glowered at McGrath. "You the plumber?" he demanded.

"I'm the house officer," McGrath answered. "What is the trouble? Mr. Jones said you were upset by a smell——"

Oston sniffed distastefully, thrust his head into the corridor, and sniffed again.

"Gone now," he said. "It was bad. I never smelled anything like it before in my life. So faint you could hardly be sure there was a smell, but it made me sick. It was kind of sweet, and brackish—hell, I can't describe it."

"Where did you first notice it?"

"In the hall. Then it seemed to come into my room. I noticed it over here." Oston walked to the end of the room, where there were doors connecting with the Governor's suite.

"Hey! Keep away from there!" McGrath cried.

"What's th' matter?"

"May be gas of some kind," McGrath said feebly. "Would you mind transferring to another room? If it's a leak we may not find it—might not be safe here."

While the boy was transferring Oston's baggage McGrath warily searched the room. He wished he had a mongoose. He had read somewhere that they were death to cobras, whatever they were. He could detect no odor, but his sinus was bothering, so he couldn't be sure.

Then suddenly McGrath put away the gun he had fetched and marched resolutely to the Governor's suite. Cobras, eh? That showed what happened to a man when he got scared. He had remembered Singh's pallor, his cramps on the elevator, his sudden recovery. Singh was an opium smoker, and that was the source of the smell. No doubt of it. He would have known it instantly had he not been so preoccupied with snakes.

Turning, McGrath saw the dapper little Hindu.

Nevertheless McGrath entered the Governor's suite carefully, for he might again be wrong. Inside he detected the unmistakable odor of opium—faint, but powerfully insinuating, like a smell of decaying reptiles.

He tried the bags spread about, but found them locked. He tapped the lock of one experimentally with his gun butt and it snapped open. Inside was an opium pipe, a tiny gold-encrusted alcohol lamp, a yen-hauk or pointed metal dipper on which a ball of chandoo is toasted over the lamp in preparation for smoking.

McGrath drew his knife and pried the lock of one of the larger bags. It was filled with tiny tins bearing what he took to be Indian labels. At the ends were stuffed several balls of a material that looked like raw rubber or great cuds of chewing gum. Opium. Thousands of dollars of opium.

McGrath felt a movement behind him.

"So-o?" said a soft voice. "Do not reach for your gun. Put up your hands."

Turning, McGrath saw the dapper little Hindu. McGrath was crouched at one end of a small throw rug, and Singh was standing on the other end. McGrath had seen it done in the movies, and it was worth a chance. He seized the rug and gave it a terrific tug. Singh lost his balance, and McGrath leaped for him. There was a shot as the Hindu's fingers involuntarily contracted in his fall, but the bullet went harmlessly into the floor. Singh, overpowered, submitted quickly.

"The government men will be glad to see you," he said.

"Don't be hasty," said Singh gently. "Your government will not be interested in me. I have powerful friends. It would only annoy your government to have anything like this brought to its attention. An attaché, you know——"

"I don't know," said McGrath. "I'll risk annoying them."

Singh produced a roll of bills. "Would $10,000 interest you?" he inquired. "Half that much is here, and I will personally deliver the rest in the morning."

McGrath went to the telephone and called a friend in the federal bureau of investigation.

The government estimated the value of Singh's opium at $75,000. He was not an Indian, but a native of southern Europe who had been employed for years by an eastern smuggling syndicate. After being arraigned before the United States commissioner he fled, forfeiting a $20,000 bond. He was subsequently arrested in Paris and returned to Chicago, where he was sentenced to five years in Leavenworth prison. Following his release he was deported.

"You know," said McGrath sadly, "I found out months later that a $5,000 reward had been offered for that fellow. I tried to collect, but I was never able to get a cent of it. I was awful glad, tho, that it wasn't cobras he was carrying. Have you ever seen a cobra?"

• • •

House officers collaborate closely with police and federal agents, often with useful results. Sometimes an officer will work in the thick of a case, perhaps contributing importantly to it, without ever discovering what it really was all about. Such was the case of the fleeing diplomats who flashed into the life of McGrath for a few exciting hours and then disappeared, never to be heard of again.

McGrath's first knowledge of this curious affair came over the hotel teletype, which links all the major Chicago hotels. It was a warning from the Federal Bureau of Investigation that two Europeans were bound for Chicago from the west coast, bearing papers in which the government was much interested. The men were described fully and the hotel staffs were instructed to notify the bureau immediately if the men should arrive, but do nothing to arouse their suspicions.

Several hours after the receipt of this message McGrath had a personal call from the bureau. The agents had reason to believe the travelers would stop at his hotel. They wished to be notified immediately. McGrath was advised to follow every movement of the men and to listen in on their conversations if possible.

"Why not put a mike in the room?" he suggested.

"Excellent idea. But hide it carefully. We want on no account to arouse their suspicions."

Late that night the two men arrived at the hotel. McGrath had installed a dictograph in the room that would be assigned to them, and he signaled the desk clerk. The two were dark and fat, and they chatted animatedly in a foreign tongue. They were not unlike hundreds of other travelers who come to loop hotels.

Twenty minutes after they were installed, two thin, serious young men from the bureau were in the hotel, listening at the dictograph and making recordings.

"We need their bags," said one of the men to McGrath. "Any way of getting them and making a substitution without them knowing it?"

"Might get them after they're

PERFECT POEMS

This poem, another in the series being printed each Sunday in the Graphic Section, is from "Fifty Perfect Poems," selected and edited by Charles A. Dana and Rossiter Johnson

KILMENY—By James Hogg

Bonny Kilmeny gaed up the glen;
But it wasna to meet Duneira's men,
Nor the rosy monk of the isle to see,
For Kilmeny was pure as pure could be.
It was only to hear the yorlin sing,
And pu' the cress-flower round the spring—
The scarlet hypp, and the hind berry,
And the nut that hung frae the hazel tree;
For Kilmeny was pure as pure could be.
But lang may her minny look o'er the wa',
And lang may she seek i' the green-wood shaw;
Lang the laird of Duneira blame,
And lang, lang greet or Kilmeny come hame.

When many a day had come and fled,
When grief grew calm, and hope was dead,
When mass for Kilmeny's soul had been sung,
When the bedes-man had prayed, and the dead-bell rung;
Late, late in a gloamin, when all was still,
When the fringe was red on the westlin hill,
The wood was sere, the moon i' the wane,
The reek o' the cot hung over the plain—
Like a little wee cloud in the world its lane;
When the ingle lowed with an eiry leme,
Late, late in the gloamin Kilmeny came hame!

"Kilmeny, Kilmeny, where have you been?
Lang hae we sought both holt and den—
By linn, by ford, and green-wood tree;
Yet you are halesome and fair to see.
Where got you that joup o' the lily sheen?
That bonny snood o' the birk sae green?
And these roses, the fairest that ever were seen?
Kilmeny, Kilmeny, where have you been?"

Kilmeny looked up with a lovely grace,
But nae smile was seen on Kilmeny's face;
As still was her look, and as still was her ee,
As the stillness that lay on the emerant lea,
Or the mist that sleeps on a waveless sea.
For Kilmeny had been she knew not where,
And Kilmeny had seen what she could not declare;
Kilmeny had been where the cock never crew,
Where the rain never fell, and the wind never blew;
But it seemed as the harp of the sky had rung,
And the airs of heaven played round her tongue,
When she spake of the lovely forms she had seen,
And a land where sin had never been—
A land of love, and a land of light,
Withouten sun, or moon, or night;
Where the river swa'd a living stream,
And the light a pure celestial beam:
The land of vision it would seem,
A still, an everlasting dream.
In yon green-wood there is a walk,
And in that walk there is a wene,
And in that wene there is a maike,
That neither has flesh, blood, nor bane;
And down in yon green-wood he walks his lane.
In that green wene Kilmeny lay,
Her bosom happed wi' the flowerets gay;
But the air was soft, and the silence deep,
And bonny Kilmeny fell sound asleep;
She kend nae mair, nor opened her ee,
Till waked by the hymns of a far countrye.
She 'wakened on a couch of the silk sae slim,
All striped wi' the bars of the rainbow's rim;
And lovely beings around were rife,
Who erst had travelled mortal life;
And aye they smiled, and 'gan to speer:
"What spirit has brought this mortal here?"

"Lang have I journeyed the world wide,"
A meek and reverent fere replied:
"Baith night and day I have watched the fair
Eident a thousand years and mair.
Yes, I have watched o'er ilk degree,
Wherever blooms femenitye;
But sinless virgin, free of stain,
In mind and body, fand I nane.
Never, since the banquet of time,
Found I a virgin in her prime,
Till late this bonny maiden I saw,
As spotless as the morning snaw.
Full twenty years she has lived as free
As the spirits that sojourn in this countrye.
I have brought her away frae the snares of men,
That sin or death she may never ken."

They clasped her waist and her hands sae fair;
They kissed her cheek, and they kemed her hair;
And round came many a blooming fere,
Saying, "Bonny Kilmeny, ye're welcome here;
Women are freed of the littand scorn;
Oh, blest be the day Kilmeny was born!
Now shall the land of the spirits see,
Now shall it ken, what a woman may be!
Many a lang year in sorrow and pain,
Many a lang year through the world we've gane,
Commissioned to watch fair womankind,
For it's they who nurice the immortal mind.
We have watched their steps as the dawning shone,
And deep in the green-wood walks alone;
By lily bower and silken bed
The viewless tears have o'er them shed;
Have soothed their ardent minds to sleep,
Or left the couch of love to weep.
We have seen! we have seen! but the time must come,
And the angels will weep at the day of doom!

"Oh, would the fairest of mortal kind
Aye keep the holy truths in mind,
That kindred spirits their motions see,
Who watch their ways with anxious ee,
And grieve for the guilt of humanitye!
Oh, sweet to heaven the maiden's prayer,
And the sigh that heaves a bosom sae fair!
And dear to heaven the words of truth
And the praise of virtue frae beauty's mouth!
And dear to the viewless forms of air,
The minds that kythe as the body fair!
"O, bonny Kilmeny! free frae stain,
If ever you seek the world again—
That world of sin, of sorrow and fear—
Oh, tell of the joys that are waiting here;
And tell of the signs you shall shortly see;
Of the time that are now, and the times that shall be."

They lifted Kilmeny, they led her away,
And she walked in the light of a sunless day;
The sky was a dome of crystal bright,
The fountain of vision, and fountain of light;
The emerald fields were of dazzling glow,
And the flowers of everlasting blow.
Then deep in the stream her body they laid,
That her youth and beauty never might fade;
And they smiled on heaven, when they saw her lie
In the stream of life that wandered by.
And she heard a song—she heard it sung,
She kend not where; but sae sweetly it rung,
It fell on her ear like a dream of the morn—
"Oh! blest be the day Kilmeny was born!
Now shall the land of the spirits see;
Now shall it ken, what a woman may be!
The sun that shines on the world sae bright,
A borrowed gleid frae the fountain of light;
And the moon that sleeks the sky sae dun,
Like a gouden bow, or a beamless sun—
Shall wear away, and be seen nae mair;
And the angels shall miss them, travelling the air.
But lang, lang after baith night and day,
When the sun and the world have died away,
When the sinner has gane to his waesome doom,
Kilmeny shall smile in eternal bloom!"

They bore her away, she wist not how,
For she felt not arm nor rest below;
But so swift they wained her through the light,
'Twas like the motion of sound or sight;
They seemed to split the gales of air,
And yet nor gale nor breeze was there.
Unnumbered groves below them grew;
They came, they passed, and backward flew,
Like floods of blossoms gliding on,
In moment seen, in moment gone.
Oh, never vales to mortal view
Appeared like those o'er which they flew,
That land to human spirits given,
The lowermost vales of the storied heaven;
From whence they can view the world below,
And heaven's blue gates with sapphires glow—
More glory yet unmeet to know,

They bore her far to a mountain green,
To see what mortal never had seen;
And they seated her high on a purple sward,
And bade her heed what she saw and heard,
And note the changes the spirits wrought;
For now she lived in the Land of Thought.
She looked, and she saw nor sun nor skies,
But a crystal dome of a thousand dyes;
She looked, and she saw nae land aright,
But an endless whirl of glory and light;
And radiant beings went and came,
Far swifter than wind, or the linked flame;
She hid her een frae the dazzling view;
She looked again, and the scene was new.

She saw a sun on a summer sky,
And clouds of amber sailing by;
A lovely land beneath her lay,
And that land had glens and mountains gray;
And that land had valleys and hoary piles,
And marled seas, and a thousand isles;
Its fields were speckled, its forest green,
And its lakes were all of the dazzling sheen,
Like magic mirrors, where slumbering lay
The sun and the sky and the cloudlet gray,
Which heaved and trembled, and gently swung;
On every shore they seemed to be hung;
For there they were seen on their downward plain
A thousand times and a thousand again;
In winding lake and placid firth—
Little peaceful heavens in the bosom of earth.

Kilmeny sighed and seemed to grieve,
For she found her heart to that land did cleave;
She saw the corn wave on the vale;
She saw the deer run down the dale;
She saw the plaid and the broad claymore,
And the brows that the badge of freedom bore;
And she thought she had seen the land before.

She saw a lady sit on a throne,
The fairest that ever the sun shone on!
A lion licked her hand of milk,
And she held him in a leish of silk,
And a leifu' maiden stood at her knee,
With a silver wand and melting ee—
Her sovereign shield, till love stole in,
And poisoned all the fount within.

Then a gruff, untoward bedes-man came,
And hundit the lion on his dame;
And the guardian maid wi' the dauntless ee,
She dropped a tear, and she left her knee;
And she saw till the queen frae the lion fled,
Till the bonniest flower of the world lay dead;
A coffin was set on a distant plain,
And she saw the red blood fall like rain.
Then bonny Kilmeny's heart grew sair,
And she turned away, and could look nae mair.

Then the gruff, grim carle girnéd amain,
And they trampled him down—but he rose again;
And he baited the lion to deeds of weir,
Till he lapped the blood to the kingdom dear;
And, weening his head was danger-preef
When crowned with the rose and clover leaf,
He growled at the carle, and chased him away
To feed wi' the deer on the mountain gray.
He growled at the carle, and he gecked at heaven;
But his mark was set, and his arles given.
Kilmeny a while her een withdrew;
She looked again, and the scene was new.

She saw below her, fair unfurled,
One half of all the glowing world,
Where oceans rolled and rivers ran,
To bound the aims of sinful man.
She saw a people fierce and fell,
Burst frae their bounds like fiends of hell;
There lilies grew, and the eagle flew;
And she herked on her ravening crew,
Till the cities and towers were wrapped in a blaze,
And the thunder it roared o'er the lands and the seas.
The widows they wailed, and the red blood ran,
And she threatened an end to the race of man.
She never lened, nor stood in awe,
Till caught by the lion's deadly paw.
Oh! then the eagle swinked for life,
And brainzelled up a mortal strife;
But flew she north, or flew she south,
She met wi' the growl of the lion's mouth.

With a mooted wing and waefu' maen,
The eagle sought her eiry again;
But lang may she cower in her bloody nest,
And lang, lang sleek her wounded breast,
Before she sey another flight,
To play wi' the norland lion's might.

But to sing the sights Kilmeny saw,
So far surpassing nature's law,
The singer's voice wad sink away,
And the string of his harp wad cease to play.
But she saw till the sorrows of man were by,
And all was love and harmony;
Till the stars of heaven fell calmly away,
Like the flakes of snaw on a winter's day.

Then Kilmeny begged again to see
The friends she had left in her own countrye,
To tell of the place where she had been,
And the glories that lay in the land unseen;
To warn the living maidens fair,
The loved of heaven, the spirits' care,
That all whose minds unmeled remain
Shall bloom in beauty when time is gane.

With distant music, soft and deep,
They lulled Kilmeny sound asleep;
And when she awakened, she lay her lane,
All happed with flowers in the green-wood wene.
When seven long years had come and fled;
When grief was calm, and hope was dead;
When scarce was remembered Kilmeny's name,
Late, late in a gloamin, Kilmeny came hame!
And oh, her beauty was fair to see,
But still and steadfast was her ee!
Such beauty bard may never declare,
For there was no pride nor passion there;
And the soft desire of maidens' een,
In that mild face could never be seen.
Her seymar was the lily flower,
And her cheek the moss-rose in the shower;
And her voice like the distant melodye
That floats along the twilight sea.
But she loved to raike the lanely glen,
And keeped afar frae the haunts of men;
Her holy hymns unheard to sing,
To suck the flowers and drink the spring.
But wherever her peaceful form appeared,
The wild beasts of the hills were cheered;
The wolf played blythely round the field,
The lordly byson lowed and kneeled;
The dun deer wooed with manner bland,
And cowered aneath her lily hand.
And when at even the woodlands rung,
When hymns of other worlds she sung
In ecstasy of sweet devotion,
Oh, then the glen was all in motion!
The wild beasts of the forest came,
Broke from their bughts and faulds the tame,
And goved around, charmed and amazed;
Even the dull cattle crooned and gazed,
And murmured and looked with anxious pain,
For something the mystery to explain.
The buzzard came with the throstle-cock,
The corby left her houf in the rock;
The black-bird along wi' the eagle flew;
The hind came tripping o'er the dew;
The wolf and the kid their raike began;
And the tod, and the lamb, and the leveret ran;
The hawk and the hern attour them hung,
And the merl and the mavis forhooyed their young;
And all in a peaceful ring were hurled:
It was like an eve in a sinless world!

When a month and day had come and gane,
Kilmeny sought the green-wood wene;
There laid her down on the leaves sae green,
And Kilmeny on earth was never mair seen.
But oh, the words that fell from her mouth,
Were words of wonder, and words of truth!
But all the land were in fear and dread,
For they kend na whether she was living or dead.
It wasna her hame, and she couldna remain;
She left this world of sorrow and pain,
And returned to the Land of Thought again.

Sittin' Pretty Is Work

Most models marry well or graduate to the stage or Hollywood. Blanche Grady, one of the most beautiful girls employed by a famous New York agency, has just got her break in the films and will be seen soon in the movie version of "Louisiana Purchase."

and must constantly worry about their reputations.

"This work is interesting and not too difficult," said one shapely young woman who prefers to be unnamed, "but people outside do not seem to understand how completely impersonal it is. These people about"—she waved at the preoccupied young men and women plying their brushes—"simply regard me as part of the furniture. The men are far more interested in the clothed girls working beside them than they are in me.

"I have never seen an artist who was not a gentleman. But I can't say that for some other men. They're always trying to get lists of 'regular nudes.' There is one man who calls on us, claiming his wife is starting an art class and that he wants to hire models. We have nothing to do with him, of course."

The art schools guard their models by refusing to reveal their lists and by checking thoroly if an artist calls for a girl.

It is not difficult to get work modeling at the School of the Art Institute if you have the appearance and personality that appeal to instructors and students. You simply apply to Dean Norman L. Rice, register with his secretary, and then await a call if you can be used. Of 250 persons now listed perhaps 50 are called regularly, and fewer still work eight hours daily under contract. Dancers are welcomed as registrants, for their training usually makes them good models.

The pay is 70 to 90 cents an hour, little enough, for a model must pose for 25 minutes at a time and is likely to begin a schedule at 9 in the morning and finish it at 9 at night. The accommodations for models are not as good as a school of such excellent reputation might be expected to provide. Studios are kept warm, but figure models disrobe in a bare little cubicle shut off by a shower curtain, with no place to hang their clothes. They ought, say the girls, have some kind of dressing quarters that are comfortable, a shower bath, and a lounge room where they might spend time between sittings. Most commercial studios are even worse.

"Many artists are heartless," one girl said. "Their studios are dirty, they give us no place to put our clothes, no place to relax. We've tried to do something about it, and got exactly nowhere."

• • •

* Any one caring for a sample of the figure model's work can try it readily enough. Strip in a room at 75 degrees, outline spots for your feet on the floor, then stand rigid, but look relaxed, with arms upraised, for 25 minutes. Rest five minutes on the floor, and repeat for eight hours. Meanwhile wear the come-hither smile of a Lamour or stuff out your massive chest like Tarzan.

If you like it you can perhaps go to work, for there is a scarcity of good nudes.

Most artist models, however, are costume models. They get as weary as the nudes, usually draw less pay, and have more competition. Still, special types are wanted in this field. Beauty is not demanded, but the model must have inspirational qualities to fire an artist.

The artist models are not at all dispirited by the rigors of their profession. Most of them are fond of painting, and some have studied it. Some are dancers, well poised girls who know muscle control. All have imagination, particularly needed in an artist model, and they firmly feel they are contributing usefully to the nation's art, which is without doubt true.

Among the most popular artist models in town is red-haired Merry Berry, a former kindergarten teacher who works in Chicago during the fall, winter, and spring and lives on a farm in Arkansas in summer. Merry came to Chicago from Arkansas with a younger sister and began modeling to help her sister thru school. She averages between 30 and 35 hours of work a week.

"A model must have genuine sympathy for art," said Merry. "She must be able to visualize an artist's requirements. A poor model can exasperate a painter. If she's bored or depressed or restless a painter will be, too. Before a class the problem is multiplied."

Mari Wagner, also much in demand, averages 40 hours a week in the studios, not counting, of course, the various times out that stretch the average model's day to 12 hours. She began posing in 1933. A professor in the Ringling art school at Sarasota, Fla., saw her on the beach and urged her to pose. Mari has been modeling ever since. Rose Postel, another contract model at the Art institute, pays for dancing instruction with her work and will appear soon in a Goodman theater dance production. One of the youngest Institute models is Miriam James, from New York, a shy little girl who wants to study painting.

• • •

There are a number of artist models who travel from one city to another, working for brief periods before moving on. They carry letters of recommendation from established artists, and during the school year frequently work before the art classes of colleges and universities.

The career of a model is usually about four years, altho some, of course, may work a lifetime. For every job available there are thousands of persons who hope to become models, and one agent reports he turns away more than 500 applicants a month.

The successful professional finds modeling one of the pleasantest of occupations, even tho it is uncertain and by no means easy. Most models marry well or graduate to the stage or Hollywood. Looking pretty has always been a woman's business; and maintaining a fine wardrobe is no hardship if one's income allows it.

MIX YOUR MEAT

Brown sugqr flavored baked beans are wonderful with browned sausage links and a crisp salad.

By MARY MEADE

COMBINATION meat dishes are a big part of the solution to that meat budget problem. They are economical, and most of them are very good.

Here's one excellent dish which comes largely out of cans. It shows what can be done in an emergency if the cupboard shelves are as well stocked as they should be.

SPAGHETTI WITH MEAT BALLS AND MUSHROOMS

(Serves six)

1 24-ounce can spaghetti in tomato sauce with cheese
½ pound ground lean beef
½ pound ground pork
2 cups rice flakes
¾ cup milk
1 egg
¼ teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon salt
1 small can mushroom pieces

Make the meat balls by combining all ingredients but spaghetti and mushrooms. Mix thoroly, shape into small balls, and brown in hot fat. Add mushrooms and cook until hot. Push meat balls and mushrooms to one side of the skillet, add spaghetti to other side, and heat. Pile hot spaghetti onto a platter and top with meat balls and mushrooms.

Beans with sausage links make another savory meat dish. Prepare the beans according to the following recipe, then cook the sausages gently with a little water in a covered skillet. Remove cover and brown them after water evaporates.

BAKED BEANS

(Serves six-eight)

2 pounds navy beans
½ pound salt pork
1 can tomato soup
1 cup brown sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 or 2 onions

Wash beans, cover with water, and allow to stand overnight. Cook slowly, at simmering, for one hour. Drain and save water. Pour half the beans into a four-quart container which has a cover and add half the tomato soup, brown sugar, and salt. Lay thinly sliced salt pork over the beans. Add remaining beans, soup, sugar, and salt. Add onion. Cover and bake for six hours at 300 degrees.

With the bean and sausage combination serve a crisp salad or any kind of vegetable combination salad, hard rolls, milk, and a fruit dessert.

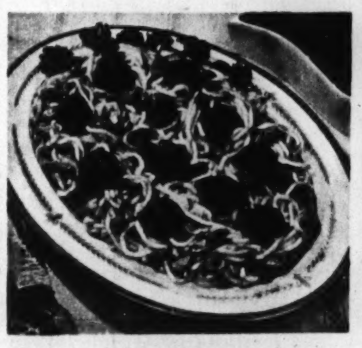
Here's something everybody likes, a combination of ham with potatoes and vegetables. This version is particularly savory.

HAM AND VEGETABLE CASSEROLE

(Serves four)

2 cups sliced cooked potatoes
4 green onions, chopped
1 package frozen peas or parboiled lima beans
4 cooked carrots, sliced
1 can cream of mushroom soup
Salt, pepper
1 slice ham to cover casserole

Slice potatoes into buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Add thawed peas (cook them first if you don't want to wait for thawing), chopped onions (tops included), carrots. Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper. Pour mushroom soup over all. If you use the condensed kind, dilute it with milk. Lay ham slice on top and bake in a 350-degree oven for 35-40 minutes.



The spaghetti came out of a can for this easily fixed combination meat dish.

The kind of casserole just described may be prepared with innumerable variations. For example, sausage patties or links may replace the ham, sweet potatoes may be used in place of the white ones, canned or cooked vegetables may be used in place of frozen ones, and another kind of canned soup—celery, tomato, or corn chowder, to name a few—might become the sauce.

Serve a crisp salad, hot rolls, coffee, and baked apples with cream with the ham casserole.

THESE ARE OUR ARMY'S WEAPONS!

By WALTER TROHAN
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C.

WITH THE WAR department undertaking upon the order of President Roosevelt a survey of the number of machines which will be needed for American defense, The Tribune today publishes a complete list of the weapons of the United States army.

The list is inclusive, from hand grenades to 16 inch costal artillery. It is concerned only with offensive weapons, and does not include such adjuncts as searchlights, computors, range finders, repair trucks, bridge building equipment, road building machinery, medical corps supplies, and the like.

The list was prepared with the coöperation of war department personnel and has been checked by the war department for accuracy. In the case of some weapons, details of function are not given, because they are regarded as military secrets.

The weapons listed are those employed by the various fighting units of the United States army. These are the infantry, cavalry, field artillery, coast artillery corps, air forces, corps of engineers, and signal corps.

(Tribune, Acme, Associated Press photos.)

In the case of the air forces, the list does not mention the various types of army planes, nor their performance, because virtually all plane information is regarded as a military secret. The list gives the machine guns, cannon, and bombs which planes carry.

At the war department it was said that The Tribune list is the most complete which has been published to date, and should afford Tribune readers an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the wide variety of weapons which go into the making of a modern army.

The survey of weapon needs for national defense, ordered by the President, also is to include a study of the weapon needs for nations receiving lease-lend aid. Raw material needs also will be explored. Mr. Roosevelt plans to submit a report on the matter to congress late this fall or perhaps early in January.

Winchester carbine.

.30 caliber machine gun.

90 mm. anti-aircraft guns.

HAND GRENADE—Weighs 1.3 pounds and has a maximum range of 50 yards.

SERVICE PISTOL, .45 CALIBER—Weighs 2.4 pounds and fires semi-automatically a bullet weighing 230 grains. Weapon intended for use at maximum range of 50 yards, but has killing range up to 500 feet.

WINCHESTER CARBINE — This weapon is eight inches shorter than the Garand or Springfield rifles, and was designed largely to supplant the pistol. It fires a .30 caliber, 110 grain bullet semi-automatically from 10 or 20 cartridge magazines. It weighs five pounds and has an effective range up to 300 yards.

SPRINGFIELD RIFLE—Bolt action, hand manipulated weapon weighing 8.4 pounds. It fires a 150 grain bullet to a maximum distance of 5,500 yards at the rate of 7 to 10 shots a minute, but is designed for use up to about 1,000 yards. Demands of modern warfare for rapid fire small arms have rendered this weapon obsolete.

GARAND RIFLE—Semi-automatic weapon weighing 9.4 pounds. It fires a 150 grain bullet at the rate of 15 to 30 shots a minute to a distance of 5,500 yards, altho the army claims accuracy for it up to only 1,000 yards.

THOMPSON SUBMACHINE GUN—This weapon uses the .45 caliber pistol bullet, and weighs 9 pounds 13 ounces. It can be fired single shot, semi-automatically, or fully automatically. Its rate of automatic fire is up to 400 shots a minute.* It takes 20 shot box magazines or 50 shot drum magazines. Its manufacturers claim for it an effective range up to 400 to 600 yards.

BROWNING AUTOMATIC RIFLE—A .30 caliber weapon using rifle ammunition. It weighs 16 pounds, and fires from a magazine of 20 rounds, semi-automatically or fully automatically. In fully automatic fire it delivers several hundred shots a minute. Maximum range is 5,500 yards; accurate extreme range from 1,200 to 1,500 yards.

MACHINE GUNS, .30 CALIBER—These weapons are capable of firing 525 bullets a minute to approximately 3,500 yards. The bullet is 150 grains. The light machine gun is recoil operated, belt fed, and air cooled. The heavy machine gun is the standard water cooled weapon, weighing 30 pounds and considerably heavier than the light model. There also are .30 caliber fixed and flexible aircraft machine guns. The fixed models are rigid in the plane, while the flexible models are mounted on swivels.

MACHINE GUNS, .50 CALIBER—Similar to the .30 caliber models, except that they fire a much heavier bullet (681 grains) at a faster rate and to a greater distance. These weapons fire 600 rounds a minute and have a maximum range of about four miles. There are water cooled and air cooled models, and fixed and flexible mounts for aircraft. Fifty caliber bullet will penetrate ¾ inch steel at 1,000 yards, but not the thick armor of modern tanks.

37 MM. GUNS—The bore of this weapon is about 1.4 inches. The projectile weighs approximately one pound, and is fired at the rate of 30 to 100 a minute. The gun has a maximum range of 7,500 yards. It is adapted to anti-tank and anti-aircraft use, and is employed as an aircraft cannon.

20 MM. AUTOMATIC GUN—American version of Swiss Oerlikon automatic gun, used with success by both British and Axis powers in current war. It fires at the rate of several hundred rounds a minute, and is designed to be mounted on planes.

40 MM. GUN—Recent army development of Bofors automatic gun. It is said to have greater velocity, accuracy, and fire power than the 37 mm. gun. It fires at a rate of 120 to 140 rounds a minute, and has a maximum horizontal range of 11,000 yards. It has been adopted as the army's newest answer to ground strafing planes.

(The doubt is raised as to whether the 20 mm. and the 40 mm. guns are as efficient as the weapons after which they were designed.)

75 MM. PACK HOWITZER—Developed primarily for use in mountain or jungle country. The weapon and its carriage can be divided into six loads for muleback transport. It has a range of about five miles with a 15 pound projectile.

Graphic Laboratory of Popular Science

75 MM. GUN—The World war model of this weapon. It shoots a 15 pound projectile 8,000 yards, and its traverse and elevation are extremely limited.

75 MM. GUN M2—A modernization of the World war fieldpiece. It has a split trail, permitting greater elevation and wider traverse, and fires a 15 pound shell 13,600 yards. The weapon now is used for anti-tank service, but both as an anti-tank gun and as a fieldpiece it is obsolescent, being too difficult to train on a swiftly moving tank and too light for artillery bombardment.

75 MM. TANK GUN — This weapon is a development of the standard 75, and shoots a 15 pound shell about 8,000 yards, an indication that it is a medium velocity gun. The method of mounting it in a sponson type mount on the medium tank has been criticized.

3 INCH ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN—Fires a high explosive shell approximately six miles into the air at the rate of 25 to 30 aimed shots a minute. It is said to be far less effective than the heavier caliber anti-aircraft weapons.

90 MM. ANTI-AIRCRAFT GUN—Designed to meet the need for greater fire power in anti-aircraft guns. Has the advantage of a greater range, increased velocity of shell, and a heavier projectile over the 3 inch model. It has a greater radius of burst and may be fired more rapidly.

105 MM. HOWITZER—Now the standard field weapon of artillery, replacing largely the 75 mm. It fires a 33 pound shell about 7 miles.

105 MM. GUN—A longer barrel gives the 33 pound projectile a greater range for pounding distant enemy lines, communications, and strategic centers.

155 MM. GUN—New weapon which shoots 95 pound shell 15 miles. Can be towed at 55 miles per hour.

8 INCH HOWITZER — Designed for use with 155 mm. gun. Shoots 200 pound projectile more than 9 miles. It can also be towed at 55 miles an hour.

240 MM. HOWITZER — War time model. Shoots a 345 pound projectile about 9 miles. Considered too clumsy and difficult to handle in highly mobile warfare.

60 MM. MORTAR — This weapon has a caliber of 2.4 inches and fires a 2.4 pound projectile 1,300 yards.

81 MM. MORTAR—A larger version of the preceding weapon. Fires a 7.2 or 15.2 pound projectile. Maximum range 3,280 yards.

42 MORTAR — Designed for cavalry to fire smoke shells as defense against hostile anti-tank weapons. Also fires gas shells. Range is 2,400 yards as against 800 for World war type.

8 INCH RAILWAY GUN—Fires a 100 pound shell 20 miles. The weapon now is obsolete.

10, 12, 14, AND 16 INCH GUNS—The coast artillery has a number of old 10, 12, 14, and 16 inch guns which fire projectiles weighing from half a ton to slightly more than a ton from 12 to 30 miles. These were built for the purpose of holding off heavily armored ships. The coast artillery also has 12 inch mortars. Many officers believe the function of these weapons has been taken over by bombing planes.

DEMOLITION BOMBS—The army has four types of demolition bombs which weigh 250, 500, 1,000, and 2,000 pounds. Approximately 30 per cent of the weight is TNT.

FRAGMENTATION BOMBS—Of two types—a 20 pound model and a 23 pound model which is dropped by parachute. These bombs are designed for use against personnel and vehicles.

LAND MINES—These vary with the situation. In addition to the standard small mine, mines of various sizes are built for the need of the moment, principal use being against tanks.

SEA MINES—The army sows sea mines in harbors. The mines which are controled by cable from shore and may be fired at will are in the province of the army, while the uncontroled mines, which have no shore connection and are exploded by contact or by various mechanical devices which operate when a ship passes, are in the province of the navy.

LIGHT TANK—There are several models of the light tank, but the standard model is a 13½ ton vehicle operated by a crew of four. It carries a 37 mm. gun, five machine guns, and two submachine guns.

MEDIUM TANK—Weighs 28 tons and is equipped with a 75 mm. cannon, one 37 mm. gun, four machine guns, and a number of submachine guns.

HEAVY TANK—One gigantic 60 ton T-1 tank recently rolled off the assembly line at the Baldwin Locomotive company plant at Eddystone, Pa. This is the first heavy tank to be produced in America and soon will be taken to the Aberdeen, Md., proving grounds for testing. The tank will be operated by a crew of seven men and bristles with armament. Details of the armament and speed are secret.

SCOUT CAR—A small, fast armored car; mounts one .50 and two .30 caliber machine guns.

HALF TRACK SCOUT CAR—Has caterpillar tractors for rear wheels and is designed to go where the four wheeled scout car may not be able to travel.

"JEEP"—Small four wheeled vehicle which may mount a 37 mm. cannon or machine guns to attack tanks in swarms.

RECONNAISSANCE CAR—Fast moving four wheeled vehicle, which carries no weapons other than those in the hands of its occupants. Designed strictly for the purpose from which it takes its name.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS BY BOB BECKER

ACCORDING to a recent checkup by the American Kennel club, American dog fanciers have diversified tastes in dogs. If you take 50 average owners in any city or town you may find they are partial to anywhere from six to a dozen different breeds. The Kennel club points out that the shows held by dog clubs all over the United States are playing an increasingly important rôle in giving owners opportunities to get better acquainted with more than 100 breeds now recognized by the American Kennel club.

After exhibiting in a number of dog shows and attending many others, both large and small, it's not difficult to list some of the attractions of these bench events which bring together pure-breds of many breeds, dog authorities, breeders, dog lovers, and veterinarians. For the average dog owner, who doesn't own a show dog and does not expect to show his pet in competition, one of the biggest attractions of a show is the chance to learn about care, feeding, and grooming of one's favorite breed. And to the family about to purchase a dog, but undecided about the breed, a show is a golden opportunity to size up different breeds and talk with experts on the different qualities of all breeds.

To have a dog show come along about the time a person is thinking about purchasing a new pet, or is trying to decide between several breeds, always is a help. We advise these people to go to a dog show, look at all the breeds they are considering, and talk to kennel owners. By so doing the prospective buyer often is able to make a decision on his problem, because in an hour or so he picks up information he couldn't obtain otherwise except by driving around the countryside visiting kennels for many days.

It's not unusual for the average dog owner to ask the difference between an all-breed dog show and a specialty show. An all-breed show is an open event in which any recognized breed from a Chihuahua to a St. Bernard can compete. In this type of show there is competition to select the best dog of each breed, later judging to pick the best dog of each group (terrier, sporting dog, hound, etc.), and finally the best dog in the show.

A specialty show is different in that as a rule only one breed may compete. This type of show usually is promoted by one club interested in a certain breed. When just one of these specialty clubs puts on its show there may not be an extremely large number of dogs present. But when 24 different clubs, all interested in a different breed, get together under the same room for a combined show, the entries number many hundreds and spectators thus have an opportunity to see more than one breed. Such a large combined specialty event is held in Chicago at this time of the year. This type of event really is 24 shows brought together and held during two days.

SHOWS

At either an all-breed or a specialty show we urge dog lovers to do these things: (1) If you want advice on a certain dog problem or a certain breed, walk up to a breeder who will be sitting or standing near his dogs and put your questions to him. He will be glad to advise novice owners. (2) If you are thinking about buying a puppy or a grown dog, spend a little time around the benches looking at specimens from various kennels, and when you think you have found the dog you like, ask the exhibitor if he has any puppies for sale or where you can get the type of dog you are looking for. (3) If it's grooming you are interested in, leave the benches and find the corner where the professional handlers are working. Stand near the boxes of a handler and watch him work.

manded our motorcyclists — motorcyclists without motorcycles, mind you—had fallen on the battlefield only a few steps from the colonel.

The following conversation took place between the general and the colonel:

The General: Why are you so late, Col. de Buissy?

The Colonel: We held Ste. Menehould as long as we could.

The General: You could have retreated long ago. I have been waiting here for 21 hours.

The Colonel: I am sorry. We tried to resist. Unfortunately, mon général, our arms were more than deficient, as you well know.

The General: How many men were killed?

The Colonel: At least 500. With normal equipment we would have had 400 less casualties.

The General: Five hundred Jews the less.

The Colonel: The Jews fought like the rest. Moreover, there were at least as many Christians as Jews.

The General: You don't look well, Colonel.

The Colonel: I am somewhat tired.

The General: Excellent! Mme. de Buissy will be very glad to have you back.

The Colonel: Do you mean that I am relieved of my command?

The General: I mean that within one hour you will be taken to the peaceful south in an ambulance.

The Colonel: Thank you! But I am neither sick nor injured. I have been with this regiment from the first minute of its existence and I intend to remain at the head of my men to my last breath. My regiment has fought heroically. I deserve—

The General: How old are you, Col. de Buissy?

The Colonel: Fifty-eight.

The General: You deserve a rest, my dear de Buissy. Your nerves are frayed. You'll be taken to the rear in one hour. At the same time Lieut. Col. Landry will arrive here.

The Colonel: You mean that my successor has already been appointed?

The General: Yes! And I hope you enjoy your well deserved rest.

The Colonel: Is that an order?

The General: Yes.

The Colonel: I accept under protest.

The General: I am convinced that Mme. de Buissy will not protest having you back with her.

Ligny-en-Barrios has 4,612 inhabitants and a railroad station. We found the city empty and the station full.

• • •

About a hundred yards from Ligny four or five officers blocked our way. They were all shouting at once, and I couldn't understand them at first. A captain whom I did not know and who did not belong to our regiment seized me by the arm.

"Hey, sergeant. Don't forget to stop at the station. The station is full. Take what you find. If you can't take it with you, set it on fire."

He hiccupped. He reeked of liquor. His eyes were bleary, and it cost him an effort to form his words.

"There's plenty to drink, too."

He pinched my arm.

"Whatever you do, don't leave anything. What you can't take with you, set on fire. Understand? The Germans will be here right away. Whatever you do, don't leave anything."

He waved his riding crop at us until we turned into the street leading to the station.

Many cars were standing in front of the station; some belonging to officers, one or two army trucks, three or four "commandeered" delivery wagons.

This was the largest freight station in the vicinity. The last consignments of goods had not been forwarded, and there were three spurs full of loaded cars. The men were breaking into the cars, opening up packing cases by the hundreds.

Ligny-en-Barrois is in the middle of the Champagne country. There was an entire train, at least 15 or 20 cars long, full of cognac and the noble, bubbly drink known thruout the world as champagne, in honor of this country; the symbol and taboo of luxury, love, and the things that happen but once in a lifetime. The officers outside the city had apparently directed all the arriving regiments toward the station, for innumerable champagne and cognac bottles were strewn about. To reach the platform from the second track, where the champagne train stood, you had to wade thru a field of broken glass; hundreds of bottles had been emptied and smashed on the spot. Countless bottles had been half emptied and abandoned; a sticky, light brown mixture of cognac and champagne oozed out of the cars.

Civilian fugitives had also taken part in the orgy. I stumbled over a drunken old woman who had slipped off a champagne crate and fallen face downward in the broken glass. Champagne, blood and cognac flowed all around her wretched, writhing body. A soldier with an unforgettably foolish look sat precariously on a crate humming a tune and brandishing a champagne bottle in either hand. At every instant I expected him to fall into the sea of broken glass. An officer stood beside him but said nothing. He was too busy trying to load a crate labeled Grand Marnier on his back. A horde of soldiers, among them an officer and at least two noncoms, had devised a vandals' sport. Along the tracks they set up nine champagne bottles like nine pins and bowled at them with other bottles. Each time glass struck glass and both bottles crashed, the players let out a bloodcurdling yell, joined hands, and danced about in a ring, kissing one another and emptying a few more bottles.

Next Sunday—I am a prisoner of the Nazis.

I barely managed to dissuade my men from taking part in this tragic orgy. But I did not have the strength to prevent them from each taking two bottles of champagne and loading a case containing fifty small bottles of Grand Marnier onto our truck. Then at last they were ready, tho still reluctant, to drive off.

South of Ligny, all the regiments we passed had followed the order to leave the Germans nothing. Whole columns of infantry marched by with champagne bottles in their pockets. Some of the officers — among them Capt. Billerot of my own company—marched at the head of their columns with downcast eyes, never looking up, overcome by a profound disgust and an unspeakable sadness. But these officers were in the minority. A man needs a good deal of strength to accept misfortune and refuse to take refuge in drink and forgetfulness. More and more cars full of fleeing officers passed us, and every last one of them was piled high with bottles, packing cases, food. We passed innumerable columns without officers. For several days now the highways had been full of stray soldiers who claimed to have lost their regiments. No one thought of stopping them, questioning them, fitting them into a regiment. Desertion was taken for granted: officers left their companies, companies left their regiments, regiments dwindled to the vanishing point.

The drama at Ligny was repeated at nearly every town we passed thru later. Officers, noncoms, privates stood at the gate and invited those who followed to plunder: "Don't let anything fall into the hands of the Germans." Outside each town stood the tempter. And in every town the same drama was repeated. The shops—abandoned in haste by their owners a few hours before—were plundered. But never was plundering more senseless. The soldiers stole whatever came to their hands, just for the sake of stealing. Thousands of soldiers hobbled along the highway, and out of their pockets hung bottles, women's shoes, neckties, ribbons, toys. A Negro soldier was carrying three or four women's corsets. The ribbons hung down and twisted around his legs. Baby carriages rolled along, bearing champagne, cognac, shirts, clocks, umbrellas, coffee mills. Scarcely any of the soldiers had retained their steel helmets or khaki bonnets de police. Most had found hats in some store.

The witches' sabbath increased in horror and absurdity. Since every town and village offered new luxuries, the officers in the fleeing cars threw overboard the loot from the last town to make room for new merchandise. The loot from a whole town would be lying on the highway five kilometers further on. Several big cheese stores had been completely plundered. Soon afterward, other delicacies were found, and now the Port de Salut, Roblechons, Roqueforts, lay on the road by the hundreds. Cars drove thru cheese. The wheels sank into the soft yellow mass. The best things that the best men in France, the peasants of this peasant country, had created in the sweat of their brow, were thrown on the road and trampled on. Champagne, the product of hundreds of years of diligence and skill, flowed in the ditches.

And so we dashed thru the provinces of the Marne, the Meuse, the Vosges, the cities of Void and Vaucouleurs, and thru the village of Domremy-la-Pucelle where the French national saint, Jeanne d'Arc, was born. In front of the house where St. Joan was born, two soldiers were fighting over a bicycle. We were stopped near the little village of Alain on the road between Nancy and Neufchateau. Saint-Brice stood by the roadside and gave us the signal to halt.

I stood beside Saint-Brice and looked into his good calm face.

"I want to speak with you," he said, and sat down in the grass.

I sat down beside him and waited. He was playing with a blade of grass.

Then he said: "We can be proud of the 21st. Not a man of the survivors is missing. The regiment has managed to get here—God knows how. They're asleep up there in the woods."

I listened to him, but I knew that wasn't what he wanted to tell me. He was just talking for the sake of talking.

"Are we going on?" I asked.

Then he turned to me, looked into my eyes, and seized my hands. "No," he said simply. "We aren't going on. We have received orders to lay down our arms. We are entirely surrounded. France has sued for an armistice."

He stood up and turned away. I, too, stood up. I looked around. We were standing in a broad field, slanting up to the woods. The noonday sun blazed in the sky. The meadow was yellow in the sun, and gave off a peaceful summer smell. The grasshoppers chirped, and a soft breeze stirred the blades of grass. Everything about us was large and still. And before us on the road stood the image of the Mother of God.

We exchanged a fleeting glance. Then we went down to the little chapel, with the grating before the altar. A few faded flowers lay on a white cloth, beneath the statue of the Virgin.

Then we knelt down and prayed.

Know Your Camera

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

TAKING unusual pictures often depends on your ability to see commonplace subjects in an unusual way. One recipe for getting such pictures is to watch for reflections in mirrors or other smooth, shiny surfaces.

From striking portraits to such oddities as wildly distorted pictures of people and things, the use of reflections will aid you in snapping something out of the ordinary. To start with portraits, some of the most effective studies ever made place the subject close to a mirror, photographing simultaneously two different views of the face.

Such portrait studies are effective because no single view of a face can take in all the characteristics of a person. By showing two different views in the same picture you can make the portrait very often more revealing than a straight shot.

Flat surfaces give the most perfect reflections, but very often a slight amount of distortion will add to the pictorial effect. Take, for instance, the reflections of people, houses, or boats in water. If the water is absolutely still and the reflection perfect, the picture is apt to be quite ordinary and disappointing. But if there are small ripples on the water surface they break up the image to form an intriguing pattern.

You get a different type of distortion when photographing reflections on the curved surfaces of glass or silver bowls, automobile headlights or shiny car bodies, convex or concave mirrors, or countless other objects you may run across.

Still another type of reflection can be found on flat window panes, which act as semi-transparent mirrors. Under favorable light conditions showcases or apartment windows will reflect an interesting scene, but at the same time also show details of the objects behind them.

Sometimes a reflection picture has a certain symbolic meaning, based on the object in which the reflection is photographed, and on the scene itself. A good example is a family scene at Christmas, snapped as it is reflected in a glass Christmas tree ball. Very striking also are reflections of scenes on dark sun glasses. Here you can snap the portrait of a person wearing the glasses, and let the reflection show where the picture was taken.

Interesting multiple reflections can be photographed by posing the subject in front of two mirrors placed at an angle. If the angle of the mirrors is 90 degrees you see three images. At 60 degrees you get five images, at 45 degrees seven. If the mirrors are parallel your picture will show an endless row of images.

There is one general rule for focusing reflection pictures. You should not focus on the reflecting object, but should set your camera for the combined distance of the subject to the mirror plus the camera to the mirror. If the subject itself also appears in the picture you may have to stop down your lens to get greater depth of field so that both the subject and its reflection appear sharp.

A great depth of field is required for mirror pictures if you include both subject and reflection.

asleep," said McGrath, "provided they sleep soundly."

"We'll have to try," said the agent. "They're ordinary bags. I'll get in touch with one of the stores. We'll have to make the switch quickly. You get 'em out when you can. Jim here will help you."

McGrath waited until well after midnight. Twice during the night the house detectives try the locks of all doors to make sure they are fastened snugly. But that night when he tried 1206 McGrath gently unlocked the door and pushed it open. Fortunately the chain had not been fastened. He had extinguished the corridor lights, and he crept quietly into the darkness until his groping hands found the bags. He dragged them out and closed the door. There were no sounds within the room.

The federal men worked speedily. They had on hand a department store executive, who said that the luggage could be quickly duplicated from the stocks in his department. Half an hour later they returned with bags identical with those McGrath had taken from the travelers. Monogram tags were quickly removed from the old luggage and affixed to the new. Then the new bags were scuffed and marked until they exactly resembled the old. After that the agents carefully removed all belongings from the original bags and, after searching them carefully, placed them in the new luggage. McGrath stealthily placed the new bags in room 1206, then locked the door without having disturbed the guests.

"Thanks, McGrath," said the agent in charge. "These men will fly to Detroit tomorrow, and then go into Canada. They're accredited representatives of a European government, and we can't cause a fuss by detaining them. If they have not hidden anything in the linings of these bags they'll be none the worse off and may never know we suspected them. If they have hidden something, we've got it, and they'll be glad hereafter to stay out of this country."

McGrath stayed down to watch the men depart. At 6 in the morning they came blithely from the elevator, paid their account, and ate a good breakfast. Then they took an air line car to the city airport.

That was the last McGrath heard of the case.

"RIO RITA"—Another Gem of Ziegfeldana

The Chicago Theater of the Air will present "Rio Rita," starring Marion Claire and Thomas L. Thomas, on Saturday night, Dec. 6, over W-G-N and the Mutual network.

IT IS SAID of the late Florenz Ziegfeld, producer of "Rio Rita," that "he touched with a degree of fame almost every one associated with him." Certainly he was the one individual who influenced the American musical comedy and revue more than any one else. Like Serge Diaghileff, for so many years the guiding light of the Russian ballet, he knew how to combine the right authors, composers, and performers into a delectable theatrical dish that would invariably tempt hungry customers into the legitimate houses for months on end.

FLORENZ ZIEGFELD

In this way he, too, was a creative artist, altho he may never have set a word or note on paper for his own shows. He originated and made an American institution out of the famous "Ziegfeld Follies," which ran into no fewer than 24 editions. He was responsible for the finest light opera America has produced to date, the immortal "Show Boat." He fostered such typically American talent as that of the late Will Rogers. A wizard at getting publicity for himself and his shows, he also knew how to make the latter glisten with beauty and laughter. A tasteful lavishness characterized each and every spectacle he fathered.

Ethelind Terry, the original Rio Rita.

The Ziegfeld production which concerns us here, "Rio Rita," is a typical example of the master's touch. Two veteran musical comedy librettists, Guy Bolton and Fred Thompson, supplied the book. Harry Tierney, who had scored an amazing success with "Irene," wrote the music to lyrics by Joseph McCarthy. A newcomer and a veteran, John W. Harkrider and Joseph Urban, designed the costumes and the scenery. Chorus routines and ballets were staged by two such experienced directors as Sammy Lee and Albertina Rasch. And a handsome mixture of budding and mature talent was evidenced in the original cast: Ethelind Terry sang the title rôle; J. Harold Murray appeared opposite her as Jim Stewart, the heroic captain of the Texas Rangers; comedy was injected by Robert Woolsey as Ed Lovett, Bert Wheeler as Chick Bean, and Ada-May as Dolly.

Ziegfeld used "Rio Rita" to open an elaborate new theater in New York bearing his name on Feb. 2, 1927. The critics were as lavish in their praise of this latest hit as the stage designer and costumer had apparently been with color. On this recommendation the public came in droves for many months. After a while Ziegfeld sent it out on the road, meanwhile busying himself with the creation of three simultaneous successes, "Show Boat," "The Three Musketeers," starring Dennis King, and "Rosalie," starring Marilyn Miller and Jack Donahue.

In Chicago "Rio Rita" opened at the Illinois theater on Oct. 15, 1928, with most of the original cast intact. Of the important parts only that of Dolly had been reassigned—to Marie Dayne. Here it had a respectable run of four months.

The following year the work was transformed into what was then quaintly known as an "all-talker." Wheeler and Woolsey repeated their comic characterizations on the screen, while John Boles and Bebe Daniels assumed the parts of the hero and heroine. As proof of its hardiness and lingering popularity "Rio Rita" has been revived this season by the Shuberts and is currently touring the country.

For most people the memory of a superior musical show is preserved and recollected in the melodies which were heard in it. In "Rio Rita" the hit tunes were the "March of the Rangers," the title song, and "The Kinkajou." Three others—"Are You There?", "If You're in Love You'll Waltz," and "Following the Sun Around"—also found favor.

As noted before, they constituted Harry Tierney's contribution to the success of the musical comedy. Tierney was born in Perth Amboy, N. J., on May 21, 1894. From the local high school he learned something of what he now knows about music; the rest was supplied by the Virgil Conservatorium of Music in nearby New York City. These studies led to a profitable 10 years as a concert pianist in Europe and the United States.

The creative urge asserted itself along about 1917 and Tierney turned out the musical numbers for a show called "What Next?" In another two years he was ready to compose one of the biggest musical comedy hits of this century, "Irene."

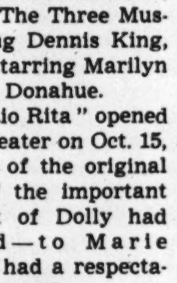
Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: As long as I have been reading your column, and that has been a long time, I have never seen anything about Charlie Ruggles in it. I always thought he was a good actor, but after seeing him in "The Parson of Panamint" I knew he was an excellent actor. It seems to me that he can act any part given him. If you can find room in your column to print a picture of him, please do; and could you tell me something about him, too? I won't wish you good luck, because you have done such excellent work in your column in the past that you don't need luck.

E. D. ROUSSELL JR.

Dubuque, Ia.



Charlie Ruggles

Dear Mr. Roussell: You're right about Ruggles (sounds like a slogan, doesn't it?). Here's his picture. Thanks for the kind words, but please don't start skimping on your good wishes! Mr. Ruggles was born in Los Angeles, Cal. He's 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 145 pounds, and has brown hair and light gray eyes. Stage career started when he was 15, when he went to San Francisco and took part in Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton." After this played stock in San Francisco and Los Angeles. Later went to New York and appeared in many stage productions. Screen career started in 1929.

Dear Miss Tinée: My favorite movie star is Ray Milland. Would you tell me where to write for one of his autographed pictures? Thank you.

M. J. HALL.

Dear Mr. Hall: You can write to Mr. Milland in care of Paramount studio, 5451 Marathon street, Hollywood, Cal. The usual cost of photographs is 25 cents.

YEAH? WHAT DO YOU MEAN, SURPRISE?
MORGUE
CHESTER GOULD
FINGERPRINTS FOUND ON THIS MANHOLE COVER HAVE PROVED TO BE THOSE OF THE MOLE!
THE MOLE? YOU MEAN THAT VICIOUS KILLER WHO WAS SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN MURDERED BY HIS OWN GANG IN- -IN-1926?
WHY, THEY WERE SUPPOSED TO HAVE SHOT HIM AND TOSSED HIS BODY IN THE BAY!
YES, THEY WERE SUPPOSED TO HAVE, BUT THE BODY WAS NEVER FOUND!
FURTHERMORE, ANALYSIS OF A SUBSTANCE FOUND ON THE LEGS OF DUKE'S TROUSERS SHOWS IT TO BE BLUE CLAY. A CLAY THAT LIES ABOUT TWELVE FEET BELOW THE CITY'S SURFACE.
YOU MEAN DUKE HAD BEEN DOWN IN A HOLE-OR-A CAVE?
BEYOND QUESTION, CHIEF!
MEANWHILE, IN THE UNDERGROUND LAIR OF THE MOLE—
HELLO-HELLO, OILY! HOW ABOUT MY FOOD? IS THE COAST CLEAR?
THEY TOOK OUT THE BODY THIS MORNING AND HAVEN'T BEEN BACK SINCE. YOUR FOOD IS READY!
AT THE FILLING STATION ADJOINING THE JUNK YARD, A SWARTHY CHARACTER DESCENDS INTO A GREASING PIT, TRAY IN HAND.
GAS
TWO HINGED CEMENT BLOCKS SWING OUTWARD AND A HAIRY HAND SNATCHES THE TRAY.
REMEMBER, OILY, YOU'RE THE ONLY PARTNER I'VE GOT AND THIS GREASING PIT OUTLET IS MY ONLY EMERGENCY ESCAPE- JUST SEE TO IT YOU NEVER LET ME DOWN!
MOLE, WE'VE BEEN FURNISHING A HIDEOUT HERE FOR CROOKS FOR FIFTEEN YEARS AND I'VE NEVER DOUBLE-CROSSED YOU YET, HAVE I?
GOOD BOY, OILY! BY THE WAY, HERE IS YOUR SHARE OF DUKE'S DOUGH!
WHEN CROOKS COME TO MOLE, AS A LAST RESORT, TO HIDE OUT FROM THE POLICE, MOLE DOESN'T CHARGE THEM A FLAT RATE. MOLE TAKES EVERYTHING THEY'VE GOT!

Super Suds

HERE'S HOW RAYON EXPERTS SAY TO WASH DAINTY RAYONS

1. Test a small patch in plain water for color-fastness. If color runs, it's not washable.
2. Wash rayons separately by hand. Use lukewarm suds made as follows; Dissolve Super Suds completely in warm water, then add cold water to get lukewarm suds.
3. Do not soak rayons. Wash quickly and gently. Do not rub, wring or twist.
4. Rinse thoroughly, gently, in clean, lukewarm water. Roll in towel, but don't leave there.
5. Use a moderate iron.

Hello Boys!

Look at all the fun and action you get with my new

ERECTORS

It's colossal, boys . . . that towering Erector army training parachute jump. You build it yourself. Piece by piece—with your own hands—you fit the long gleaming girders together—attach the rigging for the four parachutes—and install the powerful Erector reversing electric engine . . . and now for thrilling fun. Give the action signal by blowing the Erector whistle . . . throw your engine into gear and your parachutes are hoisted up and up until they strike the release mechanism. Then, like a flash they plummet downward—unfold—and lazily float to the ground.

Now get a load of that mighty Ferris wheel. It whistles—twinkles with light—operates in either direction at slow or high speed.

You can build hundreds of spectacular, realistic mechanical marvels with one Erector set. And how the Erector electric engine makes them buzz with action! See my new All-Electric Erectors at your nearest toy store today. Take Dad along.

SO YOU WON'T GIVE ME ANY INFORMATION ABOUT BOROFF —
MR. MOORE, I KNOW YOU'RE O-KAY, BUT AS WARDEN OF THE FEDERAL PRISON I'VE STRICT ORDERS TO KEEP MY MOUTH SHUT ABOUT BOROFF. OFF THE RECORD, I'D SUGGEST THAT YOU TRY THE F.B.I. BUT DON'T QUOTE ME!
DON'T LET HIM STALL YOU, RED... WE MUST FIND KIT! WE'VE GOT TO, RED!
WHILE, AT THE HIDEOUT WHERE GYP SEMKO AND BOROFF ARE HOLDING KIT, A NOTE HAS BEEN SLIPPED UNDER HER DOOR BY THE MYSTERIOUS TOGO...
DEAR MISS CABOT, I AM ACTING FOR U.S. GOVT. AM IN TOUCH WITH F.B.I. BY MY SHORT WAVE RADIO IN WOODS. GIVE NO SIGN IF I SEEM TO ACT TOUGH ABOUT YOUR FATE. BE SURE TO DESTROY THIS NOTE BY CHEWING AND SWALLOWING IT! T.
UGH! IMAGINE MY HAVING TO CHEW UP A SECRET MESSAGE, LIKE A GAL IN A MOVIE THRILLER! O, WHY DIDN'T I STAY IN QUIET LIL' OL' NEW YORK?!
THE WARDEN HINTED THAT NOT ONLY BOROFF, BUT GYP SEMKO AS WELL, MAY BE AT LIBERTY! THAT SOUNDS BAD.... I HAVE A HUNCH THAT BOROFF, ALIAS ROBOT WAS RECOGNIZED BY KIT — AND THEN KIDNAPED HER! FORTUNATELY ZEB TATE, OUR OLD FRIEND IN THE BUREAU IS IN TOWN. MAYBE HE CAN HELP US. HE KNOWS THE BACKGROUND OF THE CASE....
WELL, KIT CABOT, SINCE I BELIEVE IN SATISFYING A WOMAN'S NATURAL CURIOUSITY I CAN TELL YOU THAT WE HAVE DECIDED HOW TO DISPOSE OF YOU. OUR BRIGHT LITTLE FRIEND TOGO HAS AS USUAL COME THROUGH WITH A PRACTICAL, THOUGH HARDLY KINDLY SUGGESTION!
TSK-TSK! AND JUST AS I WAS BEGINNING REALLY TO ENJOY HIS COOKING!
WHAT IS THIS IDEA THAT TOGO HAS SPRUNG ON BOROFF AND GYP? WILL IT SAVE KIT? AND WHAT DO RED AND ILLA HEAR FROM ZEB TATE, THE GOVERNMENT AGENT?

HAMS TO PLAY '5TH COLUMN' RADIO SLEUTHS

Hunt Transmitter in Test Sunday.

(Diagram on page 2.)

In an unnamed spot in or about Chicago there is going to be some strange goings-on next Sunday morning—stealthy footsteps on the roof, maybe, face peering in the window, mysterious figure lurking behind the tree across the street, somebody shinnying up the drain pipe.

But let the old blunderbuss be! It's all in fun—just an experiment by the radio hams of Illinois Institute of Technology in the interest, more or less, of national defense.

From a secret hiding place which only he knows about, Anton Seda, senior mechanical engineering student and president of the institute's Amateur Radio club, will begin transmitting code signals, just like a fifth columnist, except that the Federal Communications commission knows all about it and has told the boys it's all right, to go ahead.

Students to Hunt Station.

The others of the radio fraternity have to track down Seda's transmitter like FBI men or army intelligence, the only difference being that the amateur sleuths will be using, in most cases, receivers and direction finding equipment of their own design and construction.

This is how the experiment is to be carried out:

At 9 o'clock, on the allotted frequency, 1750 kilocycles, Seda will begin signalling R in code—dot-dash-dot. R will be the identifying signal, which he will send for 15 minutes, giving the call letters of Armour college's short wave station W9WY, at the beginning and end of the 15 minute period. Transmission will be entirely by CW [continuous wave], all of the short wave amateurs operating by telegraphic code.

Sleuths to Meet at Brookfield.

After 15 minutes, better to simulate an illegally operated transmitter, the hidden station will not be heard on prearranged schedule. From 9:15 to 12:30 o'clock, Seda will "talk" from time to time with other stations, still operating on the assigned frequency, of course, and signing the proper call letters. But his brother hams in search of the station will be on their own.

The searching parties, divided into teams according to the number of receivers available, all will be parked by 9 o'clock on the lot at the zoölogical gardens in Brookfield, waiting for the first signal.

Since the problem is one of locating and running down an illegal transmitter, their receivers and direction finding equipment, commercial or homemade, will be of the mobile type, adapted to use in a car. Receivers will be fitted either with uni- or bi-directional loop antenna.

How the Hunt Starts.

During the first 15 minute period of transmission, a team, using a loop antenna, will be able to establish the exact geographical direction of the hidden transmitter. Having determined the direction in degrees of the compass, the map man will strike a line on his chart from the listening point in the degree-direction obtained from the first listening.

At the signing off signal the teams will disperse, each taking a direction perpendicular or at a wide angle to the first line of location drawn on the map, and traveling some five or six miles, depending upon the efficiency of its equipment.

Now the searchers, no longer having a timetable of transmission periods, must wait for the next signal. From the second position, when the signal comes, another degree-direction line will be taken. The point of intersection of the two lines on the map will reveal to the sleuths the approximate location of Seda's hideout. The more patient and painstaking will make three or four readings before setting out for the kill.

Final Chance for Laggards.

To give the laggards a final chance, the station again will transmit continuously from 12:30 to 1:30 o'clock, that is it will if some of the intelligence hams haven't by that time rooted out the ham fifth columnist and put his transmitter out of business.

Amateur short wave operators have an intercollegiate organization, Rho Epsilon fraternity. The Armour hams are Epsilon chapter. Members assisting President Seda with today's experiment are Jorma Leskinen, Curtis Hepperle, Ernest Schrot, and Rudolph Oras, all studying electrical engineering.

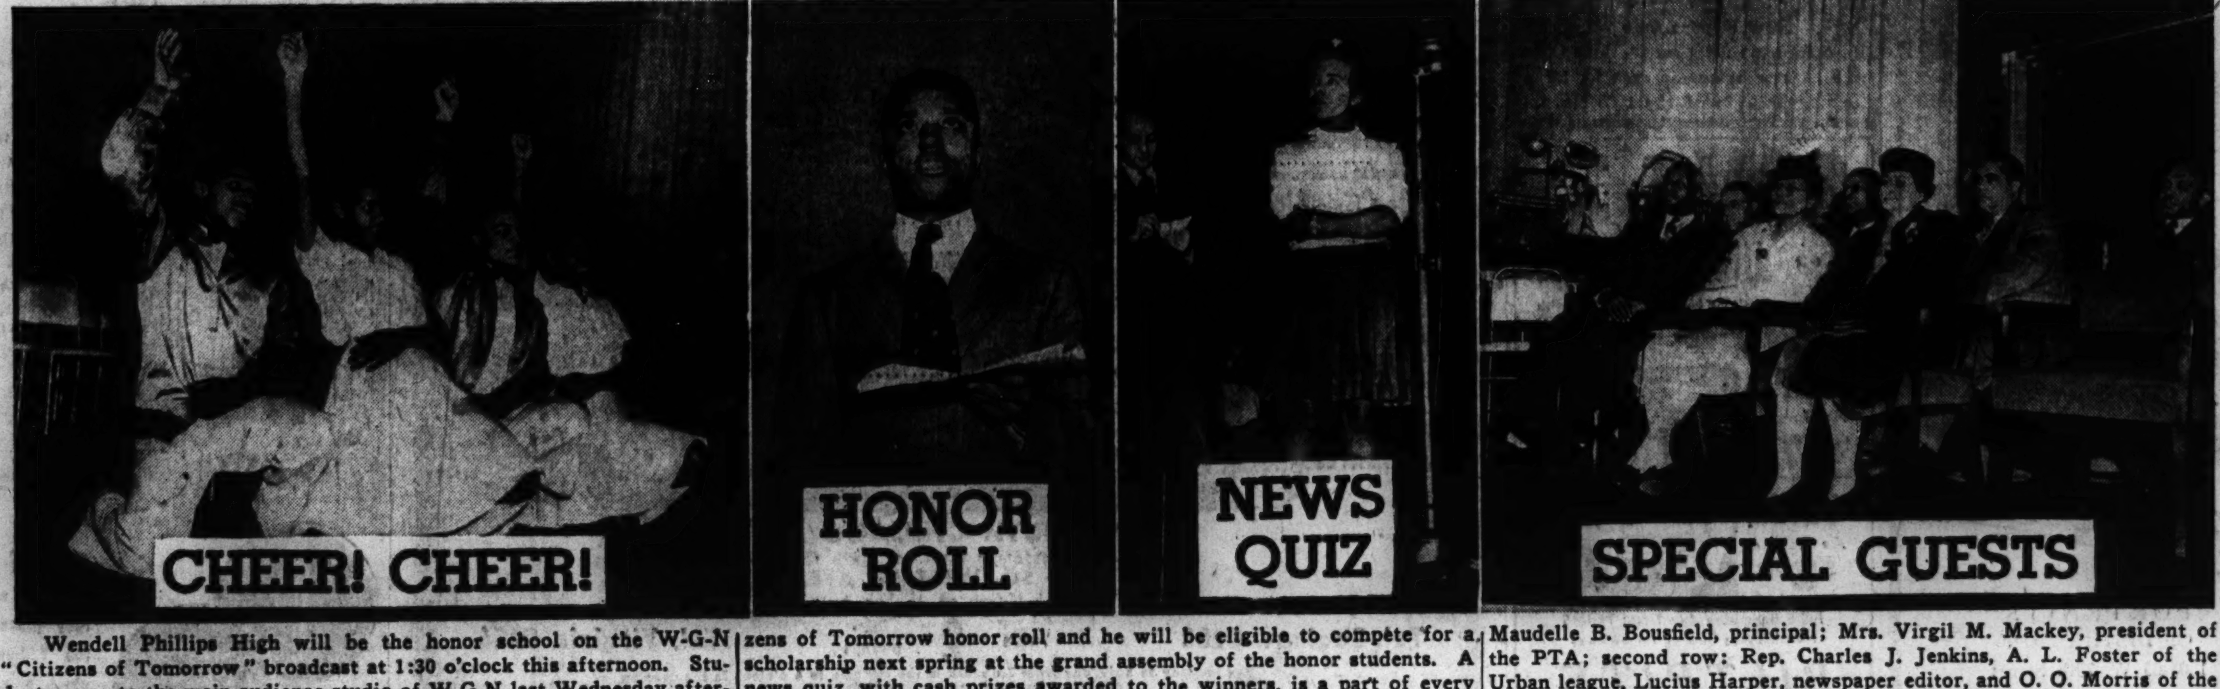
Wendell Phillips High School Will Present 'Citizens of Tomorrow' Program This Afternoon



Wendell Phillips High will be the honor school on the W-G-N "Citizens of Tomorrow" broadcast at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. Students came to the main audience studio of W-G-N last Wednesday afternoon and made the recording which will be heard today. The cheers for Wendell Phillips which you will hear were lead by this enthusiastic quartet—left to right—William Garner, Virginia Stinson, Norvel Davenport, and Yvonne Buckner. The name of Calvin Hall was added to the Citizens of Tomorrow honor roll and he will be eligible to compete for a scholarship next spring at the grand assembly of the honor students. A news quiz, with cash prizes awarded to the winners, is a part of every show. Lena Buckner is among those you will hear competing today. Civic and educational leaders were among the special guests at the making of the record. Some of them will be heard on the program. In the front row, left to right, J. Wesley Jones, a leader in musical circles; Mrs. Maudelle B. Bousfield, principal; Mrs. Virgil M. Mackey, president of the PTA; second row: Rep. Charles J. Jenkins, A. L. Mulligan, chairman of the music department. Now that you have looked at the scenes, listen to the sounds at 1:30 o'clock today. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Bible School Marks 1,612th Sunday Today

The fellowship Bible class of the Woodlawn Methodist church will meet at 9:45 o'clock this morning for its 1,612th consecutive Sunday session. Just as on the first Sunday in December, 1910, Elmer T. Howson will lead the class in a discussion of a Biblical text, followed by community singing.

There were only six high school students at the first meeting, Mr. Howson recalls, and the class had no responsibilities. Now a third of the 300 men enrolled usually attend every Sunday and the group has formed 21 committees devoted to neighborhood welfare and mission work. Members, whose occupations range from laboring to big business, are between 25 and 60 years old. Many of them attended classes 31 years ago.

Hasn't Missed Since 1927.

Three of the most faithful of the students are F. E. Mulkey, 6116½ Kimbark avenue; E. R. Canning, 6102 Kenwood avenue, and Noel Lunn, 6637 University avenue. Mr. Mulkey didn't miss a Sunday last year, Mr. Canning hasn't missed since March, 1938, and Mr. Lunn hasn't failed to appear since March, 1927, when he joined.

Mr. Lunn is the real veteran of the entire class, since he hasn't missed going to a Sunday school meeting in 31 years. A product of the Tennessee hills, where church facilities were limited, he went to Sunday school in Nashville for the first time in October, 1910, and has maintained a perfect attendance record ever since. Each of his three children, who are between 9 and 12 years old, hasn't missed a session since joining a Sunday school class at the age of 3.

"I always liked it so much, I just never wanted to quit, that's all," says Mr. Lunn.

Guide, Not Teacher, He Says.

Like his fellow students, Mr. Lunn follows the International Sunday school topic each week. Mr. Howson insists he doesn't teach, but merely guides the discussion, which is open to any one present. The rule is that any one may give his opinion as long as he is sincere. Finally, Mr. Howson sums up the discussion and points out the constructive theme, so that "every one will have something to take away with him."

Always a popular part of the session is the 15 minutes of community singing led by C. H. Mottier, 6513 Woodlawn avenue. Class members exercise their lungs with old favorites like "The Old Rugged Cross," "Brighten the Corner Where You Are," and "Some Day I'll Understand."

The class emphasizes friendliness, according to Mr. Howson, whose business permits him to lead only about 40 classes a year. The group annually schedules a year round program of dinners, a bowling league tournament and informal parties, such as golf games. Each member also cherishes a bronze class coin about the size of a half dollar.

Yearly Budget $2,000.

The class operates on a budget of $2,000 a year, which takes care of two full-time workers, boys club work, and neighborhood charities.

J. N. Elliot, 7317 Chappel avenue, is president of the class. Vice presidents are G. R. Maddin, 7554 Blackstone avenue; K. V. Gambell, 7924 Jeffery avenue, and C. E. Belden, 6407 University avenue. The secretary for the last 11 years has been C. Cayce Thompson, 6543 Kimbark avenue. Mr. Howson, a trade publications executive, has always been leader of the class.

Calumet Symphony to Play First Concert Next Sunday

The Calumet Symphony orchestra, a group of 75 musicians sponsored by the Indiana university extension division, will give its first concert next Sunday afternoon in the Roosevelt High school auditorium, East Chicago. The players are from different cities in the Calumet area. On the program will be compositions by Bizet, Beethoven, Rossini, and Eric Coates.

PLANNERS URGE REBUILDING OF RUNDOWN AREA

Would Utilize Only Private Capital.

Detailed suggestions for the reclamation of rundown areas on the south, west, and north sides were made public last week by the Chicago plan commission thru its executive director, T. T. McCrosky.

The commission's plan was offered as an illustration of what can be done under the new neighborhood redevelopment corporation law. This law makes it possible for private interests under municipal guidance to acquire sites in rundown areas and improve them with residential, service, and recreational facilities in line with modern concepts of adequate housing.

Passage of the law was urged by a committee of the Chicago building congress which was headed by J. Soule Warterfield, vice president of the congress and a leader in the fight to correct decay of Chicago property values.

Plan Is Guide, Not Blueprint.

McCrosky emphasized that, while the suggested plan was based on careful studies, it was advanced not as a working draft, but merely as a guide toward what might be accomplished with the redevelopment machinery now at hand.

The three areas included in the study were picked, McCrosky said, because they conform with the law's definition of deteriorated localities, they illustrate a variety of types of reclamation possible, and they are close to places of work.

The south territory included in the plan is bounded, roughly, on the north by 26th street, on the east by the railroads that skirt the lake shore, on the south by 31st street and on the west by the Rock Island railroad.

It is larger than one redevelopment corporation could administer under the law, which specifies that a development area in a city of Chicago's size can be no smaller than two city blocks nor larger than 80 acres. It was made large purposely to show the possibilities and advantages of correlating separate adjacent projects, McCrosky declared.

Much Land Already Cleared.

"This near south side Negro area," he said, "presents the outstanding opportunity for developing a community of real homes of modest type for families now living in very unsatisfactory conditions despite their economic ability to pay for adequate housing.

"The cost of development will be materially lower than in other close-in areas, as much of the land has already been cleared of buildings."

Under the suggested plan virtually all private buildings in the area would be torn down. Some of the present streets would be partially closed, enough being left only to care for necessary interior traffic.

New buildings, conforming strictly to the new Chicago code soon to be offered for passage, would be spaced far enough apart to admit plenty of light and fresh air and permit landscaping. Parks would cover at least 10 per cent of the area, as the redevelopment law provides.

Include Shopping Center.

In the suggested plan, shopping centers are indicated for 31st street at State street, Indiana avenue and Cottage Grove avenue, and for 26th street at State street, Indiana avenue and South Park way. Most of these are transfer points. Ample provision would be made for the parking of automobiles in these centers.

No recommendations are made for the area lying between 26th and 29th streets and running from the alley east of State to the alley east of Michigan, because the buildings here, mostly commercial in type, are too substantial to be demolished.

The existing Drake school would be increased in size, and a new school and playground would be established at the southwest corner of 30th and State streets. Other play areas would be plentifully sprinkled thruout the region, so that no home would be more than a block or so from such a spot.

All churches, hospitals and other religious or semipublic buildings would remain, as would large residential structures in substantial condition.

For Higher Income Brackets.

A few of the new residential structures to be erected would be apartments for higher income Negro families, most of them along the lake front and on either side of South Park way and Cottage Grove avenue.

The rest would be, for the most part, row houses, which are considered suitable for the south side because they lend themselves to tenant maintenance and permit large private yards.

Statistical Comparison.

Here is a comparison of the statistics for the south, west, and north development areas as they are today:

	North.	West.	South.

NEGROES RALLY TODAY TO FIGHT VICE AND CRIME

Ministers Lead Fight on Delinquency.

A campaign to purge the south central district of vice and crime will be launched at a massmeeting of Negro citizens at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon in the Metropolitan Community church, 4100 South Park way. The drive, which will be led by outstanding colored churchmen, is aimed particularly at curbing juvenile delinquency.

The rally is sponsored by the Community Ministers and Christian Workers' alliance, of which the Rev. Joseph M. Evans is chairman. It has the indorsement of the Chicago Interdenominational Council of Negro Churches presided over by Bishop James A. Bray of the Colored Methodist church.

Clergy Back Drive.

A committee of churchmen is backing the meeting because they agree that "the church and its militant membership should head a crusade for common decency in the community, respect for the rights of others, and some consideration of law and order, so essential to our better living conditions."

Scheduled to speak at the meeting are the Rev. R. H. Collins Lee, pastor of the Walters AME Zion church and chairman of the Interdenominational council's commission on law and order; the Rev. Archibald J. Carey Jr., who has been campaigning against vice in the Woodlawn community; the Rev. J. M. Foster, president of one of the Baptist alliances; the Rev. Ira Hendon, pastor of the Morning Star Baptist church; the Rev. J. H. Jackson, recently appointed pastor of Olivet Baptist church, and A. L. Foster and Frayser Lane of the Chicago Urban league.

Ask Investigation of "Policy."

Recently members of the alliance and of the Chicago Ministerial Fellowship and Service league passed resolutions calling upon State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney to include "policy" in the general investigation of gambling which is being conducted by the grand jury.

Negro leaders charge that investigations of various types on vice and crime never reach the Negro communities.

CLUB ANNOUNCES TRAFFIC MARKERS AT BLUE ISLAND

The safety and traffic department of the Chicago Motor club has announced that 17 new traffic signs have been erected in Blue Island.

New stop signs have been placed at intersections along Vermont street at Ann street, Maple avenue, and Greenwood avenue. Others were put up at James street and Greenwood avenue. School crossing warnings were placed at Maple avenue north of New street, at New street east and west of Maple avenue; on Ann street north and south of Grove street; on James street east of Ann street, and on Grove street east of Ann street.

New signs were installed on two corners at Prairie, Oak, Walnut, and Union streets where they intersect Greenwood avenue.

Locating a Transmitter

In locating a transmitter you first draw a line across your map indicating the compass direction from which the signal was received. Then move several miles at a great angle. Now draw a line indicating the compass direction from the new point. The transmitter will be at the intersection of the two lines.

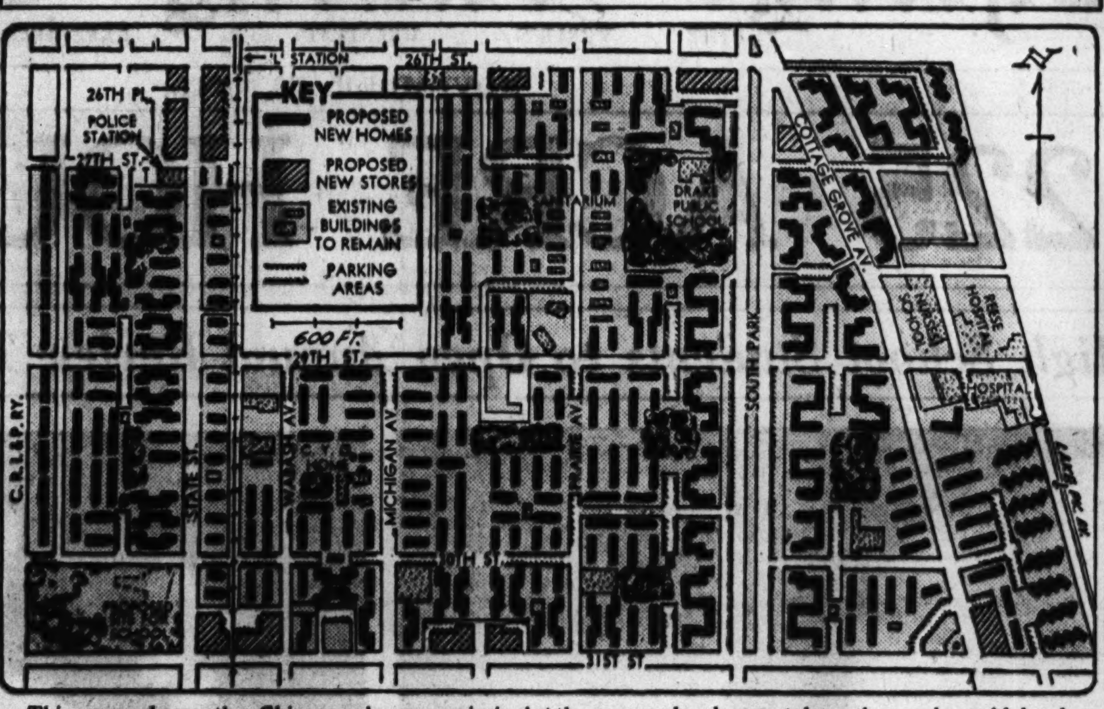
How Planning Would Benefit South Side



This map shows the Chicago plan commission's suggestions for the reclamation of a 225 acre tract on the near south side in which realty values have been declining for several years. All but a few existing buildings would be torn down, and the rebuilders would start virtually from scratch. By the terms of the new redevelopment law, the work could be done by private interests under municipal guidance. This means the property would bear its full share of the tax load, which is not the case with government housing projects.

(Story on page 1.)

OUTLINES GUIDE FOR REBUILDING IN RUNDOWN AREA

dential structures remaining in the south side development area, 23.5 per cent were built before 1885 and 88.4 per cent before 1895.

Of the 3,232 dwelling units [which means that an average of more than four families live in each residential building], 2,525 or 78.1 per cent are in substandard residential structures, and 1,678 are either unfit for use or are in need of major repairs.

The plan commission estimates that the cost of each residential dwelling unit in the south area will be about $4,100. At a rental charge of $17.25 per room per month, and an average of 3.65 rooms per dwelling unit, the average rent cost for each unit would be $63 a month. The assessed valuation would be approximately 25 per cent of the building cost.

NEW RANGE AIDS MARKSMEN OF ARMOUR CLUB

60 Students Train to Improve Aim.

Engineers may claim exemption from the draft but at least 60 students at the Armour College of Engineering of the Illinois Institute of Technology are taking no chances of being caught unprepared. They are members of the Rifle club and rifle team, and practice whenever they get a chance.

The membership of the club has grown fast since the range in the physics building was renovated. New paint helps reduce the glare, a new heating arrangement keeps the sharpshooters warm, and shooting jackets and telescopic sights for examining targets without going to them make for efficiency. The range is open nine hours a day.

Sport in 20th Year.

This is the 20th year for the sport, which threatens now to become a major activity. The 10 man rifle team has postal matches scheduled with a dozen engineering schools and universities. The stiffest competition is met at the annual midwest championships sponsored by the University of Chicago in the spring.

In the midwest meet the school is represented usually by three four man teams. In the last six years they've seldom been outranked.

Leaders of Club.

Loretto Auxiliary Mothers to See Fashion Review

Junior mothers of Loretto Woodlawn auxiliary will give a luncheon and fashion show at 11 o'clock tomorrow in the Better Homemaking institute, 14 East Jackson boulevard. Mrs. Chester Musson, 6723 Constance avenue, is chairman, and Mrs. Frank Nessinger, co-chairman. They are assisted by Mrs. John R. O'Sullivan, Mrs. Martin Stadler, and Mrs. Robert Bedford.

SCHOOLS TO LIST 5,000 GIRLS WHO LIKE TO DANCE

They'll Be Partners for Men in Training.

The board of education is going to help find dancing partners for United States soldiers and sailors in training in various Chicago area encampments. Since early summer Miss Ernestine Badt, director of social centers and supervisor of a soldiers and sailors committee, has been working on the plan.

By Jan. 1 Miss Badt expects to have files in all sections of the city listing the names of some 5,000 girls who will dance with soldiers and sailors and whose parents have given consent. Within three days after requests are received from churches, YMCA's and fraternal groups who wish to entertain the men, hundreds of girls will be provided thru Miss Badt's committee.

Parents Must Consent.

Regulations have been set up by Miss Badt in order to insure the new program success. "We have been three years working on social mixers thru high school centers," says Miss Badt, "and nothing has gone wrong yet."

No girl can register as a dancing partner for soldiers and sailors unless she has a certificate of permission signed by her mother, father and a witness. The parents must also consent to provide for escorting the girls to and from the parties. "Service men will not be permitted to escort the girls home," says Miss Badt, "and no girl may attend the parties unless her name is on file with the committee."

Girls must be at least seniors in high school and must be no younger than 18 years. "The boys don't want them any younger," says Miss Badt, "and army and navy officials also prefer the older girls."

Approved by Service.

The approval of the plan has been received from a score of army and navy officials. The committee was supplied with the list of all army morale officers early in the summer by Col. N. B. Wood.

The program for registering dancing partners was launched by Miss Badt after numerous requests for girls to dance with the young navy cadets at the Great Lake Training school when they were treated to parties. "These boys are not all Chicagoans," explains Miss Badt, "and some have no opportunity even to talk to a girl. They are naturally eager for dancing partners. Several times I was expected to produce 200 girls at a few minutes notice."

The board of education will only do the inviting of the dancing partners from its file of names. The parties will be arranged by organizations interested in the welfare and morale of the men in training, and organizations will plan a mixer program with grand marches, counter marches and "robber" dances.

Chaperons Are Listed.

Chaperons in charge of the various social centers' lists of dancing partners, and their schools are Edith S. Garriott, Amundsen; Rose Ramsey, Austin; Ethel M. Bourke, Bowen; Grace P. Diaz, Crane; Mary J. Morgan, Farragut; Elizabeth I. Balhouse, Fenger; Anita D. Maloy, Hyde Park; Elizabeth Lynskey, Kelly.

Ingeborg Storvick, Kelvyn Park; Margaret Collins and Mary A. Srill, Lane Technical; Janet Freckleton, Lindblom; Minnie Lomax, Medill; Elizabeth Turner, Phillips; Agnes M. Polka, Steinmetz; Henrietta K. Hintz, Taft; Katherine Birmingham, Tilden; Teresa Reid, Waller, and Viola I. Schnake, Wells.

Air Corps Officer and Bride

Lieut. John Paul Wolfe and his bride, the former Miss Elizabeth Paschen, daughter of Mrs. Frank Paschen, 5622 Sheridan road, were married early this month. Lieut. Wolfe, who is in the army air corps, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wolfe of East Chicago. The couple are now residing in Houston, Tex., where Lieut. Wolfe is stationed. [Peter Fish Photo.]

Aspires to Crown

Miss Betty Lou Hayes, 6345 University avenue, is a candidate for queen of the De Paul university homecoming festivities next Friday and Saturday. The programs will be climaxed by the homecoming ball Saturday evening at the Lake Shore club. [Doose Photo.]

BOWEN TO GIVE ANNUAL CONCERT THURSDAY NIGHT

Bowen High school's band and orchestra will present its annual concert at 8 o'clock Thursday evening in the auditorium at 2710 East 81st street. The first numbers on the program will be "Romania Fantasy" [Veska] and "Slovanic Rhapsody" [Friedeman] played by the orchestra under the direction of Miss Mildred Larsen.

The band will play selections from Sousa; a polyphonic number composed by Capt. Charles O'Neill, and the popular march, "His Honor" by Henry Fillmore.

To raise funds for its work, the band has organized parties, button campaigns and Christmas card sales.

St. Felicitas Church Will Hold Bazar This Week

St. Felicitas church, 83d street and Blackstone avenue, will have its annual bazar in the newly decorated school auditorium Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. The Rev. James Walsh is general chairman.

SOUTH SHORE 'Y' TO LAUNCH 1942 FINANCE DRIVE

Set Campaign Goal at $8,500.

A banquet will launch the South Shore YMCA's 11th annual finance campaign at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow evening in the St. John's Methodist church, 7350 Jeffery avenue. The campaign, which closes Monday, Dec. 15, was planned to raise the $8,500 necessary for the 1942 budget. W. John Allen, 7128 Cornell avenue, is general chairman of the drive.

Since the south shore department was established in 1930, more than 10,000 boys and girls have registered for activities, according to James Bridge, chairman. The work has been on a nonfee paying basis and at present is conducted from the headquarters at 2320 East 75th street.

Youth Work Important.

Considered most important is the work done for high school youth thru the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs which are dedicated to encouraging high standards of Christian character thruout the home, school, and community.

Today there are 24 such clubs with an enrollment of 360 affiliated with the "Y."

During this year a total of more than 600 boys and girls joined the "Y's" 45 clubs. In addition, another 500 participated in the athletic and recreational program conducted thru the schools and community.

Pledge $3,000.

A special names division, consisting of eight men, have promised to garner $3,000 to help in the campaign. They are Charles E. Bradley, 7443 Luella avenue; James Bridge, 8218 Clyde avenue; C. W. Howe, 2315 East 69th street; Walter B. Kessens, 7731 Yates avenue; J. N. Elliott, 7317 Chappel avenue; Leo Fredericks, principal of the Bradwell school; H. L. Stuntz, 1320 East 72d place, and A. C. Clemenson, 7801 Exchange avenue. Mr. Bradley is chairman of the division. Altogether, approximately 100 workers will participate in the drive.

Two dinners will be served during the day for visitors, at noon and in the evening. There also will be entertainment. Mrs. Michael M. Hammer is general chairman in charge of the program.

Rabbi Morton M. Eerman will discuss "Windswept" by Mary Ellen Chase as the next of his book lectures Tuesday evening in the Community house. Members and friends of the congregations are invited. The lecture will start at 8:15 o'clock.

The south side district of Hadassah will hold an open board meeting and Palestine supplies shower at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the Windermere West hotel. Mrs. Louis Reinwald will be special guest. The Metropolitan Hadassah group will meet Thursday at the Hadassah clubrooms, 8 South Dearborn street.

A dinner-dance will be held at the Emil G. Hirsch center this evening under the auspices of Johanna lodge No. 9, United Order of True Sisters.

The regular meeting of the sisterhood of the South Side Hebrew congregation will take place tomorrow afternoon in the temple at 74th street and Chappel avenue. A sisterhood skit will be presented by members and Miss Esther Kaplin will be vocal soloist.

The David M. Grodsky Junior Aid will hold its monthly Sunday afternoon dance at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Chicago Beach hotel. The organization maintains a summer camp for underprivileged children. Seymour Holtzman is president and Dr. Eugene Kops is chairman of the dance receptions.

TWO WAY POLICE RADIO NOW LINKS 55 DEPARTMENTS

Speeds Manhunts, Rushes Aid to Accidents.

Most of the police departments in the Chicago area are included in a big two-way radio network that has been found invaluable in the catching of criminals.

No less than 55 state, county, city and suburban departments belong to the network, and more are coming in as local governments find the money to purchase the equipment. Hundreds of squad cars now carry the two-way radio telephones thru which their crews can receive orders or communicate vital information direct to headquarters.

There is no clearing house for this network that could be regarded as a central office, but police officials point out that this is not necessary. Should a swiftly moving manhunt develop, the squads in the field would probably be directed from the police transmitter nearest the scene, and the headquarters might shift as the chase progresses.

Help Smaller Departments.

Some of the larger police departments serve their smaller neighbors in radio facilities. The three Cook county stations, for example, have made their radio transmitters available to nearby suburbs too small to afford their own broadcasting stations.

Altho most of the police radio systems are on different wave lengths, arrangements have been made so that the systems can be interlocked for the quick transmission of orders and information.

To illustrate, county police officials told of a recent instance in which, at the request of an out-of-towner that they intercept a man vacation-bound in northern Wisconsin, their message was relayed to Appleton, Wis., entirely thru police radios, in something less than three minutes.

Thru use of the interlocking network, the Cook and Lake county authorities in the last few months have on more than one occasion intercepted fugitives from the Milwaukee police.

Speed Up Routine Work.

Police emphasize, however, that two-way radio is useful not only for unusual occasions such as a manhunt, but also for speeding the routine work of any law enforcing department.

In the case of automobile accidents, for instance, time is saved thru the ability of headquarters to communicate directly with accident squads in the field. Thru two-way radio, the nearest squad can be sent to an accident scene, while other squads continue their regular work.

The county highway police estimate they average four minutes in reaching an accident scene after they receive the first call.

Give Fill-in Service.

Radio also helps the county highway department give fill-in protection for suburbs with one or two man police forces. After the local stations are closed, appeals to police are relayed directly to the county highway station, whence the nearest squad is sent to investigate.

In Cook county there are 14 suburbs without regular police protection. There are 21 others with only one of two policemen each.

Police radio in the Chicago area was pioneered by THE TRIBUNE and radio station W-G-N. Early in 1929 THE TRIBUNE installed radio receivers in 40 squad cars, and station W-G-N interrupted its regular programs to broadcast police messages. On the strength of this successful experiment the city voted the same year to install its own transmitter and equip its police automobiles with receivers.

'ANTI-SABOTAGE' IS FORUM TOPIC TUESDAY EVENING

A discussion of "Anti-Sabotage" by A. H. Johnson, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will be given at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Defense building, 176 West Washington boulevard. The talk is sponsored by the Chicago Commission on National Defense.

This will be the seventh and final forum in a series on defense production problems which the commission is presenting in coöperation with the Illinois Institute of Technology under the United States Office of Education.

Designed to aid the small manufacturer with problems of obtaining and fulfilling defense contracts, the forums are conducted free. A new series will be announced beginning Jan. 1, 1942.

SALE OF CRAFT GOODS WILL AID DISABLED VETS

Under auspices of the Veterans' Craft exchange, which works in affiliation with the American Legion Auxiliary of Illinois, handicraft products of disabled soldiers and sailors will be on sale the first four days of this week in the Club Woman's bureau on the ninth floor of Mandel Brothers.

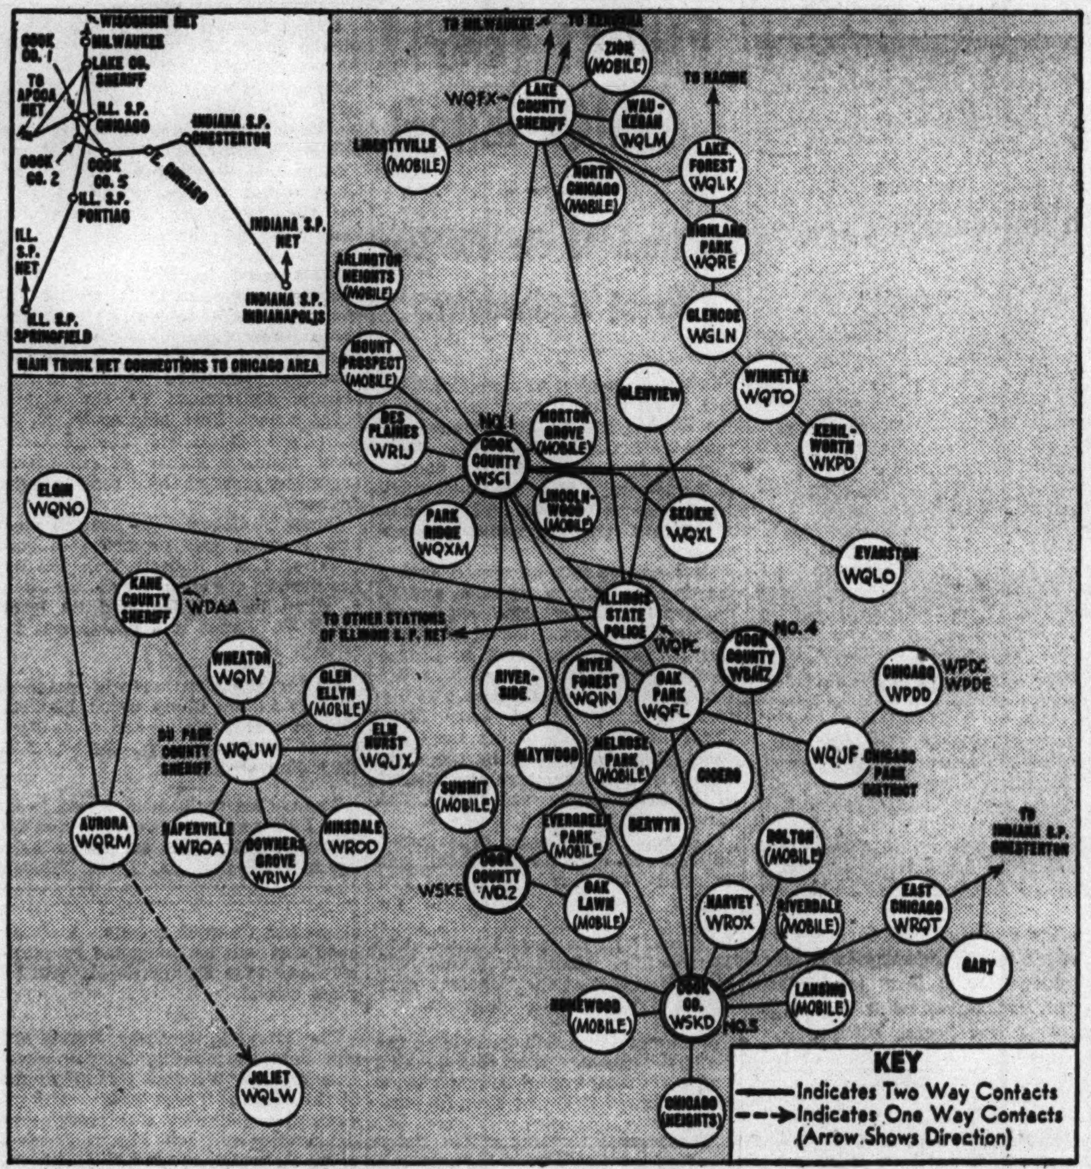
Materials for the articles, including rugs, leather work, baskets, kitchen articles, woodcraft, aprons, and woven goods, have been sold to the men by the government at cost price. Veterans will receive the entire proceeds of the sale.

The activity is under the direct auspices of a committee of which Mrs. Lucille Dowd of Homewood is chairman.

Career Institute Seniors to Present Fashion Show

The senior classes of Career institute, 720 North Michigan avenue, will present a fashion show and bridge party Saturday afternoon in the school's auditorium. Proceeds will go to the scholarship fund.

A Web to Enmesh Wrongdoers



This diagram shows how short wave police radio networks of Chicagoland are linked with the four stations maintained by the Cook county highway police. The call letters indicate the suburb in question has its own wave length and transmitter and receiving system. The suburbs designated "mobile" have squad cars tuned to the wave length of the county highway station with which the black line links them. The smaller diagram shows how regular telephone trunk lines extend the interlocking network over an even larger area.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 1.

Remove stone bird baths to a shed to prevent cracking during cold weather. All statuary should be removed indoors. Attach a humidifier to radiators to give some humidity in the room where plants are standing. Most rooms are excessively dry and the plants suffer accordingly.

Syringe plants by placing in the tub and forcing water from the hose into all parts of stems and leaves to remove dust and insects. Mealy bugs and red spiders, two insidious pests that are often permitted to accumulate on plants, may be kept under control if syringing is consistently practiced.

Small cacti and other succulents planted in drainageless containers should be watered carefully altho the soil is usually too high in them to hold water. Keep cacti in a south window for best results.

Tuesday, Dec. 2.

Most flowering house plants are grown in comparatively small pots and as a result they become rootbound and soon exhaust the food elements. Applications of liquid food at intervals of about three weeks will keep the plants in good health. A lack of food is indicated by weak stems, small leaves, few flowers or scattered fruits.

Plants grown for their ornamental foliage require considerable amounts of nitrogenous food, altho a complete plant flood is preferable unless one has some knowledge of the particular soil used. Give flowering plants plenty of water or they wilt quickly.

If purchased from the florist it must be remembered that the plants have developed in the greenhouse where the atmospheric conditions are properly maintained. Changing to room conditions effects the plants, but watering can be taken care of in an intelligent manner. Examine the soil each morning and keep it moist.

Wednesday, Dec. 3.

Poinsettias dry out quickly, and the best way to water them is to place the pots in a basin of water, allowing it to stand until the soil is wet thru. Avoid sudden changes of temperature or the leaves will turn yellow and fall.

Some plants do best in a cool temperature, such as the primroses and cyclamen, but they require several sunny hours each day. Examine pot bulbs, such as tulips, narcissi, and hyacinth, and if thoroly rooted bring into heat where they will flower quickly.

Amaryllis bulbs can be planted now. If the bulbs are in pots remove some of the top soil and replace with fresh, rich soil. Water well and not again for some time, for the flower stalk appears before the leaves and little water is needed. These bulbs will flower in hyacinth glasses without soil, but at best the method is utilized as a novelty.

Thursday, Dec. 4.

Protect hardy chrysanthemums during winter. Too much covering is more often responsible for injury than anything else. Often too much is applied during a mild winter which smothers the plants but no one can, with certainty, anticipate winter conditions. Do not apply the covering material too soon—wait until the ground freezes, first cutting back the tops to within 7 or 8 inches of the ground; the stubs serve to hold the material in place.

First apply a thin covering, gradually applying more and more until it may be several inches deep. Material to use may consist of evergreen branches, coarse hay, or other litter that does not pack down. Leaves are excellent when used properly; cornstalks scattered around the plants and then a covering of leaves, held up by the stalks, do very well. Do not uncover too soon in spring.

Friday, Dec. 5.

Start a calla lily indoors. They make fine plants and are easily grown. When well started, these plants require feeding at frequent intervals. Cover the bulbs in outdoor beds after the ground is frozen. This also applies to the perennial borders.

Some perennials, such as the foxglove, Canterbury bell, pinks, Shasta daisies, coreopsis, and irises need only a bit of cover, or just enough to keep the frost in the ground and prevent heaving during spring thaws and subsequent injury.

Growing in their natural habitat, most plants have only leaves to cover them, but these fall gradually, lightly, and do not smother. Leaves can be obtained from oak forests and they do not pack, become soft and decay like those from softwoods.

Saturday, Dec. 6.

Naturalize some of the minor bulbous plants before the season is too advanced. These include the intensely blue muscari or grape hyacinth and the unusual feathered hyacinth; glory-of-the-snow or Chionodoxa with its gayly blue-white streaked flowers; white, Siberian Squills; the Guinea henflower or Fritillaria Meleagris.

Well drained pockets of soil in the rock garden are excellent for some of the small bulbs and tulip species, such as T. chrysantha, Clusiana, Eichleri, Kaufmanniana, and others. Protect during winter.

Sow hardy annuals now if the ground is in suitable condition, for they will start early in spring and flower much sooner than those sown in spring. They include poppies, California poppies, alyssum, cosmos, portulaca, zinnia, snapdragon, gaillardia, kochia, calliopsis, balsam, four-o'clock, Japanese hop, and others. Sow thinly by mixing the finer seed with sand.

THIS SIX ROOM CITY HOUSE HAS 5 FLOOR LEVELS

Home Is Designed in the English Tradition.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[This is the first of two articles on an interesting home in Chicago.]

Here we find recaptured some of the valiant spirit of traditional English architecture, a spirit deep in the roots of our own colonial traditions and the inspiration of many of our present day homes.

It is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Anderson, 2222 West 113th place, Chicago. There are six rooms and a very interesting five level floor plan; also a masculine minded nursery bedroom for Kenneth Anderson, aged 4, who already is a lively and companionable member of the household.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's corner lot is 50 feet by 156 feet. They chose the modified English type of architecture because they liked the style, felt it suited the site and could be excellently adapted to their individual needs.

Home of Enduring Quality.

There is a definitely enduring quality in the beauty of this English minded home with its exterior walls of dark red brick, its steep, slate colored roofs, its massive chimney, and nicely landscaped lawn.

Mrs. Anderson doesn't believe in the old adage that one must build a house and live in it a year before one knows what one really wants. She said:

"We had studied a great many house plans and given a great deal of thought to what we needed. That's the important thing, after all, I think. If you know your needs and preferences before you decide to build you've gone a long way toward a house that satisfies you after it is finished.

"We had always had a preference for the English type house and liked the floor plans with their five levels that Mr. Boehme submitted to us. They seemed to meet our own needs precisely. We find it very convenient to have our master bedroom on the upper level, above and to the right of Kenneth's room, half a floor level below. There is more privacy for us and less likelihood of waking him if we come home late at night. Later on he can have his own friends in his own room—with less disturbance to the rest of the house."

Economically Planned.

This separation of the boy's room from the master bedroom and also from the living quarters is an idea which should work for general family satisfaction as the years move on.

Inside one finds a thoroly straightforward design, planned for convenience and economy. There is a square front entrance, with coat closet at the left, a reception hall beyond, and then access from this to the rear is thru a second hallway.

There is an open arrangement of living room, dining room and hall, with windows ample for daylight and ventilation and placed to give ample space for furnishings.

The five levels create interest in the plan. Below grade the first and second levels are given over to heater room, laundry, and recreation quarters. On the third or ground level there are the reception hall, in rust and ivory tones; the L-shaped living room and dining room with a great picture bay on the east wall, and the kitchen with its built-in breakfast wall.

4th Floor Guest Room.

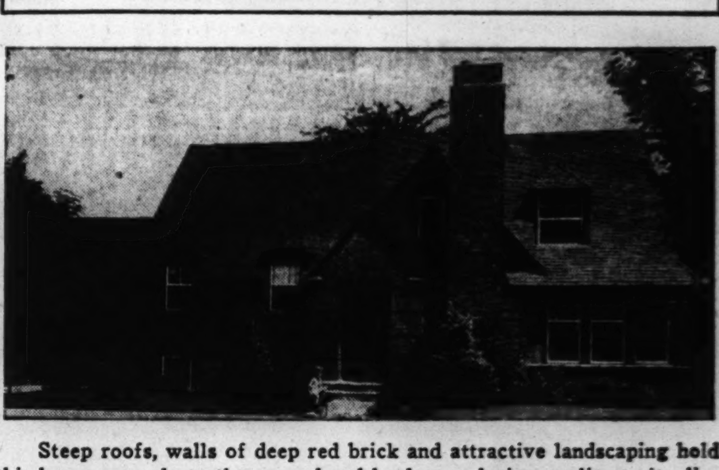
On the fourth floor level is Kenneth's room and also a guest room. The guest room has two large closets, one of them a cedar closet.

"I wanted plenty of closet space and storage space," Mrs. Anderson said. "And I have it. I have eight closets and two linen closets and storage spaces on the west wall and in the basement."

There is a large bathroom on this level with a shower stall enclosure. Then on the fifth floor level there is a light, airy, spacious master bedroom with windows on three sides. In the upper hall of this level there is a closet large enough to be a bedroom, with a generous outside window. Here, too, is a bath. Below is space for a future bedroom.

A very livable floor plan, this.

New Home on Five Levels



Steep roofs, walls of deep red brick and attractive landscaping hold this home securely to the ground and lend an enduring quality to its dignity and beauty. The floor plan is of real interest—five levels. The owners are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Anderson, 2222 West 113th place,

HAS JOB TRAPPING WILD DUCKS AND LETTING THEM GO

Forest Preserves Aid in Banding Studies.

Catching wild ducks and letting them go is one function of a busy division of the Cook county forest preserve district. The division is headed by Lynn H. Hutchens, wild life technician.

Like most generalities, that is an over simplification. The job has to do with the study of wild life to help guide efforts at conservation.

The important part of Hutchens' work occurs between the catching and releasing, when he clamps a numbered aluminum band loosely about the fowl's leg and tosses the bird into the air to resume its own way of life.

Finders Make Report.

Later some bird bander at another station, or the hunter who bags the fowl will communicate his find to the United States fish and wild life service in Washington, D. C., giving the number and the place where the bird was taken.

The federal service will have a record of the bird, for each of the 2,000 banding stations thruout the nation reports its banding operations. After recording the new information, the service will report it to the station that banded the bird.

By such comparison of notes, technicians can estimate waterfowl population, the proportion of males to females, the approximate life span, the places of origin, the time and route of migrations, and many another fact that helps to direct conservation efforts and fix game laws.

Chicago in Waterfowl Path.

Chicagoland is in the path of the greatest of the nation's four major flyways for waterfowl. Hutchens soon will become a naval aviation cadet, but he has trained his assistant, John Jedlicka, to carry on.

McGinnes slough, a 265 acre marsh lake on a 480 acre forest preserve tract at Orland Park, southwest of Chicago, is the bird banding locale and is an almost ideal waterfowl preserve.

Four bird traps are set up there. Each day during the southward flight, which begins in August and continues sometimes into January, Hutchens and Jedlicka don hip boots, wade out to the traps, catch, band, and release the captives that have accumulated since the last visit, and make a record of their work.

Last year they banded 895 ducks of various varieties. Up to last week, this year's catch consisted of nearly 1,500, nine of which were wearing last year's bands.

Report on Last Year's Birds.

Of last year's 895 birds caught, 69 have been reported on. Of the 69 reports, 44 were from Illinois[mostly south], six were from Missouri, four each from Indiana, Florida, and Louisiana, and one each from Wisconsin, Iowa, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ontario, and Puerto Rico.

The biggest surprise was the one from Ontario, for it meant the duck, banded last fall, doubled back several hundred miles during the southward migration. The Puerto Rican report was freakish also, for ordinarily the ducks that use the Mississippi flyway winter near the mouth of that river.

Ducks which use the Mississippi flyway include teal[which are now in the midst of their southward flight], mallard, black duck, pintail, wood duck, baldpate, redhead, shoveler, ring-necked, buffle-head, and ruddy, to mention only a few.

Studies indicate that the birds travel the same flyways year after year. They indicate too that the southbound fowl take their own sweet time, merely keeping ahead of the icy weather.

Luther College Club.

The Rev. A. O. Storvik, pastor of St. Timothy Lutheran church, will be the speaker at the Chicago Luther College club at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Norske Klub, 2346 North Kedzie avenue.

BOYS KNOW HOW TO END WARS IN INCIDENT STAGE

Republic Opens Court of Arbitration.

A few adolescent boys still learning their history lessons know something that dictators don't know, nor kings, nor presidents nor other war minded men three times their age. These boys know that nothing is ever settled by a fight.

The mayor of the Boys Brotherhood republic, Alvin Lamm, a dark haired youth who attends Crane High school, says credit for this observation should go to Charles Henry, pudgy city judge from Manley High school. Young Henry says the way to end a fight is not to fight. The proper way is arbitration.

The purpose of the Boys Brotherhood republic is to help boys in trouble. That is why the young judge was concerned when there fell on his ears complaints from neighbors and police about boys fighting in the street.

How Gang Fights Start.

Two boys would have an argument. Maybe it would be over a football game or a dice game or something that somebody said about somebody.

Then one boy would hit the other boy in the eye. Then the other boy would wait until his eye healed and he would pop the other boy on the head. Then the first boy would get a gang of his friends and beat up the second boy. Next in the chapter of settling the argument would be a gang fight with several broken hands, a concussion or two, and broken windows.

Judge Henry, who lives at 3915 West 16th street, extends an invitation to all boys anywhere in the city to use the Boys Brotherhood republic's courtroom at 1530 South Hamlin avenue to settle their differences. The court for outside boys will be open every Sunday evening. Each boy may retain a boy attorney who has passed the bar examinations of the Boys Brotherhood republic.

No One Is Wrong.

"It has to be settled carefully by arbitration," says Mayor Lamm. "You can't ever solve it by saying one is wrong. The best way is to admit that both boys have some good points on the question and both have the bad. Then we can explain away the differences."

One case so far has been settled in the B. B. R. courtroom and there were no black eyes nor split heads required. Two boys started an argument over an interclub football game. It was about to become a gang war when Judge Henry invited them to use the boys' courtroom and have a real trial.

"The only shouting done was by the attorneys," said Mayor Lamm. "And that is to be expected."

When the trial was over the boys accepted the verdict calmly and shook hands. "Hey," said one of them afterwards, "they didn't say just who was wrong."

So every Sunday night the B. B. R. courtroom will open its doors. "The procedure will begin," says the judge, "with a 15 minute intermission of peace when the fighters can tell their stories to their attorneys. They then can decide on whether it will be a jury or jury trial.

Why Be Fat?
Here's the Most Amazing Way To Lose Weight You've Ever Read About!

Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16. She recommends the easy Welch way to reduce.

Here's how to take off ugly fat—without strict diet lists, no strenuous exercises, no drugs. The easy Welch Way! And intelligent, cooperative people who faithfully followed Dr. Frederic Damrau's instructions lost an average of 7 pounds a month. Amazing results sworn to before a Notary Public. And listen how easy it is. Just mix ¾ glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass water, and drink before meals and at bedtime. Then this happens: First, you have less desire to eat sweet, fattening foods—thus reducing caloric intake. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime actually helps nature consume excess fat. Yet you needn't suffer a hungry moment. So start reducing the Welch Way today.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

News and views from the studios: Kay Chase is back writing Painted Dreams for W-G-N after a vacation of two months. Her first script since she has returned will be aired at 1:15 p. m. tomorrow. Heretofore, when vacationing Kay has taken her typewriter with her, writing on trains, planes, boats and buses. This time a substitute took her place. Kay also will be back in the rôle of Joyce Foster in the serial. Kay has written the show for a decade.

Friends and associates of Durward Kirby, Chicago NBC announcer, are congratulating him. Yesterday he received an H. P. Davis Announcer's Award for 1941. The late Harry P. Davis was a Pittsburgh radio pioneer. The award is made each year to an NBC announcer in each of four regions for excellence in announcing. Kirby received $300 in cash together with a medal and ring. Kirby, besides announcing various shows, is master of ceremonies of Club Matinée.

First Operetta Club.

A club formed in Brooklyn in May, 1940, by Clare Mason has been granted a charter in the Chicago Theater of the Air clubs. Altho it is officially chapter No. 38 it claims to have been the very first group to listen regularly to W-G-N's Saturday night operettas.

Arturo Toscanini is to make his first appearance on the air this season with the NBC Symphony orchestra at 8:30 p. m. next Saturday over the NBC Blue network. A special treatment of the "Blue Danube Waltz" will be featured.

Ginny Simms, who has just recently left the Kay Kyser College of Musical Knowledge, is carving out quite a career of her own. Besides her new Friday evening radio show she is making pictures for R-K-O. And next Thursday she will make a guest appearance with Rudy Vallee and John Barrymore.

Margery Mayer, who got her radio start singing on W-G-N and then went to the Hymns of All Churches program, has gone to New York and will be heard on the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air over WMAQ at 4 today.

Gunther for Swing.

John Gunther, foreign correspondent, probably will take over Raymond Gram Swing's program while Swing vacations, starting about Christmas. The substitution hinges on Gunther's being able to get back from Britain in time. Swing expects to be off the air three weeks.

The life story of Grant Wood, noted contemporary American painter, will be dramatized on the Art institute's Great Artist series at 2:15 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. The Goodman Theater Players will dramatize the highlights of his life.

First Nighter series started its 12th year of presenting original plays on WBBM-CBS Friday night. Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne are the current stars. Don Ameche used this show as a springboard to Hollywood.

The Quiz Kids have just returned from a brain battle at the University of Michigan. They bested a quintet of professors 420 to 390. Joan Bishop, Jack Lucal, Richard Williams, Gerard Darrow, and Harve Fischman made the trip.

"Smokes for Yanks!"

A fraternity at the University of Chicago and the Young Republicans' club of Gary yesterday joined the rapidly increasing corps of volunteer workers who are seeing to it that the American soldiers and sailors patroling the Atlantic and on duty at bases in Iceland and the Caribbean area will have cigarets, cigars and tobacco.

The Phi Kappa Psi chapter at the U. of C. have placed a receiving station box in their frat house at 5555 Woodlawn avenue and the 42 house members have resolved to fill it up. The individual contributions of the members have already brought the group's objective closer. Leaders of Drive.

Leading the chapter's campaign are Alfred Gentzler, house president; Philip Strick, vice president; John White, treasurer; Jack Kahoun and Chester Smith, secretaries.

The 250 members of the Young Republicans club have each contributed cigarets and cigars to the "Smokes for Yanks!" campaign and have set up 20 receiving station boxes in Gary. Here's How You Can Help.

Every one can help to make it a merrier Christmas for those men. Next time you buy cigars, or a pack of cigarets, or a tin of tobacco, buy one for a Yank and drop it in the receiving boxes which are in stores, restaurants and hotels thruout the city. Cash contributions may be sent to Tribune Charities, Inc., Tribune Tower, Chicago.

SUGGEST ROUTES TO HELP DRIVERS AVOID DELAYS

Motorists Can Escape Calumet Tangles.

Motorists who travel thru the increasingly congested Calumet region would save time by taking one of several alternate routes, the Chicago Motor club pointed out last week. A survey shows that 50,000 vehicles sometimes use Indianapolis boulevard [U. S. 12, 20, and 41] in a single day.

The volume of traffic in that district has become a problem for three principal reasons, Charles M. Hayes, motor club president, explained. Defense industries are employing more workers, there has been a steady increase in interstate travel, and there are more registered motorists.

Home-to-Job Traffic.

The problem is considered twofold. One is local traffic which involves workers in the Calumet region who drive back and forth to their homes, usually in Chicago's south side. The other is thru traffic coming from Indiana and the east, some of which desires to miss Chicago.

Local traffic passing between South Chicago and northern Indiana can circumvent this bottleneck area by a number of by-passes. The following is considered preferred: proceeding south from 95th street, there are three principal routes which may be used—Doty avenue to 130th street to Brainerd; Torrence avenue to Brainerd; and Avenue O to Brainerd. Brainerd then leads across the state line to Calumet avenue [U. S. 41] which is followed a short distance to Indiana 312 which leads to U. S. 12 east of East Chicago.

For motorists traveling north from 95th street, Yates, Jeffery, and Stony Island are all streets less heavily traveled than U. S. 41 [South Shore drive] and all lead to Jackson park.

By-Pass Routes.

Motorists who live on the southwest side or motorists who are driving to points north of Chicago may avoid city traffic by going a few miles out of their way. U. S. 30, the farthest south, and U. S. 6 are both good highways. Route 30 may be reached by Illinois 83, which crosses such principal routes as Harlem, Cicero, Western, and Halsted. Both may also be reached by Torrence avenue.

Testimony of motorists, according to the motor club, shows that the advantages of time and convenience outweigh the longer distance on these routes.

Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] is currently advocating a plan which would split routes U. S. 12, 20, and 41, bringing them in on different streets in order to eliminate congestion.

The opening of 106th street between Indianapolis boulevard and Torrence soon will provide another artery for south side traffic. Confusion among motorists, pedestrians and surface line cars is expected to result when it is first opened, however, since there are no traffic lights at the intersection with Indianapolis.

600,000 Transfer Yearly.

J. C. Johnson of the Chicago and Calumet District Transit company, has pointed out that 600,000 persons transfer between the Chicago surface lines and the Indiana bus system during the course of a year, resulting in an average of one coach every 6 minutes during a 22 hour day. Ald. Rowan will request the city and state to make traffic counts at the intersection to determine what form of protection would be adequate.

NEGRO COLLEGE SINGERS TO GIVE CONCERT SUNDAY

The Chicago Wilberforce Alumni club will sponsor a concert by the Wilberforce University Singers next Sunday afternoon at Du Sable High school. Proceeds will be used to erect a new hall of science at the university, which is located near Xenia, O.

A. L. Foster, executive secretary of the Chicago Urban league, is chairman of the concert committee; Mrs. La Ursa Hedrick, NYA employé, is secretary; and the Rev. A. Wayman Ward, pastor of the Bethel AME church, is treasurer. Tickets are being sold by the following alumni acting as captains: Mrs. Pauline Kigh Reed, Mrs. Juliana Rhodes, Miss Selwyn Daniel, Miss Alice Johnson, Mrs. Edna Morris, Mrs. Georgia Allen, Mrs. Mary Patton, and Mrs. Hedrick.

Weds in December

Miss Dorothy Anast, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Anast, 65 East 79th street, is engaged to be married to Edward Benson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Warner Benson, 7915 Perry street. The wedding will take place Dec. 28 in St. Constantine's church.

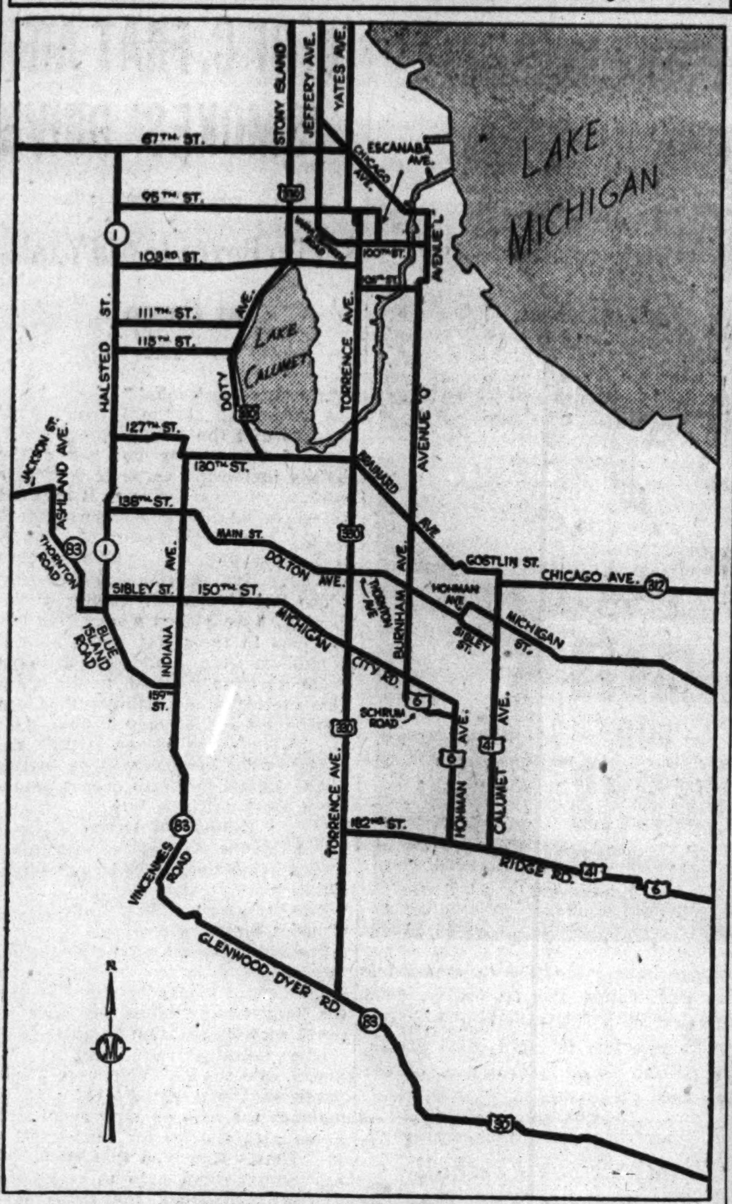
How to Avoid Traffic Delays



These are the alternate routes suggested by the Chicago Motor club for motorists who wish to travel to or from the city without using Indianapolis boulevard and South Shore drive or who wish to circumvent Chicago traffic.

'GROW YOUNG,' IS COUPLE'S ADVICE ON HAPPINESS

Wohlenbergs to Mark 58th Wedding Day.

C. J. Wohlenberg.

Mrs. C. J. Wohlenberg.

"Be contented and stay young with your children," is the advice given to young married couples by Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Wohlenberg on the eve of their 58th wedding anniversary. The Wohlenbergs will receive about 100 guests Friday at an open house party in their home at 6830 Chappel avenue.

The guests will get a taste of Mrs. Wohlenberg's cooking, which has kept her husband happy for nearly six decades. Like her husband, Mrs. Wohlenberg leads an active life and is said to be adept at turning out delicious cherry pies and tender roast turkeys. The elderly couple sets a pace that is hard to keep up with, according to Mrs. C. H. Crowe, Clarion, Ia., and Mrs. E. Gordon Fox, 6830 Chappel avenue, their daughters, and C. C. Wohlenberg, 7019 Merrill avenue, their son.

Married in Iowa.

Mr. and Mrs. Wohlenberg were married Dec. 5, 1883, near Clinton, Ia. At the time there were no railroads in the vicinity. The bride had been born and raised in Iowa but Mr. Wohlenberg had come from Hamburg, Germany, when he was 16 years old. They settled in Clinton county and Mr. Wohlenberg became owner of a lumber company and three banks before he retired in 1931.

A past president of the Iowa Bankers' association and a former member of the executive council of the American Bankers' association, Mr. Wohlenberg also has served four years on the Iowa state banking board.

High in Masonry.

He is a member of the Eastern Star, Blue lodge, Knights Templar, Shrine and Scottish Rite, in the Masonic order, and a past grand treasurer of the grand lodge of Iowa.

Mr. Wohlenberg will be 81 years old next month. Mrs. Wohlenberg is 79.

WOODSHORE CLUB TO FILL BASKETS AS YULE CHARITY

The Woodshore Juniors will meet at the home of Mrs. Wilfred W. Souhrada, 6107 South Ellis avenue, tomorrow evening. Mrs. Souhrada is treasurer of the club, which is a member of the 2d district, Illinois Federation of Women's clubs. In addition to filling Christmas baskets, a regular business meeting will take place, Miss Avian Reinemeyer, 1408 East Marquette road, is Christmas basket committee chairman. A lesson in parliamentary law will be given by Mrs. H. C. Cordick, 7204 South Shore drive. Mrs. Emma Fox's book on parliamentary law has been purchased by the club as a guide in the study.

Drama Group to Present 'Sweet Aloes' Next Sunday

Miss Angela Kreusner, 4932 Lake Park avenue, will have the lead rôle in the play, "Sweet Aloes," by Jay Mallory to be presented by Play Parade, dramatic group, next Sunday evening in Curtiss hall of the Fine Arts building. C. Henry Nathan is directing the production.

Directs Benefit

Mrs. Frank E. Glass, 2669 East 78th street, is ways and means chairman of the dessert bridge party to be sponsored by the South Shore High school PTA Tuesday afternoon in the Hotel Windermere West. Proceeds will be used for the school band.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

GENOA council, Knights of Columbus, will pay tribute to James F. Riley Jr., 1339 East 75th street, at a meeting tomorrow evening at 7439 Cottage Grove avenue. Mr. Riley was the youngest grand knight ever to hold office when he led the council for two terms. During his administration the membership of the council remained on the K. of C. honor rolls and he is said to have been partially responsible for making the council one of the largest in the city. Francis X. Poynton, 8130 Calumet avenue, is chairman of the committee working on the program. The committee includes all of the council's officers.

Four south siders have rôles in the production of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" to be presented by the Jack and Jill Players at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Forester theater, 1016 North Dearborn street. They are Robert Ellis, 2402 East 77th street, as "Tiny Tim"; Jack Dvorak, 5506 Honore street, as Elizabeth Cratchit; Roland Butterfield, 8754 South Elizabeth street, as Marley's ghost, and Teresa Gregalunas, 2720 East 76th street, as "The Ghost of Christmas Present."

NINE Hyde Park Boy Scout troops will bring their collections of waste paper to Farmer's Green Field, 50th street and Dorchester avenue, for a public defense aid demonstration Saturday. The Hyde Park Scouters club recently promoted a contest among the troops to collect old newspapers and other paper to help the city-wide waste paper defense drive. Each troop's bundles will be weighed and awards will be presented for the largest. Vernon T. Brauns is president of the club.

At 7:40 o'clock this evening the Woodlawn Methodist church, 64th street and Woodlawn avenue, will hold a special service for the 25th wedding anniversary of its pastor and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. Weldon E. Bradburn. Dr. C. A. Bloomquist, superintendent of the Southern district, Rock River conference of the Methodist church, will be guest speaker. Wesley F. Bradburn of Wilmette, brother of the pastor, will be soloist.

ENGLEWOOD CLUB WOMEN COOK UP A RECIPE BOOK

And Season It with Sage Housewifely Proverbs.

Miss Anna L. Reed.
[Koehne photo.]

Holiday festivities on the southwest side are destined to be pleasantly affected this season by a small brown volume compiled by the Englewood Woman's club and known as the "Englewood Woman's Club Cook Book." Fresh off the press, it is to go on sale tomorrow on the club's regular meeting day. Some members have placed orders for a dozen or more copies for Christmas gifts.

Into the book have gone 350 recipes, each the culinary specialty of the member who contributed it. Some of the women have given recipes that were handed down thru generations of cooks in the family. Other recipes are new, vitamin conscious originals. Some, redolent of distant places, are the prized mementoes of travel in foreign lands.

Gathering the material, compiling it systematically, Miss Anna L. Reed, 308 West 66th street, has seasoned the book with sage [no pun] bits of housewifely wisdom and apt quotations from Shakespeare and Robert Burns.

Famed in Church as Cook.

Miss Reed's cooking abilities are proverbial in her church circle. She is the ways and means chairman of the Englewood club, and was the originator of the idea for a book of members' recipes as a means of raising revenues for club operations. Assisted by her sister, Mrs. David W. Johnson, she has been working on the compilation since June.

If it is known that Miss Reed is baking chocolate cake for the occasion, the success of a benefit supper at her church is assured. Miss Reed give her chocolate layer cake recipe in the new cook book, and she also contributes menus for luncheons and receptions.

The gem among Mrs. Johnson's recipes is an oxtail soup which she learned to make in the deep south. Requiring three hours to prepare, the soup, served with boiled rice, is a full meal. Mrs. Lester Lanyon's reputation as one of the club's most able hostesses is linked with a French recipe for onion soup. Mrs. Lanyon tells how to make her rich onion pottage and she also contributes a prize vegetable soup recipe to the club collection.

No-Shrink Sponge Cake.

Mothers who have heard the praises of ham jambayola sung by their sons and daughters, returning from a party at the H. Clay Calhoun home, will learn how Mrs. Calhoun makes the savory concoction of ham, onion, rice, and tomatoes. Mrs. John Haeberlin, the president, contributes the recipe for a ham souffle which has become a favorite repast at board meetings.

The women of Mrs. J. M. Van Valkenburgh's family have been using the recipe which she gives for "shrinkless sponge cake" for more than 100 years. Among other time tested recipes that have won place in the new cook book are Mrs. Otto Lange's great grandmother's marble cake and Mrs. Fred Bauchhenss' great aunt's old fashioned molasses cookies.

Lora Heiman to Be Bride

The engagement of Miss Lora Heiman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Heiman, 7609 Essex avenue, to Harold Seigle of Elgin was announced recently.

Lyceum Player

Miss Gwen Chandler, 6820 Crandon avenue, will enact the role of Miranda Burton in the play, "My Dear Children," to be given by the Lyceum Theater guild next Saturday and Sunday at the Chicago Woman's club, 72 East 11th street. The production is directed by Esther Sachs.
[Maurice Seymour Photo.]

Luncheon Party.

St. Kilian's Altar and Rosary society will give a luncheon and card party at 12 o'clock Thursday at the Better Home institute, 6902 South Normal avenue. Mrs. Edwin Rowland is chairman of arrangements. Mrs. Albert Stapleton is president.

HARVEST DAYS IN OLD POLAND REVIVED IN FETE

Youths Give Elders Nostalgic Party.

BY HARRY FISHER.

Surrounding the settlement, the red brick and frame houses crowded between taverns and hamburger stands are a far cry from the widespread fields of a Polish country-side. The cars roaring by on asphalt paved Augusta boulevard could not by the farthest stretch of the imagination be taken for oxcarts on a dusty country road. The gas station across the street is unquestionably a gas station and not a picturesque stable.

But last week-end, in the basement of the settlement house, the spirit of Poland was evident everywhere—in the authentic, colorful costumes, in the traditional folk dances, in the faces of the older dancers who had transplanted their old-world customs to a newer soil and of their American born children who, noting the fascination of their audience, danced with increasing pride in their kinship with the old country.

Just Like Poland.

Here, in the center of the largest transplanted Polish settlement in the world, they were keeping alive a festive tradition, banished in Poland with the German invasion. And its authenticity in dance and costume was vouched by many native Poles who watched from the sidelines. "Just like in Poland," they murmured.

No doubt some were carried back in memory to a fall morning years ago when they too gathered in their gayest clothes, singing and dancing, before the manor house of their lord and lady, when they presented garlands of flowers and fruits, baskets of bread and sausage to them.

At the settlement the festival is double-featured with a mock wedding ceremony. The traditional bride and groom, Jan and Stasio—Casimir Zurewski, 2543 Walton street, and Florence Giebutowski, 1337 Division street—shyly bow before the overlord and his wife, who at the settlement house are Demetrius Charney, 1113 Milwaukee avenue, and Pinky Jagiello, 5837 Medina avenue.

Symbol of Marriage.

Characteristic of the Polish ceremony is the removing of the bride's wreath, binding up her braids and putting on her cap and apron, the sign she is no longer a carefree maid.

At first the bride rebels when her grandmother attempts to put the cap on her head. Her friends laugh and mock her as she weeps. Finally she yields and when the women are thru adorning her, dances off happily with her bridegroom.

Then begins the wedding dance. Each guest claims a dance with the bride and in token drops a coin in a large copper bowl watched over by the bride's friends. These bounties constitute the couple's wedding presents. Joe Dutt, 2049 Augusta boulevard, a janitor at the settlement in every-day life who annually assumes the rôle of chief mogul and official greeter during the week-end of the festival, claims the first dance.

Unites Generations.

"Young and old alike take a tremendous interest in the festival," explains Miss Harriet E. Vittum, head resident of the settlement. "This is the seventh year they've presented it and they've been rehearsing for months before. Not only has it become a colorful spectacle for outsiders, but it has helped to bring the American born children closer to their parents by making them appreciate the old world customs which are endeared to the older generation. Both parents and children make fine American citizens.

"They love America and would never return to Poland even if present conditions were different. But they are justly proud of the rich, colorful brand of culture they have brought with them or inherited."

CENTER OFFERS STUDY CLASSES ON FOUR TOPICS

Weekly classes in Spanish, piano, music appreciation, and psychology began last week at the Community Cultural center of Logan Square, 3117 Logan boulevard, according to Nathan W. Rubenstein, center president. The classes meet each Tuesday evening are free to any interested person in the neighborhood. Teachers are provided by the Adult Education program.

Classes in any other subject also will be added to the curriculum, if requested by 15 or more persons. Students may still register at the center with Morton Rosenbaum, director.

Women to Invite Husbands to Altar Society Program

Members of the Altar and Rosary society of St. Bartholomew church will be hostesses to their husbands and sons on "Gentlemen's Night" at 8 o'clock Thursday in the parish clubrooms, Addison street and La Vergne avenue. Ignatius Campani, a magician, and Miss Marian Giebel, accordionist, will be featured. Mrs. Peter Heinrich, 3600 North Linder avenue, is general chairman of arrangements.

Folk Dancers Depict Joys of Harvest in Centuries Old Polish Festival

In a ceremony centuries old, Chicagoans of Polish birth and ancestry re-enact the colorful Polish harvest festival. Dressed in old world costumes, the "lord and lady of the manor" receive the fruits of harvest from the folk of the surrounding countryside. The festival was presented at the Northwestern university settlement, 1400 Augusta boulevard. Left to right are Rita Ackerman, 1101 Noble street; Pink Jagiello, 5837 Medina avenue; Demetrius Charney, 1113 Milwaukee avenue; Helen Winnicki, 982 Milwaukee avenue; Cecelia Warren, 1012 North Ashland avenue; Joe Winnicki, and Esther Peprocki, 1455 North Honore street.

After the presentation of harvest gifts, the villagers announce the marriage of two of the youthful dancers, Jan and Stasia, and festivities begin anew with a wedding dance. This is followed by the ceremony of removing the bride's gay wreath and the binding up of her braids and the putting on of her cap and apron by the bride's mother. In the picture above, Florence Giebutoski, 1337 Division street, depicts the weeping bride who dons the attire of a matron as her friends chide her. Others in the picture (left to right) are Helen Danieliak, Anna Piszczor, 1355 Augusta boulevard; Mrs. Mary Widd, Julia Winnicki, Mrs. Anna Bugalski, Mrs. Irene Zurawski, 2543 Walton street; Virginia Zaorska, 1230 North State street, and Mrs. Barbara Tiska, 1364 Crystal street. The varicolored skirts worn by the women signify various sections of Poland.

For the privilege of dancing with the bride each man pays a bounty. The Poles have always considered this the most practical method of giving wedding presents, there being no chance of duplication. Here Joseph Dutt, 2049 Augusta boulevard, who acts as master of ceremonies, claims the first dance and deposits his coin into the copper bowl held by Helen Danieliak. Looking on in the foreground are (left) Julia Matyszewski, 1423 Augusta boulevard; Rita Acker, Irene Drozd, 1100 North Hermitage avenue; Lillian Rosochaska, 1330 Haddon avenue, and Dorothy Manczka, 1055 Noble street. Peering over their heads are Chester Sidler, 3034 West 41st street; Leo Swica, 1332 Walton street; Mrs. Mary Ciszowski, 1368 Evergreen avenue; Casimir Zurewski, 2543 Walton street, the bridegroom, and Frank Andrezewski, 1042 Greenview avenue. To the right of Dutt are Thomas Kaszubski, 732 North Elizabeth street; Mrs. Eleanor Bednarsz, 1018 North Paulina street, and Mrs. Mary Widd.

Before the Polish version of the cornucopia is presented to the lord of the manor, the celebrants perform a lively circle dance about Stanley Pilczarski, 1427 Augusta boulevard, who balances the basket on his head. Others in the picture are Adam Kuta, 1334 Cortez street; Mrs. Mary Ciszkowski, 1368 Evergreen avenue, and Joseph Chawszczewski, 1524 Augusta boulevard.

Dancing continues to the small hours. Youthful dancers include Helen Danieliak, Stanley Lubeck, 1218 Cleaver street; Helen Arndt, 1753 Division street; Finidor Beliajus, 514 East 61st street; Ed Papciak, 1500 Chestnut street; Casimir Zurewski and Florence Giebutoski (the bride and bridegroom), Chester Sidler, and Helen Giebutoski.

FIVE members of the cast of Shakespeare's comedy, "Twelfth Night," being presented currently until Dec. 19 by the De Paul university drama department, are northwest siders. They are Jerry Birn, 3826 Pine Grove avenue; Joseph Mondeaux, 5826 Winthrop avenue; Joseph Daffner, 2631 Evergreen avenue; Milton Borack, 2547 Division street, and Joseph Brownstone, 2855 Division street. The play is staged nightly in the De Paul little theater at 64 East Lake street.

MISS Ruby Garrett, 3009 North Christiana avenue, a student at Roosevelt High school, has recently undertaken the publication of the first newspaper ever published for members of the Girl Reserves of the Chicago YWCA. The paper, which appears in mimeographed form twice monthly, contains news of the city-wide Interclub Council of Girl Reserves in addition to local items of the Roosevelt group.

ARE you a tall, rather handsome young man? Have you a good voice? And, above all, can you express deep spiritual emotion? You can? Then you're just the fellow the Playmakers Guild of Independence park, 3945 North Springfield avenue, is looking for to complete the cast for their next play, "The Passing of the Third Floor Back.' You'll play the rôle of the stranger. The play is scheduled to be presented at the Goodman theater on Feb. 15. The guild rehearses Monday and Thursday evenings under the direction of Miss Rita Smith.

Schools Date 5,000 Girls for Service Men

The board of education is going to help find dancing partners for United States soldiers and sailors in training in various Chicago area encampments. Since early summer Miss Ernestine Badt, director of social centers and supervisor of a soldiers and sailors committee, has been working on the plan.

By Jan. 1 Miss Badt expects to have files in all sections of the city listing the names of some 5,000 girls who will dance with soldiers and sailors and whose parents have given consent. Within three days after requests are received from churches, YMCA's and fraternal groups who wish to entertain the men, hundreds of girls will be provided thru Miss Badt's committee.

Parents Must Consent.

Regulations have been set up by Miss Badt in order to insure the new program success. "We have been three years working on social mixers thru high school centers," says Miss Badt, "and nothing has gone wrong yet."

No girl can register as a dancing partner for soldiers and sailors unless she has a certificate of permission signed by her mother, father and a witness. The parents must also consent to provide for escorting the girls to and from the parties. "Service men will not be permitted to escort the girls home," says Miss Badt, "and no girl may attend the parties unless her name is on file with the committee."

Girls must be at least seniors in high school and must be no younger than 18 years. "The boys don't want them any younger," says Miss Badt, "and army and navy officials also prefer the older girls."

Approved by Service.

The approval of the plan has been received from a score of army and navy officials. The committee was supplied with the list of all army morale officers early in the summer by Col. N. B. Wood.

The program for registering dancing partners was launched by Miss Badt after numerous requests for girls to dance with the young navy cadets at the Great Lake Training school when they were treated to parties. "These boys are not all Chicagoans," explains Miss Badt, "and some have no opportunity even to talk to a girl. They are naturally eager for dancing partners. Several times I was expected to produce 200 girls at a few minutes notice."

The board of education will only do the inviting of the dancing partners from its file of names. The parties will be arranged by organizations interested in the welfare and morale of the men in training, and organizations will plan a mixer program with grand marches, counter marches and "robber" dances.

Women's Council.

The Women's council of Max Straus center, 3715 Wilson avenue will meet at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday. Miss Joyce Feldstien will present a program of dramatic sketches.

GIRLS' CHOIR OF STEINMETZ WILL GIVE CONCERT

The girls' choir of Steinmetz High school, under the direction of Willard L. Groom, will present a concert at 7:30 o'clock this evening in the Nebo Lutheran church, 5800 Dakin street.

Mr. Groom will introduce three soprano soloists, Miss Frances Emsley, Miss Dorothy Bartels, and Miss Orlo Drysdale. Miss Doris Ladancz and Miss Crystal Groom will be guest accompanists.

The program will include "Lord Thou Art Mindful" by Bach, "Angel Spirits" by Willan, "Far O'er the Bay," "Tanis Angelicus," and the "150th Psalm" by Franck, "Love Came Down at Christmas" by Sowerby, and "Ave Maria" by Brown.

The concert will be presented with the coöperation of Dr. Helen Howe, director of music for the Chicago public schools.

NORTHWEST SIDE DOGS COMPETE AT ANNUAL SHOW

Northwest side dog fanciers will take part in the 31st annual dog show sponsored by the Western Specialty Clubs Association ending today in the Coliseum. The show, largest in the midwest, will bring together more than 1,200 dogs from all over the United States to compete for awards totaling more than $10,000.

Northwest side exhibitors include Mrs. May G. Ruff, 2941 Kilbourne avenue, secretary of the Bull Terrier club; C. A. Koerner, 7905 Crescent drive, Elmwood Park, and A. R. Benning, 1738 North Washtenaw avenue, members of the German Shepherd club; H. Jack Cooper Franklin Park, president of the Irish Setter club, and D. L. Hollenbeck, 4238 North Kedvale avenue, secretary of the Western English and Irish Setter club.

PLAN OUTLINED FOR NEAR NORTH SIDE REBUILDING

Propose Improving Rundown Area.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

How a large near north side area might be improved into a highly desirable apartment section with the aid of the new neighborhood redevelopment corporation law was outlined by the Chicago plan commission last week thru its executive director, T. T. McCrosky.

This area, now marked by a wide variety of land uses, is bounded on the north by Chicago avenue, on the east by an extension of Tower court, on the south by Grand avenue, and on the west by the first alley west of Wells street.

It is one of three close-in areas in the city for which the plan commission has made detailed rehabilitation suggestions. The others are on the west and south sides.

Aided by Recent Law.

The law which makes the redevelopment possible was enacted at the last session of the legislature largely thru the efforts of the Chicago building congress. The committee that led the fight for the measure was headed by J. Soule Warterfield, vice president of the congress, and an authority on the causes and cures of land value decay.

The law empowers private interests under municipal supervision to acquire property in rundown areas, clear it of old structures, and build modern residential buildings amply surrounded by recreational space and necessary stores.

Redevelopment areas in cities of Chicago's size can be no smaller than two city blocks nor larger than 80 acres. The north side area under study contains 92 acres, but it would be developed by two or more corporations, which could work in harmony. The law provides that when 60 per cent of the land in a redevelopment area is purchased or placed under option, the other 40 per cent can be acquired by condemnation by the principle of eminent domain.

McCrosky made it clear that the plans his group advance are not intended as final. They merely illustrate graphically how the new law can help transform rundown neighborhoods by restoring property and tax values, he said.

Plan Demolition.

The plan contemplates demolition of all buildings in the north side area excepting public, religious and similar institutions, and a few privately owned structures too substantial to be torn down as yet. A new school would be provided at Superior and Dearborn streets, its grounds serving as play space for the surrounding neighborhood. A new park also would be established at Erie and Rush streets.

All north-south streets would remain open, but a few east-west thorofares such as Superior, Huron, and Ohio streets would be partially closed and turned into recreational area. The blocks between Erie and Ontario streets west of Wabash avenue are designated on the plan as part of the distributor network for the proposed superhighway system.

Apartment Buildings Proposed.

Residential buildings to be erected would be principally three story apartments and ten or twelve-story apartments. This high density is made virtually necessary because of relatively high land values on the near north side, it was pointed out. Stores would be permitted on the ground floors of buildings fronting on Chicago and Grand avenues and State street.

"The north area has been selected to illustrate a pattern of high density apartment houses on high priced land, and replacement of badly assorted land uses by unified development," McCrosky said.

"No area in the city is so well suited by its location for medium to high rental apartments for unmarried white collar workers and married couples whose children are of an age not requiring extensive recreation space."

Plan $68 Monthly Rents.

Building costs would run in the neighborhood of $5,220 for each dwelling unit, the commission estimates. Land costs would run about $3.50 a square foot, or $980 for each dwelling unit. There would be an average of 2.75 rooms per dwelling unit, and rents might be approximately $25 per room monthly or $68.60 per average dwelling unit.

The plan commission made this comparison of statistics for the three city areas as they are today:

	North.	West.	South.
Area in acres	92	226	225
Population	7,483	11,313	10,721
Total resid. structures	445	1,274	732
Res. str. blt. before 1885	164	507	172
Res. str. blt. before 1895	442	1,127	647
Total dwelling units	2,034	3,839	3,232
Assess. val. per res. str.	1,350	1,200	1,350
Front foot land vals.	$165 to $350	$30 to $150	$20 to $110

McCrosky pointed out that 1,320 dwelling units in the north side area are in what are regarded as substandard residential buildings. Of these 1,320 units, 493, or 37.3 per cent of the total, are unfit for use or in need of major repair, he said. All but 5.2 per cent of the residential buildings in the northern area in the study are at least 45 years old, he declared.

COMMUNITY CLUB OF ORIOLE PARK TO HAVE PARTY

Arthur Lenzini, 5435 Oriole avenue, is general chairman. His committee includes George Wagner, Gene Cowhey, Oscar Iverson, Frank Martin, Carl Bachmann, Joseph Rye, J. J. O'Connell, Milo Beman Jr., J. J. O'Connell Jr., Mrs. Earl Mills, Mrs. Elmer Drewes, Mrs. Fred Sperling Sr., and Mrs. J. J. O'Connell.

William N. Martin is president of the club, which meets on the fourth Thursday of the month in the Norwood park fieldhouse. Other officers are Arnold Knipp, vice president; Mrs. J. J. O'Connell, secretary; Clarence Wittenmeier, treasurer, and Peter Carpino, sergeant-at-arms. None of the residents have lived in the area more than three years.

In New Home

After a motor trip thru the south, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Warren are now at home at 8236 South Drexel avenue. Mrs. Warren is the former Irene Marie Ray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin F. Ray of Elmwood Park. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allair, 1504 East 85th place.

Boy Scouts Aid Smokes Drive

STATION
SMOKES FOR YANKS"

Boy Scouts of Troop 912 and their leader make their own contribution in the "Smokes for Yanks!" campaign before loading the box on a coaster wagon with which they will conduct a house to house campaign in the Albany Park district and along the busy Lawrence avenue shopping district. Left to right, Scoutmaster Robert Fine, Sheldon Williger, Shellie Schreiber, Burt Fine, and Sheldon Puzes.

SCOUTS TO MAN MOVING 'SMOKES FOR YANKS' BOX

Plan a Coaster Wagon Trek Tomorrow.

"Smokes for Yanks!"

A traveling "Smokes for Yanks!" receiving station box will make its appearance on Lawrence avenue tomorrow as the Boy Scouts of Troop 912 begin their campaign to collect cigars, cigarets, and pipe tobacco for the soldiers and sailors on the Atlantic and at bases in Iceland and the Caribbean.

This latest addition to the corps of volunteer workers stems from the idea of Scoutmaster Robert Fine of 4624 Monticello avenue. The 34 troop members had asked their scoutmaster if there wasn't something they could do to aid the nation's preparedness program. Scoutmaster Fine thought an important contribution would be one that would make happy the men in the country's armed forces.

Scouts to Man Station.

As their part in the "Smokes for Yands!" campaign, two Scouts each day will take a receiving box, mounted on a coaster wagon, along the busy Lawrence avenue shopping district. Men and women returning from work in the evening will find the Scouts, beside their box, at the Kimball and Lawrence avenues elevated station.

Fine said the troop will continue the campaign until the box is filled. The troop, which is organized only six months ago, is sponsored by the Hebrew institute of Albany Park.

You Too Can Help.

Contributions to the campaign will help in making it a merrier Christmas for the boys away from home. Everybody can help. Just drop your pack of cigarets, or package of cigars, or tin of tobacco, in the receiving boxes that can be found in stores, hotels and restaurants thruout the city. Another way to help is to mail a check, which will be used to purchase smokes, to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., Tribune Tower, Chicago.

"Smokes for Yanks!"

LEADERS NAMED FOR ROTC UNITS IN TWO SCHOOLS

Promotions of cadet officers in the ROTC units at two northwest side high schools were announced last week.

Final promotions in the Steinmetz High school ROTC unit were announced by Technical Sergeant Carl Christoffersen. Warren Moeller, promoted to major in September, was named lieutenant colonel to command the unit. Louis Zenaty was made a major, and Arthur Goethe, Lee Scott, and Edward Rogers were made captains.

First lieutenant commissions were given to Paul Breitsprecher, Louis Weiss, and Joseph DiGuilio; second lieutenant commisions, to Lee Jensen, James Lee, and Raymond Pagliughi. Gilbert Klotz headed the list of noncommissioned officers as master sergeant.

New commander of the Roosevelt High school unit is Maj. Marvin Homer, according to the report of Technical Sergeant Joseph V. Ackerman, military instructor. New company commanders are Captains Robert Nash, Howard Kiss, Fred Jasmer, and Jerome Kim. Paul Mallory and Robert Ryan were made second lieutenants.

Plan Boxing Show to Aid Northwest Cub Scout Pack

Ten boxing bouts will highlight a parents' night program to be presented by Boy Scout Cub pack No. 3863 and Troop 868 next Friday evening in the auditorium of the Irving Park Lutheran church, Belle Plaine and Harding avenues. Judge Lambert Hayes will address the parents. Proceeds will be used to purchase athletic equipment for the Cub unit. C. J. Harris, cubmaster, and W. W. Worthington, scoutmaster, will be in charge of arrangements.

TRAINING CAMP NEWS

Edward A. Krug Jr., 6545 North Richmond street, has won his navy wings and commission as a flying ensign in the United States naval reserve. He has been assigned to active duty at Norfolk, Va. Ensign Krug Jr. attended Brown university before joining the air corps. He received his preliminary flight training at the Glenview air base.

Edward A. Krug Jr. [U. S. Navy Photo.]

The first sergeant of Company A, 3d quartermaster regiment at Fort Warren, Wyo., was in a spot. He had 250 recruits on his hands and not a bugler among them. Up and down the barracks he stalked, but not one of the new men could blow a "reveille horn." At the far end of the room he sighted James M. Birkeland, 3238 Beach avenue.

"Can you blow a bugle?" the top kick queried.

"Sorry, sergeant, I can't."

"Well," came the desperate demand, "have you ever seen one?"

"Yes, sir; our Boy Scout troop kept one in its display case."

"You're our man, come with me." The windup of the story is that Birkeland, now a corporal, not only became bugler for his company but was recently appointed instructor for the regiment.

TWO WAY POLICE RADIO NOW LINKS 55 DEPARTMENTS

Speeds Manhunts, Rushes Aid to Accidents.

Most of the police departments in the Chicago area are included in a big two-way radio network that has been found invaluable in the catching of criminals.

No less than 55 state, county, city and suburban departments belong to the network, and more are coming in as local governments find the money to purchase the equipment. Hundreds of squad cars now carry the two-way radio telephones thru which their crews can receive orders or communicate vital information direct to headquarters.

There is no clearing house for this network that could be regarded as a central office, but police officials point out that this is not necessary. Should a swiftly moving manhunt develop, the squads in the field would probably be directed from the police transmitter nearest the scene, and the headquarters might shift as the chase progresses.

Help Smaller Departments.

Some of the larger police departments serve their smaller neighbors in radio facilities. The three Cook county stations, for example, have made their radio transmitters available to nearby suburbs too small to afford their own broadcasting stations.

Altho most of the police radio systems are on different wave lengths, arrangements have been made so that the systems can be interlocked for the quick transmission of orders and information.

To illustrate, county police officials told of a recent instance in which, at the request of an out-of-towner that they intercept a man vacation-bound in northern Wisconsin, their message was relayed to Appleton, Wis., entirely thru police radios, in something less than three minutes.

Thru use of the interlocking network, the Cook and Lake county authorities in the last few months have on more than one occasion intercepted fugitives from the Milwaukee police.

Speed Up Routine Work.

Police emphasize, however, that two-way radio is useful not only for unusual occasions such as a manhunt, but also for speeding the routine work of any law enforcing department.

In the case of automobile accidents, for instance, time is saved thru the ability of headquarters to communicate directly with accident squads in the field. Thru two-way radio, the nearest squad can be sent to an accident scene, while other squads continue their regular work.

The county highway police estimate they average four minutes in reaching an accident scene after they receive the first call.

Give Fill-in Service.

Radio also helps the county highway department give fill-in protection for suburbs with one or two man police forces. After the local stations are closed, appeals to police are relayed directly to the county highway station, whence the nearest squad is sent to investigate.

In Cook county there are 14 suburbs without regular police protection. There are 21 others with only one of two policemen each.

Police radio in the Chicago area was pioneered by THE TRIBUNE and radio station W-G-N. Early in 1929 THE TRIBUNE installed radio receivers in 40 squad cars, and station W-G-N interrupted its regular programs to broadcast police messages. On the strength of this successful experiment the city voted the same year to install its own transmitter and equip its police automobiles with receivers.

'ANTI-SABOTAGE' IS FORUM TOPIC TUESDAY EVENING

A discussion of "Anti-Sabotage" by A. H. Johnson, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will be given at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Defense building, 176 West Washington boulevard. The talk is sponsored by the Chicago Commission on National Defense.

This will be the seventh and final forum in a series on defense production problems which the commission is presenting in coöperation with the Illinois Institute of Technology under the United States Office of Education.

Designed to aid the small manufacturer with problems of obtaining and fulfilling defense contracts, the forums are conducted free. A new series will be announced beginning Jan. 1, 1942.

SALE OF CRAFT GOODS WILL AID DISABLED VETS

Under auspices of the Veterans' Craft exchange, which works in affiliation with the American Legion Auxiliary of Illinois, handicraft products of disabled soldiers and sailors will be on sale the first four days of this week in the Club Woman's bureau on the ninth floor of Mandel Brothers.

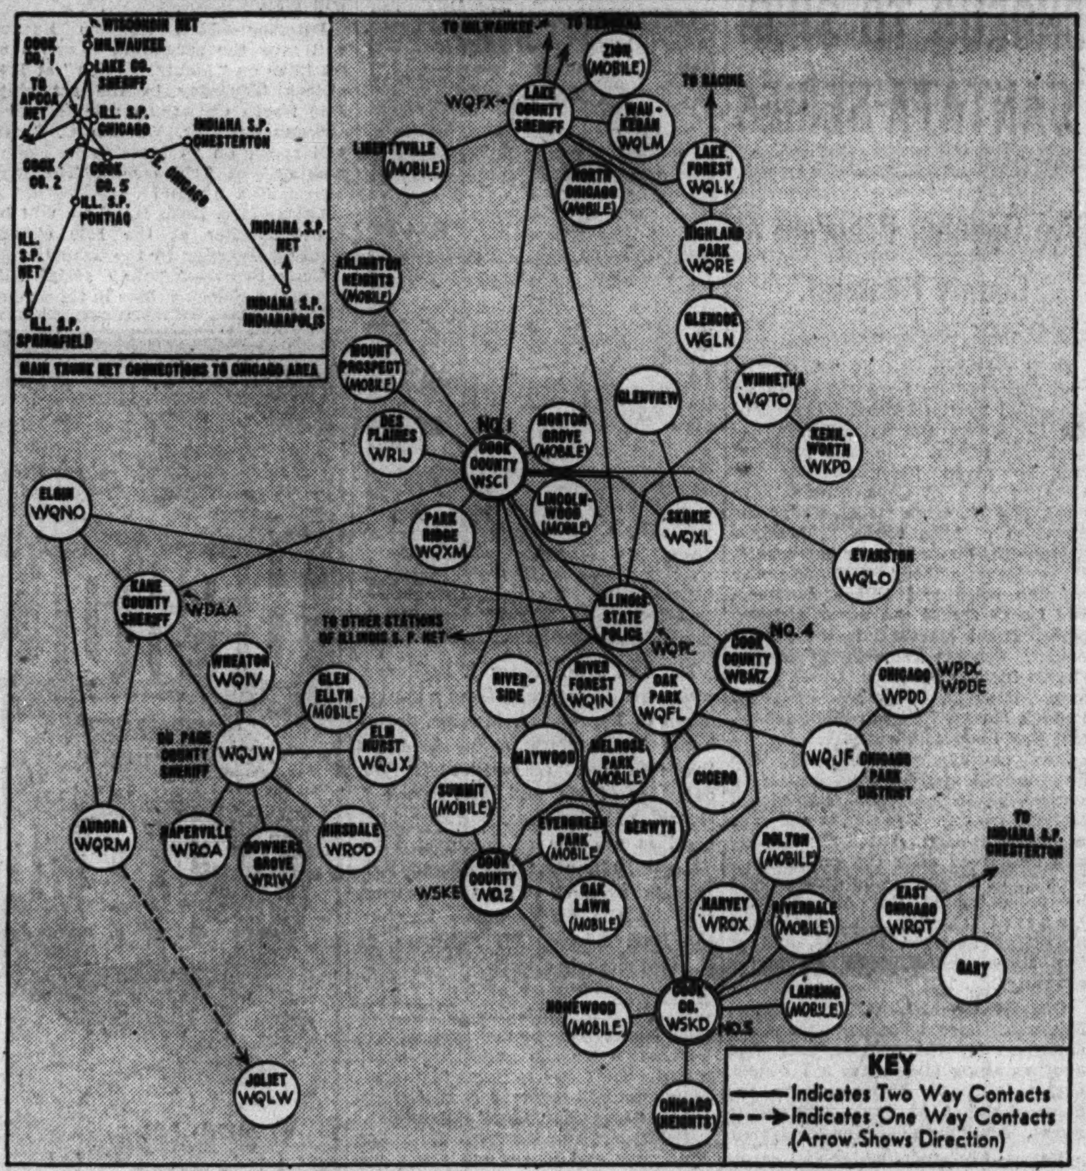
Materials for the articles, including rugs, leather work, baskets, kitchen articles, woodcraft, aprons, and woven goods, have been sold to the men by the government at cost price. Veterans will receive the entire proceeds of the sale.

The activity is under the direct auspices of a committee of which Mrs. Lucille Dowd of Homewood is chairman.

Career Institute Seniors to Present Fashion Show

The senior classes of Career institute, 720 North Michigan avenue, will present a fashion show and bridge party Saturday afternoon in the school's auditorium. Proceeds will go to the scholarship fund.

A Web to Enmesh Wrongdoers



This diagram shows how short wave police radio networks of Chicagoland are linked with the four stations maintained by the Cook county highway police. The call letters indicate the suburb in question has its own wave length and transmitter and receiving system. The suburbs designated "mobile" have squad cars tuned to the wave length of the county highway station with which the black line links them. The smaller diagram shows how regular telephone trunk lines extend the interlocking network over an even larger area.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 1.

Remove stone bird baths to a shed to prevent cracking during cold weather. All statuary should be removed indoors. Attach a humidifier to radiators to give some humidity in the room where plants are standing. Most rooms are excessively dry and the plants suffer accordingly.

Syringe plants by placing in the tub and forcing water from the hose into all parts of stems and leaves to remove dust and insects. Mealy bugs and red spiders, two insidious pests that are often permitted to accumulate on plants, may be kept under control if syringing is consistently practiced.

Small cacti and other succulents planted in drainageless containers should be watered carefully altho the soil is usually too high in them to hold water. Keep cacti in a south window for best results.

Tuesday, Dec. 2.

Most flowering house plants are grown in comparatively small pots and as a result they become root-bound and soon exhaust the food elements. Applications of liquid food at intervals of about three weeks will keep the plants in good health. A lack of food is indicated by weak stems, small leaves, few flowers or scattered fruits.

Plants grown for their ornamental foliage require considerable amounts of nitrogenous food, altho a complete plant flood is preferable unless one has some knowledge of the particular soil used. Give flowering plants plenty of water or they wilt quickly.

If purchased from the florist it must be remembered that the plants have developed in the greenhouse where the atmospheric conditions are properly maintained. Changing to room conditions effects the plants, but watering can be taken care of in an intelligent manner. Examine the soil each morning and keep it moist.

Wednesday, Dec. 3.

Poinsettias dry out quickly, and the best way to water them is to place the pots in a basin of water, allowing it to stand until the soil is wet thru. Avoid sudden changes of temperature or the leaves will turn yellow and fall.

Some plants do best in a cool temperature, such as the primroses and cyclamen, but they require several sunny hours each day. Examine pot bulbs, such as tulips, narcissi, and hyacinth, and if thoroly rooted bring into heat where they will flower quickly.

Amaryllis bulbs can be planted now. If the bulbs are in pots remove some of the top soil and replace with fresh, rich soil. Water well and not again for some time, for the flower stalk appears before the leaves and little water is needed. These bulbs will flower in hyacinth glasses without soil, but at best the method is utilized as a novelty.

Thursday, Dec. 4.

Protect hardy chrysanthemums during winter. Too much covering is more often responsible for injury than anything else. Often too much is applied during a mild winter which smothers the plants but no one can, with certainty, anticipate winter conditions. Do not apply the covering material too soon—wait until the ground freezes, first cutting back the tops to within 7 or 8 inches of the ground; the stubs serve to hold the material in place.

First apply a thin covering, gradually applying more and more until it may be several inches deep. Material to use may consist of evergreen branches, coarse hay, or other litter that does not pack down. Leaves are excellent when used properly; cornstalks scattered around the plants and then a covering of leaves, held up by the stalks, do very well. Do not uncover too soon in spring.

Friday, Dec. 5.

Start a calla lily indoors. They make fine plants and are easily grown. When well started, these plants require feeding at frequent intervals. Cover the bulbs in outdoor beds after the ground is frozen. This also applies to the perennial borders.

Some perennials, such as the foxglove, Canterbury bell, pinks, Shasta daisies, coreopsis, and irises need only a bit of cover, or just enough to keep the frost in the ground and prevent heaving during spring thaws and subsequent injury.

Growing in their natural habitat, most plants have only leaves to cover them, but these fall gradually, lightly, and do not smother. Leaves can be obtained from oak forests and they do not pack, become soft and decay like those from softwoods.

Saturday, Dec. 6.

Naturalize some of the minor bulbous plants before the season is too advanced. These include the intensely blue muscari or grape hyacinth and the unusual feathered hyacinth; glory-of-the-snow or Chionodoxa with its gayly blue-white streaked flowers; white, Siberian Squills; the Guinea henflower or Fritillaria Meleagris.

Well drained pockets of soil in the rock garden are excellent for some of the small bulbs and tulip species, such as T. chrysantha, Clusiana, Eichleri, Kaufmanniana, and others. Protect during winter.

Sow hardy annuals now if the ground is in suitable condition, for they will start early in spring and flower much sooner than those sown in spring. They include poppies, California poppies, alyssum, cosmos, portulaca, zinnia, snapdragon, gaillardia, kochia, calliopsis, balsam, four-o'clock, Japanese hop, and others. Sow thinly by mixing the finer seed with sand.

THIS SIX ROOM CITY HOUSE HAS 5 FLOOR LEVELS

Home Is Designed in the English Tradition.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[This is the first of two articles on an interesting home in Chicago.]

Here we find recaptured some of the valiant spirit of traditional English architecture, a spirit deep in the roots of our own colonial traditions and the inspiration of many of our present day homes.

It is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Anderson, 2222 West 113th place, Chicago. There are six rooms and a very interesting five level floor plan; also a masculine minded nursery bedroom for Kenneth Anderson, aged 4, who already is a lively and companionable member of the household.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's corner lot is 50 feet by 156 feet. They chose the modified English type of architecture because they liked the style, felt it suited the site and could be excellently adapted to their individual needs.

Home of Enduring Quality.

There is a definitely enduring quality in the beauty of this English minded home with its exterior walls of dark red brick, its steep, slate colored roofs, its massive chimney, and nicely landscaped lawn.

Mrs. Anderson doesn't believe in the old adage that one must build a house and live in it a year before one knows what one really wants. She said:

"We had studied a great many house plans and given a great deal of thought to what we needed. That's the important thing, after all, I think. If you know your needs and preferences before you decide to build you've gone a long way toward a house that satisfies you after it is finished.

"We had always had a preference for the English type house and liked the floor plans with their five levels that Mr. Boehme submitted to us. They seemed to meet our own needs precisely. We find it very convenient to have our master bedroom on the upper level, above and to the right of Kenneth's room, half a floor level below. There is more privacy for us and less likelihood of waking him if we come home late at night. Later on he can have his own friends in his own room—with less disturbance to the rest of the house."

Economically Planned.

This separation of the boy's room from the master bedroom and also from the living quarters is an idea which should work for general family satisfaction as the years move on.

Inside one finds a thoroly straightforward design, planned for convenience and economy. There is a square front entrance, with coat closet at the left, a reception hall beyond, and then access from this to the rear is thru a second hallway.

There is an open arrangement of living room, dining room and hall, with windows ample for daylight and ventilation and placed to give ample space for furnishings.

The five levels create interest in the plan. Below grade the first and second levels are given over to heater room, laundry, and recreation quarters. On the third or ground level there are the reception hall, in rust and ivory tones; the L-shaped living room and dining room with a great picture bay on the east wall, and the kitchen with its built-in breakfast wall.

4th Floor Guest Room.

On the fourth floor level is Kenneth's room and also a guest room. The guest room has two large closets, one of them a cedar closet.

"I wanted plenty of closet space and storage space," Mrs. Anderson said. "And I have it. I have eight closets and two linen closets and storage spaces on the west wall and in the basement."

There is a large bathroom on this level with a shower stall enclosure. Then on the fifth floor level there is a light, airy, spacious master bedroom with windows on three sides. In the upper hall of this level there is a closet large enough to be a bedroom, with a generous outside window. Here, too, is a bath. Below is space for a future bedroom.

A very livable floor plan, this.

HAS JOB TRAPPING WILD DUCKS AND LETTING THEM GO

Forest Preserves Aid in Banding Studies.

Catching wild ducks and letting them go is one function of a busy division of the Cook county forest preserve district. The division is headed by Lynn H. Hutchens, wild life technician.

Like most generalities, that is an over simplification. The job has to do with the study of wild life to help guide efforts at conservation.

The important part of Hutchens' work occurs between the catching and releasing, when he clamps a numbered aluminum band loosely about the fowl's leg and tosses the bird into the air to resume its own way of life.

Finders Make Report.

Later some bird bander at another station, or the hunter who bags the fowl will communicate his find to the United States fish and wild life service in Washington, D. C., giving the number and the place where the bird was taken.

The federal service will have a record of the bird, for each of the 2,000 banding stations thruout the nation reports its banding operations. After recording the new information, the service will report it to the station that banded the bird.

By such comparison of notes, technicians can estimate waterfowl population, the proportion of males to females, the approximate life span, the places of origin, the time and route of migrations, and many another fact that helps to direct conservation efforts and fix game laws.

Chicago in Waterfowl Path.

Chicagoland is in the path of the greatest of the nation's four major flyways for waterfowl. Hutchens soon will become a naval aviation cadet, but he has trained his assistant, John Jedlicka, to carry on.

McGinnes slough, a 265 acre marsh lake on a 480 acre forest preserve tract at Orland Park, southwest of Chicago, is the bird banding locale and is an almost ideal waterfowl preserve.

Four bird traps are set up there. Each day during the southward flight, which begins in August and continues sometimes into January, Hutchens and Jedlicka don hip boots, wade out to the traps, catch, band, and release the captives that have accumulated since the last visit, and make a record of their work.

Last year they banded 895 ducks of various varieties. Up to last week, this year's catch consisted of nearly 1,500, nine of which were wearing last year's bands.

Report on Last Year's Birds.

Of last year's 895 birds caught, 69 have been reported on. Of the 69 reports, 44 were from Illinois[mostly south], six were from Missouri, four each from Indiana, Florida, and Louisiana, and one each from Wisconsin, Iowa, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ontario, and Puerto Rico.

The biggest surprise was the one from Ontario, for it meant the duck, banded last fall, doubled back several hundred miles during the southward migration. The Puerto Rican report was freakish also, for ordinarily the ducks that use the Mississippi flyway winter near the mouth of that river.

Ducks which use the Mississippi flyway include teal[which are now in the midst of their southward flight], mallard, black duck, pintail, wood duck, baldpate, redhead, shoveler, ring-necked, buffle-head, and ruddy, to mention only a few.

Studies indicate that the birds travel the same flyways year after year. They indicate too that the southbound fowl take their own sweet time,, merely keeping ahead of the icy weather.

Luther College Club.

The Rev. A. O. Storvik, pastor of St. Timothy Lutheran church, will be the speaker at the Chicago Luther College club at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Norske Klub, 2346 North Kedzie avenue.

BOYS KNOW HOW TO END WARS IN INCIDENT STAGE

Republic Opens Court of Arbitration.

A few adolescent boys still learning their history lessons know something that dictators don't know, nor kings, nor presidents nor other war minded men three times their age. These boys know that nothing is ever settled by a fight.

The mayor of the Boys Brotherhood republic, Alvin Lamm, a dark haired youth who attends Crane High school, says credit for this observation should go to Charles Henry, pudgy city judge from Manley High school. Young Henry says the way to end a fight is not to fight. The proper way is arbitration.

The purpose of the Boys Brotherhood republic is to help boys in trouble. That is why the young judge was concerned when there fell on his ears complaints from neighbors and police about boys fighting in the street.

How Gang Fights Start.

Two boys would have an argument. Maybe it would be over a football game or a dice game or something that somebody said about somebody.

Then one boy would hit the other boy in the eye. Then the other boy would wait until his eye healed and he would pop the other boy on the head. Then the first boy would get a gang of his friends and beat up the second boy. Next in the chapter of settling the argument would be a gang fight with several broken hands, a concussion or two, and broken windows.

Judge Henry, who lives at 3915 West 16th street, extends an invitation to all boys anywhere in the city to use the Boys Brotherhood republic's courtroom at 1530 South Hamlin avenue to settle their differences. The court for outside boys will be open every Sunday evening. Each boy may retain a boy attorney who has passed the bar examinations of the Boys Brotherhood republic.

No One Is Wrong.

"It has to be settled carefully by arbitration," says Mayor Lamm. "You can't ever solve it by saying one is wrong. The best way is to admit that both boys have some good points on the question and both have the bad. Then we can explain away the differences."

One case so far has been settled in the B. B. R. courtroom and there were no black eyes nor split heads required. Two boys started an argument over an interclub football game. It was about to become a gang war when Judge Henry invited them to use the boys' courtroom and have a real trial.

"The only shouting done was by the attorneys," said Mayor Lamm. "And that is to be expected."

When the trial was over the boys accepted the verdict calmly and shook hands. "Hey," said one of them afterwards, "they didn't say just who was wrong."

So every Sunday night the B. B. R. courtroom will open its doors. "The procedure will begin," says the judge, "with a 15 minute intermission of peace when the fighters can tell their stories to their attorneys. They then can decide on whether it will be a judge or jury trial.

Has Role on Air

Anita Louise, movie star currently appearing with Owen Davis Jr. in "Mr. and Mrs. North" at the Harris theater, will be heard from 4 to 4:30 p. m. (CST) today on W-G-N in a radio adaptation of Morrison Wood's play, "The Double Crosser."

Sweetheart Swing Bands on Spotlight Band Hour

A careful balance of sweet and swing orchestras is scheduled on W-G-N and Mutual's "Spotlight Bands" cavalcade this week. The bands of Charlie Barnet, Eddy Duchin, Tommy Tucker, Johnny Messner, and Benny Goodman will follow on successive nights starting tomorrow.

The program is aired from 9:15 to 9:30 p. m. every Monday thru Friday on W-G-N and 117 other Mutual outlets. On Saturdays "Spotlight Bands" presents a half-hour show beginning at 9:15 p. m. that features the dance band rolling up the largest retail sale of a phonograph recording, based on a coast-to-coast survey.

KAY CHASE BACK PENNING PAINTED DREAMS SCRIPTS

Other News and Views of Radio Headliners.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

News and views from the studios: Kay Chase is back writing Painted Dreams for W-G-N after a vacation of two months. Her first script since she has returned will be aired at 1:15 p. m. tomorrow. Heretofore, when vacationing Kay has taken her typewriter with her, writing on trains, planes, boats and buses. This time a substitute took her place. Kay also will be back in the rôle of Joyce Foster in the serial. Kay has written the show for a decade.

Friends and associates of Durward Kirby, Chicago NBC announcer, are congratulating him. Yesterday he received an H. P. Davis Announcer's Award for 1941. The late Harry P. Davis was a Pittsburgh radio pioneer. The award is made each year to an NBC announcer in each of four regions for excellence in announcing. Kirby received $300 in cash together with a medal and ring. Kirby, besides announcing various shows, is master of ceremonies of Club Matinée.

First Operetta Club.

A club formed in Brooklyn in May, 1940, by Clare Mason has been granted a charter in the Chicago Theater of the Air clubs. Altho it is officially chapter No. 38 it claims to have been the very first group to listen regularly to W-G-N's Saturday night operettas.

Arturo Toscanini is to make his first appearance on the air this season with the NBC Symphony orchestra at 8:30 p. m. next Saturday over the NBC Blue network. A special treatment of the "Blue Danube Waltz" will be featured.

Ginny Simms, who has just recently left the Kay Kyser College of Musical Knowledge, is carving out quite a career of her own. Besides her new Friday evening radio show she is making pictures for R-K-O. And next Thursday she will make a guest appearance with Rudy Vallee and John Barrymore.

Margery Mayer, who got her radio start singing on W-G-N and then went to the Hymns of All Churches program, has gone to New York and will be heard on the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air over WMAQ at 4 today.

Gunther for Swing.

John Gunther, foreign correspondent, probably will take over Raymond Gram Swing's program while Swing vacations, starting about Christmas. The substitution hinges on Gunther's being able to get back from Britain in time. Swing expects to be off the air three weeks.

The life story of Grant Wood, noted contemporary American painter, will be dramatized on the Art Institute's Great Artist series at 2:15 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. The Goodman Theater Players will dramatize the highlights of his life.

First Nighter series started its 12th year of presenting original plays on WBBM-CBS Friday night. Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne are the current stars. Don Ameche used this show as a springboard to Hollywood.

The Quiz Kids have just returned from a brain battle at the University of Michigan. They bested a quintet of professors 420 to 390. Joan Bishop, Jack Lucal, Richard Williams, Gerard Darrow, and Harve Fischman made the trip.

W-G-N TO COVER BIG LIVE STOCK SHOW THIS WEEK

Highlights of the International Live Stock exposition at the Chicago Stock Yards are being broadcast by W-G-N this week.

Lew La Mar and Jack Brickhouse will cover the many colorful phases of the exposition with ringside descriptions in the International Amphitheater, accounts of the hundreds of exhibits and booths on display, and interviews with agricultural authorities and owners of prize-winning animals.

One of the features of the series will be an evening broadcast of the horse show on Tuesday, from 8:45 to 9 p. m.

'RIO RITA' WILL BE PRESENTED NEXT ON THEATER OF AIR

The gay, romantic story of "Rio Rita" will be told in song and words on the Chicago Theater of the Air on W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m. next Saturday with Marion Claire, Thomas L. Thomas, and Attilio Baggiore as headliners.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will read a letter from Lord Kemsley, British publisher. This communication was in reply to Col. McCormick's letter to the Briton in which he declared he and many other Americans are willing to aid England in arms "if necessary to prevent your being conquered," but opposed a new American expeditionary force.

Miss Claire will sing the rôle of Rita. Betty Winkler, one of Chicago's leading dramatic stars, will take the speaking lines for the same character. Thomas is cast in the masculine lead of Capt. Jim Stewart and Bret Morrison will take his speaking part. Baggiore will sing the rôle of Roberto, Rio's brother.

Musical background will be supplied by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and the chorus directed by Robert Trendler. John Weigel will be narrator. William A. Bacher is the producer.

Others in the dramatic cast include: Marvin Mueller, Elia Braca, Willard Waterman, John Walsh, Bob Jellison, and Bloyde Wright.

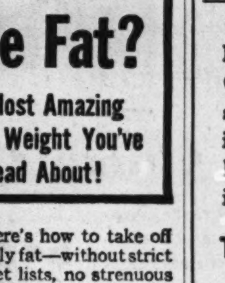
Everett Marshall, popular American baritone now appearing in "Blossom Time" at the Grand Opera house, will be the guest in the radio funfest, "An Hour with Elson and Anson," from 3 to 4 p. m. today, on W-G-N.



Everett Marshall.

Also appearing on the program will be the Cappy Barri Trio, harmonica wizards currently billed at the Blackhawk restaurant. Marshall has been featured in many W-G-N-Mutual programs in the past years.

Cappy Barri, virtuoso of the harmonica, and his two co-workers have appeared in the movies, "Mad About Music," "Pot o' Gold," and other films as well as in numerous vaudeville performances.

GRACE MOORE, THOMAS STAR IN 'TOSCA' ON W-G-N

Chicago Opera on MBS at 10 P.M. Tomorrow.

The Chicago Opera's production of Puccini's "La Tosca," starring Grace Moore and John Charles Thomas, will be broadcast exclusively by W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system from 10 to 10:45 p. m. tomorrow.

Miss Moore will be making her initial appearance on this season's series of Chicago Opera productions on W-G-N-Mutual. Thomas was heard last Monday in "Falstaff."

Miss Moore will sing the title rôle of Floria Tosca; Thomas will be heard as Scarpia.

The supporting cast includes Frederick Jagel, tenor, as Mario Cavaradossi; Vittorio Trevisan, baritone, as Sacristan; Giuseppe Gavadore, tenor, as Spoletta, and Richard Wentworth, basso, as Sciarrone, the gendarme. Carlo Perone will conduct the orchestra.

"La Tosca" provides a tense, exciting drama for Miss Moore and Thomas with a score that includes such arias as "Vissi d'Arte e d'Amour," "E Lucevan le Stelle," and "O Dolci Mani."

The radio production of the opera will be under the direction of Lou Jakobson. Robert Venables, W-G-N-Mutual announcer, in addition to his running commentary during the performance, will interview one of the members of the Chicago Opera personnel between acts.

Venables knows opera from arias to stage bolts. At the same theater from which he broadcasts each Monday he worked in positions ranging from call boy to assistant stage manager.

Venables' opera commentaries include many anecdotes about the stars performing in each production. Personal, intimate, and interesting they add to the listeners understanding and enjoyment of the world of opera. Venables is a friend of John Charles Thomas, Richard Bonelli, Charles Marshall, and many other famous singers.

Why Be Fat?
Here's the Most Amazing Way To Lose Weight You've Ever Read About!

Here's how to take off ugly fat—without strict diet lists, no strenuous exercises, no drugs. The easy Welch Way! And intelligent, cooperative people who faithfully followed Dr. Frederic Damrau's instructions lost an average of 7 pounds a month. Amazing results sworn to before a Notary Public. And listen how easy it is. Just mix ¾ glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass water, and drink before meals and at bedtime. Then this happens: First, you have less desire to eat sweet, fattening foods—thus reducing caloric intake. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime actually helps nature consume excess fat. Yet you needn't suffer a hungry moment. So start reducing the Welch Way today.
Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16. She recommends the easy Welch way to reduce.

TECH STUDENTS TO PLAY RADIO HIDE AND SEEK

Hunt Secret Transmitter in Test Sunday.

In an unnamed spot in or about Chicago there is going to be some strange goings-on next Sunday morning—stealthy footsteps on the roof, maybe, face peering in the window, mysterious figure lurking behind the tree across the street, somebody shinnying up the drain pipe.

But let the old blunderbuss be! It's all in fun—just an experiment by the radio hams of Illinois Institute of Technology in the interest, more or less, of national defense.

From a secret hiding place which only he knows about, Anton Seda, senior mechanical engineering student and president of the institute's Amateur Radio club, will begin transmitting code signals, just like a fifth columnist, except that the Federal Communications commission knows all about it and has told the boys it's all right, to go ahead.

Students to Hunt Station.

The others of the radio fraternity have to track down Seda's transmitter like FBI men or army intelligence, the only difference being that the amateur sleuths will be using, in most cases, receivers and direction finding equipment of their own design and construction.

This is how the experiment is to be carried out:

At 9 o'clock, on the allotted frequency, 1750 kilocycles, Seda will begin signalling R in code—dot-dash-dot. R will be the identifying signal, which he will send for 15 minutes, giving the call letters of Armour college's short wave station W9WY, at the beginning and end of the 15 minute period. Transmission will be entirely by CW [continuous wave], all of the short wave amateurs operating by telegraphic code.

Sleuths to Meet at Brookfield.

After 15 minutes, better to simulate an illegally operated transmitter, the hidden station will not be heard on prearranged schedule. From 9:15 to 12:30 o'clock, Seda will "talk" from time to time with other stations, still operating on the assigned frequency, of course, and signing the proper call letters. But his brother hams in search of the station will be on their own.

The searching parties, divided into teams according to the number of receivers available, all will be parked by 9 o'clock on the lot at the zoölogical gardens in Brookfield, waiting for the first signal.

Since the problem is one of locating and running down an illegal transmitter, their receivers and direction finding equipment, commercial or homemade, will be of the mobile type, adapted to use in a car. Receivers will be fitted either with uni- or bi-directional loop antenna.

How the Hunt Starts.

During the first 15 minute period of transmission, a team, using a loop antenna, will be able to establish the exact geographical direction of the hidden transmitter. Having determined the direction in degrees of the compass, the map man will strike a line on his chart from the listening point in the degree-direction obtained from the first listening.

At the signing off signal the teams will disperse, each taking a direction perpendicular or at a wide angle to the first line of location drawn on the map, and traveling some five or six miles, depending upon the efficiency of its equipment.

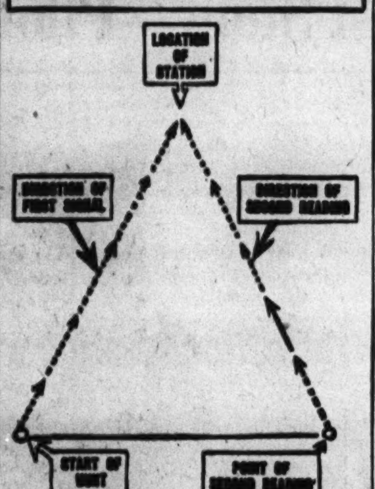
Now the searchers, no longer having a timetable of transmission periods, must wait for the next signal. From the second position, when the signal comes, another degree-direction line will be taken. The point of intersection of the two lines on the map will reveal to the sleuths the approximate location of Seda's hide-out.

Final Chance for Laggards.

To give the laggards a final chance, the station again will transmit continuously from 12:30 to 1:30 o'clock.

Amateur short wave operators have an intercollegiate organization, Rho Epsilon fraternity. The Armour hams are Epsilon chapter. Members assisting President Seda with today's experiment are Jorma Leskinen, Curtis Hepperle, Ernest Schrot, and Rudolph Oras, all studying electrical engineering.

Locating a Transmitter



In locating a transmitter you first draw a line across your map indicating the compass direction from which the signal was received. Then move several miles at a great angle. Now draw a line indicating the compass direction from the new point. The transmitter will be at the intersection of the two lines.

TEMPLE TO GIVE 13TH EDUCATION DINNER TONIGHT

Benefit for Beth Israel Youth Groups.

Mrs. William B. Levy.

More than 400 reservations already have been received for the 13th annual education dinner sponsored by Temple Beth Israel which will be held this evening in the Red Lacquer room of the Palmer House. Dr. Julius Mark of Nashville, Tenn., will be guest speaker.

Proceeds are used to maintain the Sunday school building and teaching staff for 300 Jewish children. In addition, the temple coöperates with the Boy and Girl Scout troops and other youth groups by providing rooms for their activities.

The temple, founded in 1917 at 4850 Bernard street, is the oldest Jewish organization in Albany Park. Rabbi S. Felix Mendelsohn has been the spiritual leader for 22 years. Oscar Hollander, general chairman of the dinner, and Mrs. William B. Levy, dinner chairman for the Sisterhood, are being assisted by Reuben Berman, president of the congregation; Mrs. Carl Apple, Sisterhood president; Eugene Kart, Men's club president, and Martin Santa, president of Temple Center, the young people's group.

Albany Park district of Hadassah will hold its Palestine supplies shower at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday in Eugene Field park fieldhouse, 5100 North Ridgeway avenue.

Members of the Community Cultural center of Logan Square are preparing for their annual Mardi gras next Sunday in the community house at 3117 Logan Square boulevard.

Chicago Mothers of Young Judea will sponsor their annual Babylonian minstrel show at 8 o'clock this evening in the Roosevelt High school

IT'S EAST LYNNE IN SERIOUS VEIN FOR RIVERSIDE

Amateurs to Show Straight Drama.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

"Tomorrow night—'East Lynne!'"

That was the announcement in the old days of répertoire that assured a packed house. With notice from the Riverside Little theater that the time tried drama will be presented four nights this week in the Riverside Town hall, starting Wednesday, older residents of the suburb have made one stipulation. The lines must be given as Mrs. Henry Wood wrote them in 1861 and as oncoming generations enjoyed them until the world became supersophisticated.

If there was hokum in some of the old plays, then grandpa and grandma are willing to let analytical youngsters in the audience sense it, but they ban any impertinence in interpreting the scenes with tongue in cheek. If theatergoers of today can sit unmoved when Lady Isabel's singing of "You'll Remember Me" is a cue for the fall of the curtain at the end of the first act then the speed age and gadgets and wisecracks have done their worst toward what was once accepted as most satisfying entertainment.

Check Against Past.

Incidentally, grandpa and grandma wish to check up on themselves and see how they now react to what once impressed them as perfect in the portrayal of human emotions.

Maybe, in the cycle of change, what "East Lynne" had on the ball again is due for appreciation. Before she turned it into a play, Mrs. Wood's novel was one of the most popular of the century. Critics said the author had great simplicity of style, a lively interest in traits of character, and skill in keeping up suspense, as well as abundant circumstantiality. Her criticism of life was not considered broad or profound, "though it was generally for moral edification."

Responsibility for reviving "East Lynne," a play that perhaps suffered as much from repetition as from the onslaughts of cynicism, has been taken seriously by Ramsey Burch, director; Claire Powell, managing director, and Anthony Di Torrice, business manager of the Riverside Little theater.

Members of Cast.

Robert Sedlak will play Sir Francis Levison, a blasé man of fashion who commits murder for which an innocent man, Richard Hare [William Gardiner], is suspected and arrested. Anthony Di Torrice will be Archibald Carlyle, a rising young attorney retained by Hare as counsel.

Lady Isabel, whom Carlyle has just married, will be portrayed by Lorraine Huml. To Ann Stark has been given the rôle of Barbara Hare, who arranges interviews between Carlyle and her brother, Richard, causing Lady Isabel to become jealous and finally consent to elopement with Levison.

At this juncture, let us pause to drop in at one of the Little theater rehearsals to discover what sort of verbiage the villain employed in influencing Lady Isabel to take such a rash step. Of course, there is no certainty that dialog of the day was used by an author who may have made her characters talk as she wished or as she felt her audience might prefer. Perhaps her people moved in a strata of society where stilted phrases crept into all conversation. Listen—

Lines from Play.

Levison: "Be avenged on the false hound. He never was worthy of your love. Leave your home of misery and come to one of happiness. Come, let me prove his perfidy to you."

Lady Isabel: "Only prove this and I will quit this house forever."

"With me, Isabel?"

"Ay, with you. I care not who shall

LATIN STUDENTS TO BE CAESARS FOR A NIGHT AT YORK HIGH SCHOOL

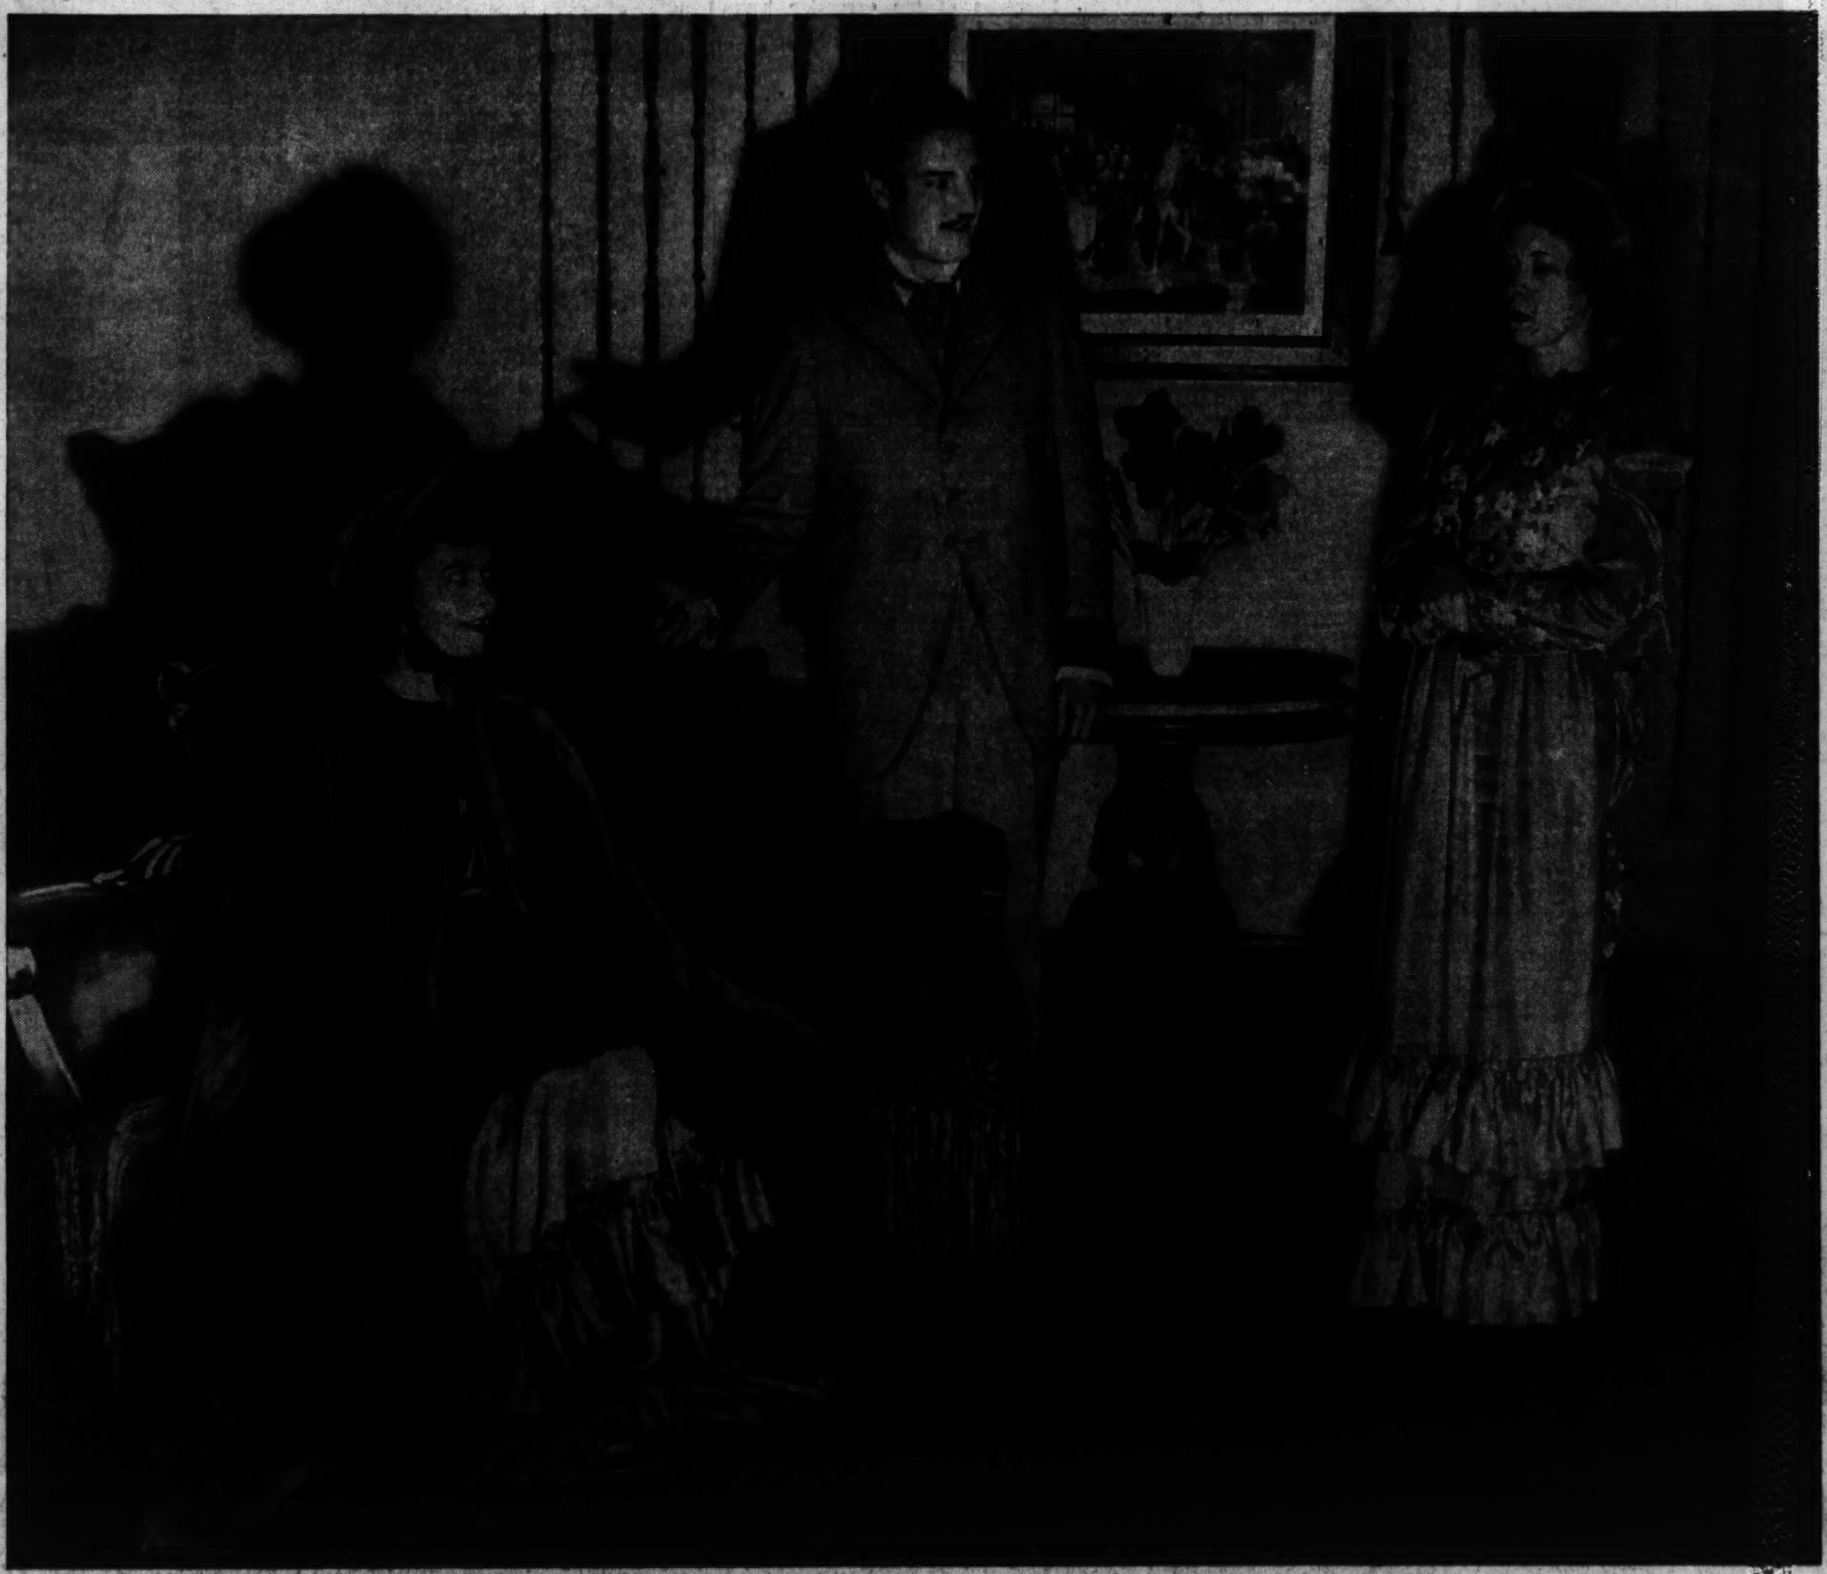
In an atmosphere reminiscent of the Caesars, the Latin department of York Community High school on Wednesday night will hold its 20th annual Roman banquet. Roast pig substituting for wild boar will be brought in by freshman boys taking the part of slaves. An invocation to Jupiter by the pater familias, Aldo Luchetta, a religious procession, barbarian tumblers, and a classic Greek dance will be included on the program.

Chairmen of the committees in charge are Jack Hackert, program; La Vergne Schroeder, food; Roger Frost, posters; Alice Cook, publicity; Marilyn Marlowe, favors; Barbara Johnston, costumes; Eleanor Wuerz tickets; Norris Sample, slaves; Samuel Schmitt, scrolls; Mary Harris, reception, and John Bowden, decorations.

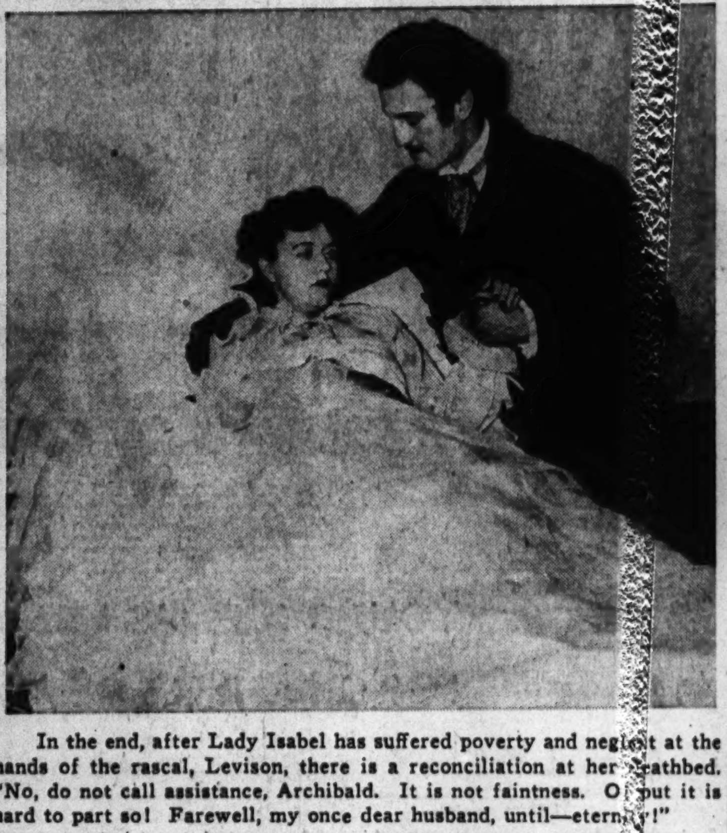
This year's white gowned vestal virgins will be Pat Coyne, Joan Crosley Jean Wuerz, Barbara Wilcox, Marian Fredrickson, Mary Wengler, Shirley Wengler, Margaret Arent, and Marjorie Thielke. Under the guidance of Miss Lois Ashton, head of York's Latin department, costumes and settings were made as authentic as possible.

'East Lynne' Back on the Boards at Riverside Little Theatre



"This is my wife—the Lady Isabel. Isabel, this is my sister, Cornelia." Introductions that took place at "East Lynne" will be repeated this week at the Riverside town hall when the Riverside Little theater presents a drama that years ago was played over and over on every stage in America. No attempt will be made to streamline the dialog and situations that so appealed to those who watched, breathlessly, the story as it was unfolded beyond the kerosene footlights. Lady Isabel (Lorraine Huml) is seated at left. Archibald Carlyle is Anthony Di Torrice. Miss Corney, a "quaint spinster sister," is portrayed by Helen Brassee.

Sir Francis Levison (Robert Sedlak), at extreme left, causes Lady Isabel to become jealous of Barbara Hare, and when her husband befriends Barbara's brother Richard (William Gardiner) she is victimized by the villain's cunning. An elopment follows, leaving Carlyle to obtain a divorce and marry Barbara who, in the beginning, was merely a client of Lawyer Carlyle seeking to save her brother from being convicted of a murder which Levison himself committed.



In the end, after Lady Isabel has suffered poverty and neglect at the hands of the rascal, Levison, there is a reconciliation at her deathbed. "No, do not call assistance, Archibald. It is not faintness. Oh, but it is hard to part so! Farewell, my once dear husband, until—eternity!"

(Diagram on page 9.)

In an unnamed spot in or about Chicago there is going to be some strange goings-on next Sunday morning—stealthy footsteps on the roof, maybe, face peering in the window, mysterious figure lurking behind the tree across the street, somebody shinnying up the drain pipe.

But let the old blunderbuss be! It's all in fun—just an experiment by the radio hams of Illinois Institute of Technology in the interest, more or less, of national defense.

From a secret hiding place which only he knows about, Anton Seda, senior mechanical engineering student and president of the institute's Amateur Radio club, will begin transmitting code signals, just like a fifth columnist, except that the Federal Communications commission knows all about it and has told the boys it's all right, to go ahead.

Students to Hunt Station.

The others of the radio fraternity have to track down Seda's transmitter like FBI men or army intelligence, the only difference being that the amateur sleuths will be using, in most cases, receivers and direction finding equipment of their own design and construction.

This is how the experiment is to be carried out:

At 9 o'clock, on the allotted frequency, 1750 kilocycles, Seda will begin signalling R in code—dot-dash-dot. R will be the identifying signal, which he will send for 15 minutes, giving the call letters of Armour college's short wave station W9WY, at the beginning and end of the 15 minute period. Transmission will be entirely by CW [continuous wave], all of the short wave amateurs operating by telegraphic code.

Sleuths to Meet at Brookfield.

After 15 minutes, better to simulate an illegally operated transmitter, the hidden station will not be heard on prearranged schedule. From 9:15 to 12:30 o'clock, Seda will "talk" from time to time with other stations, still operating on the assigned frequency, of course, and signing the proper call letters. But his brother hams in search of the station will be on their own.

The searching parties, divided into teams according to the number of receivers available, all will be parked by 9 o'clock on the lot at the zoölogical gardens in Brookfield, waiting for the first signal.

Since the problem is one of locating and running down an illegal transmitter, their receivers and direction finding equipment, commercial or homemade, will be of the mobile type, adapted to use in a car. Receivers will be fitted either with uni- or bi-directional loop antenna.

How the Hunt Starts.

During the first 15 minute period of transmission, a team, using a loop antenna, will be able to establish the exact geographical direction of the hidden transmitter. Having determined the direction in degrees of the compass, the map man will strike a line on his chart from the listening point in the degree-direction obtained from the first listening.

At the signing off signal the teams will disperse, each taking a direction perpendicular or at a wide angle to the first line of location drawn on the map, and traveling some five or six miles, depending upon the efficiency of its equipment.

Now the searchers, no longer having a timetable of transmission periods, must wait for the next signal. From the second position, when the signal comes, another degree-direction line will be taken. The point of intersection of the two lines on the map will reveal to the sleuths the approximate location of Seda's hideout.

Final Chance for Laggards.

To give the laggards a final chance, the station again will transmit continuously from 12:30 to 1:30 o'clock, that is it will if some of the intelligence hams haven't by that time rooted out the ham fifth columnist and put his transmitter out of business.

Amateur short wave operators have an intercollegiate organization, Rho Epsilon fraternity. The Armour hams are Epsilon chapter. Members assisting President Seda with today's experiment are Jorma Leskinen, Curtis Hepperle, Ernest Schrot, and Rudolph Oras, all studying electrical engineering.

PLAN MAYWOOD JEWISH CENTER ANNUAL DANCE

Members of the program committee are Harry Schenken, Judge David B. Trott, and Mrs. Louise A. Levine. Ticket chairmen are Mrs. George Koven and Mrs. Maurice Stone. Goodfellowship ads are in charge of Mrs. Louis Gershkowitz and Mrs. Blanche Berevitsky.

Other committee chairmen are Louis Jaffie, Max Thaler, Mrs. Jennie Galperin, Sara Grinpas, Syd Kramer, and William Chulock.

La Grange Art League Exhibit Will End Today

The La Grange Art league today will close its two day exhibit in the American Legion rooms of the La Grange town hall. Tea will be served this afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. The annual exhibit is open to visitors. Mrs. C. W. Glessner is president of the league.

PLAN PROPOSED FOR RECLAIMING 50 BLOCK AREA

Would Restore West Side Section.

Exactly how depressed areas on the west side could be rehabilitated under the new neighborhood redevelopment corporation law was set forth by the Chicago plan commission last week thru its executive director, T. T. McCrosky.

The law, sponsored by the Chicago building congress, gives private capital the authority, under municipal control to acquire sites and to restore property and tax values by replacing rundown buildings with modern ones surrounded by ample recreational space and served by convenient shops. This law's passage was obtained largely thru efforts of a committee headed by J. Soule Warterfield, vice president of the congress and an authority on the reclamation of slum regions.

McCrosky made it clear that the plan commission's suggestions are offered not as a working plan, but purely as an illustration of how the law's benefits can be applied to specific areas if the necessary effort is put forth.

How Plan Operates.

Under the law, a redevelopment corporation, under the supervision of a redevelopment commission appointed by the mayor, can acquire property in rundown areas under certificates of convenience and necessity, and replace the buildings with modern structures that conform to the building ordinance and meet the approval of the plan commission.

To guard against unreasonable hold-outs, the law empowers the corporation to institute condemnation proceedings if necessary, after it has obtained option or title to 60 per cent of the land in a given area.

The western area included in the commission's suggested plan is bounded on the north by Congress street, on the east by Desplaines street, on the south by Roosevelt road and on the west by Racine avenue. Within the area of approximately one half square mile are about 50 small blocks.

It Includes 226 Acres.

It is one of three areas selected by the plan commission to show the variety of types of project possible under the law. One of the other two is on the south side and the other is on the north side.

One of the first steps after the land is acquired would be the demolition of most of the buildings in the area, which would include all but the religious, educational, hospital and similar institutions, and a few buildings too substantial as yet to sacrifice.

A few of the secondary streets would be partially closed off, parts of them being turned into residential parking space. At least 10 per cent of the area would be given over to recreational use. Portions of such streets as Aberdeen, Carpenter, Morgan, Peoria, and Vernon Park would be converted into play space.

Shopping areas would be concentrated about such transfer points as Halsted-Harrrison-Blue Island, Harrison-Racine, Roosevelt-Blue Island, and Halsted-Roosevelt. Ample parking space would be provided at these points.

The residential buildings recommended are four-story apartments, garden apartments and row houses, the latter type having their own heating units and front and back yards. The neighborhood would be suitable for middle income families with children, McCrosky said.

"What is needed is large-scale neighborhood replanning and complete rebuilding for families in the lower middle income group."

Fire Hazards Now.

Among the faults existing in the area now he enumerated these: Dwellings fronting on alleys, inadequate thru arteries for traffic, hazardous intersections, inadequate play space, close-packed buildings, fire hazards, and drab montony. All of these would be overcome in the suggested plan, he declared.

On the west side, if the plan is followed, the buildings would occupy 21 per cent of the land space. There would be 17.8 dwelling units per acre, far less than now. There would be about 3.75 rooms per dwelling unit, and the rental charged would be about $18.25 per room per month, or about $68.50 per average dwelling unit. The assessed valuation would be about 25 per cent of the dwelling unit cost of $4,500, which would mean a great deal more tax revenue than the area is now returning.

McCrosky offered this comparison of statistics for the proposed development areas as they are today:

	West.	South.	North.
Area in acres	226	225	92
Population	11,313	10,721	7,483
Residential structures	1,274	732	445
Built before 1885	507	172	164
Built before 1895	1,127	647	422
Dwelling units	3,839	3,232	2,034
Asses. Val. per Res.str.	$1,200	$1,350	$1,350
Range of front ft. val.	$30 to $150	$20 to $110	$165 to $350

He pointed out that all but 11.5 per cent of the west side development area's 1,127 buildings are more than 45 years old. Of the 3,839 dwelling units [which indicates an average of about three families per building], 2,190 are in what are regarded as substandard structures of which 773 are either unfit for use or need major repairs, McCrosky reported.

CICERO MUSTERS ADULTS, YOUTHS IN SAFETY DRIVE

Clubs, Schools, Homes Share in Effort.

"Cicero to Mobilize for Safety" has been chosen as the slogan this year for Cicero Safety week, recently proclaimed by President George Stedronsky for the week starting today.

The Safety council hopes to enlist every person in the area in the drive to make Cicero safety minded.

Children and adults may volunteer in the campaign, which will utilize safety movies, poster and essay contests, and the coöperation of bicycle clubs and safety patrols.

Churches, clubs, and social service organizations will discuss safety at their meetings and safety material will be sent to the homes of school children. Industrial workers will be invited to coöperate in reducing the town's accident rate.

Plan Radio Program.

Radio station WHFC will present several programs dealing with phases of safety. Organizations sponsoring special safety programs may obtain speakers thru Supt. W. P. MacLean of Morton High school.

Some particular phase of safety will be stressed each day of Safety week. Today will be Safety Sunday and succeeding days will stress safe driving, home safety, industrial safety, safe walking, school safety, and community safety.

Jerry J. Justin is chairman of Safety week and the administrative committee. Mrs. Frank J. Christenson is secretary.

Committee Chairmen Listed.

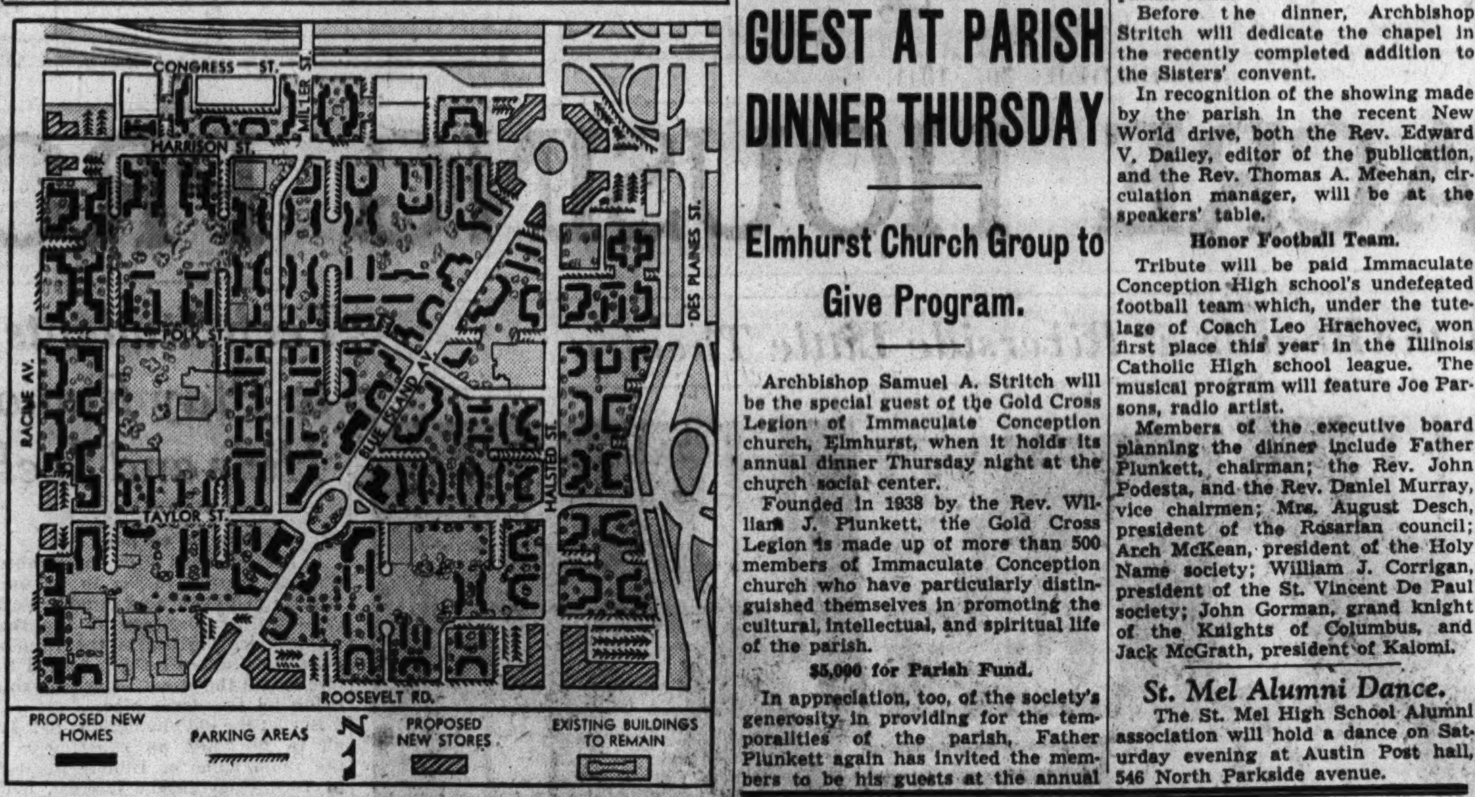
Committee chairmen are W. P. MacLean, speakers' bureau; Edward Turek, veterans' organizations; George Schwebel, schools; James Gable, Protestant churches; John F. Brennan, Catholic churches; Mrs. Frank J. Christenson, home civic clubs; Frank Simpach Jr., exhibits; J. D. Berman, industrial; Police Chief Martin Wojciechowski, law enforcement; Fire Chief George Knol, fire prevention; Miss Sara Gibson, Clyde V. Winkler, George H. Lyle, and Miss Grace Gaarder, publicity.

Other members of the administrative committee are Thomas W. Chisholm, the Rev. John B. Ferring, F. J. Small, Alton R. Smith, Paul R. Fast, W. S. Forrest, I. C. Kurth, Henry W. Angsten, and Mrs. John C. Biemeck.

Christmas Cheer Party.

St. Pius alumnae will hold their annual Christmas cheer and party Tuesday evening in the Midwest Athletic club, 6 North Hamlin avenue, for the benefit of the Blessed Virgin sisters of St. Pius convent.

West Side Reclamation Plan



This map embodies the Chicago plan commission's suggestions for redevelopment of 226 acres on the near west side, an area in which land and building values have declined steadily of late years, as taxes fell off and municipal maintenance costs mounted. The plan contemplates that private interests under city guidance would rebuild the tract with homes attractive to middle income families. (Story on page 1.)

FORMER DISTRICT HEAD TO ADDRESS OPTIMIST CLUB

"What it Means to be an Optimist in this Day and Age" will be told by Albert H. Olson, former district governor of the Chicago Optimist club, at a meeting of the Austin Optimist club Tuesday noon in the Austin YMCA. The Austin and Oak Park Optimist clubs will join Optimist clubs all over the United States and Canada in the celebration of Optimist week from Dec. 1 to 7.

ARCHBISHOP TO BE GUEST AT PARISH DINNER THURSDAY

Elmhurst Church Group to Give Program.

Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch will be the special guest of the Gold Cross Legion of Immaculate Conception church, Elmhurst, when it holds its annual dinner Thursday night at the church social center.

Founded in 1938 by the Rev. William J. Plunkett, the Gold Cross Legion is made up of more than 500 members of Immaculate Conception church who have particularly distinguished themselves in promoting the cultural, intellectual, and spiritual life of the parish.

$5,000 for Parish Fund.

In appreciation, too, of the society's generosity in providing for the temporalities of the parish, Father Plunkett again has invited the members to be his guests at the annual dinner. This will mark the fourth year the society has presented a check for more than $5,000 for the general parish fund.

Before the dinner, Archbishop Stritch will dedicate the chapel in the recently completed addition to the Sisters' convent.

In recognition of the showing made by the parish in the recent New World drive, both the Rev. Edward V. Dailey, editor of the publication, and the Rev. Thomas A. Meehan, circulation manager, will be at the speakers' table.

Honor Football Team.

Tribute will be paid Immaculate Conception High school's undefeated football team which, under the tutelage of Coach Leo Hrachovec, won first place this year in the Illinois Catholic High school league. The musical program will feature Joe Parsons, radio artist.

Members of the executive board planning the dinner include Father Plunkett, chairman; the Rev. John Podesta, and the Rev. Daniel Murray, vice chairmen; Mrs. August Desch, president of the Rosarian council; Arch McKean, president of the Holy Name society; William J. Corrigan, president of the St. Vincent De Paul society; John Gorman, grand knight of the Knights of Columbus, and Jack McGrath, president of Kalomi.

ALTAR BOY SETS RECORD: SERVES FOR 27 YEARS!

Hopes Son Takes His Place Some Day.

BY MILDRED WILDS.

Maurice Ballestro, 5909 West Lake street, has two claims to fame. He knew Bob Burns before Burns concocted his bazooka. Second, he has been an altar boy for 27 years.

Maurice Ballestro, Mrs. Ballestro, and Donald.

Mr. Ballestro works at the credit desk of the household ware department in a loop department store. Hardly anybody there knows he is an acolyte, with what, he says, is the longest service record in the Chicago area. He's at church at 7:30 o'clock Sunday mornings, at 11 o'clock and again for 4 o'clock vespers.

His trek up the church aisle, if multiplied by Sundays, would take him around the world. The matches he has used to light the altar candles, if laid end to end, he says, would span Brooklyn bridge.

Eyes Quaking Bridegrooms.

There has been no interruption in Mr. Ballestro's career as the bearer of the crucifer, the assistant at the communion table and as the servant of the rector at the mass. From Trinity Episcopal in Van Buren, Ark., he came to Chicago to live and became acolyte at St. Barnabas, 4241 Washington boulevard.

From his 27 years presiding with the pastor at weddings he has made two observations. All bridegrooms shake when they recite their wedding vows including Mr. Ballestro and 90 per cent can't find their voices.

His acolyte career started as naturally as roses in June. All the Ballestro family went to church in Van Buren. Mother and sister sang in the choir. Father worked on the railroad but came to church when he could. Mr. Ballestro was 9 years old when he assumed the dignity of altar boy and led the choir into the church. Never has any altar item including the collection plate rolled out of a Ballestro hand.

He recalls that not a ripple disturbed the even tenor of church life in Van Buren. Not even when Choir Singer Bob Burns built a bazooka from a couple of gas pipes, funnel and wire down at John Haymen's plumbing store and eventually joined the vaudeville and took to the road.

Altar Boy's Lot Is Tough.

Mr. Ballestro says he continued on as an altar boy because he knows how hard the job is on boys. It isn't the weight of the altar appointments that the boy must carry. It isn't the time of the service in the stinging dawn of a winter Sunday morning. Yet being an altar boy is painful.

If the altar boy wears a halo, all his friends who know his churchly secret attempt to knock it off. They usually muss up his eyes or put a bump on his head.

Rears Son as Altar Boy.

On the brighter side of the altar boy's life are the choir camps for boys at Cedar Lake, Ind., where Mr. Ballestro has spent many a happy vacation. There also has been his service since 1924 at St. Barnabas where the Rev. Walter Pond has been pastor.

There is also the knowledge that in eight years he will have a helper, a new altar boy. He is Donald Ballestro who isn't an acolyte now because he is only 8 months old.

The story of little Donald is dependent on St. Barnabas church. It was there that his daddy met his mother, once Hazel Bell Jewell, Sunday school teacher.

SCHOOLS TO LIST 5,000 GIRLS WHO LIKE TO DANCE

They'll Be Partners for Men in Training.

The board of education is going to help find dancing partners for United States soldiers and sailors in training in various Chicago area encampments. Since early summer Miss Ernestine Badt, director of social centers and supervisor of a soldiers and sailors committee, has been working on the plan.

By Jan. 1 Miss Badt expects to have files in all sections of the city listing the names of some 5,000 girls who will dance with soldiers and sailors and whose parents have given consent. Within three days after requests are received from churches, YMCA's and fraternal groups who wish to entertain the men, hundreds of girls will be provided thru Miss Badt's committee.

Parents Must Consent.

Regulations have been set up by Miss Badt in order to insure the new program success. "We have been three years working on social mixers thru high school centers," says Miss Badt, "and nothing has gone wrong yet."

No girl can register as a dancing partner for soldiers and sailors unless she has a certificate of permission signed by her mother, father and a witness. The parents must also consent to provide for escorting the girls to and from the parties. "Service men will not be permitted to escort the girls home," says Miss Badt, "and no girl may attend the parties unless her name is on file with the committee."

Girls must be at least seniors in high school and must be no younger than 18 years. "The boys don't want them any younger," says Miss Badt, "and army and navy officials also prefer the older girls."

Approved by Service.

The approval of the plan has been received from a score of army and navy officials. The committee was supplied with the list of all army morale officers early in the summer by Col. N. B. Wood.

The program for registering dancing partners was launched by Miss Badt after numerous requests for girls to dance with the young navy cadets at the Great Lake Training school when they were treated to parties. "These boys are not all Chicagoans," explains Miss Badt, "and some have no opportunity even to talk to a girl. They are naturally eager for dancing partners. Several times I was expected to produce 200 girls at a few minutes notice."

The board of education will only do the inviting of the dancing partners from its file of names. The parties will be arranged by organizations interested in the welfare and morale of the men in training, and organizations will plan a mixer program with grand marches, counter marches and "robber" dances.

Chaperons Are Listed.

Chaperons in charge of the various social centers' lists of dancing partners, and their schools are Edith S. Garriott, Amundsen; Rose Ramsey, Austin; Ethel M. Bourke, Bowen; Grace P. Diaz, Crane; Mary J. Morgan, Farragut; Elizabeth I. Balhouse, Fenger; Anita D. Maloy, Hyde Park; Elizabeth Lynskey, Kelly.

Ingeborg Storvick, Kelvyn Park; Margaret Collins and Mary A. Srill, Lane Technical; Janet Freckleton, Lindblom; Minnie Lomax, Medill; Elizabeth Turner, Phillips; Agnes M. Polka, Steinmetz; Henrietta K. Hintz, Taft; Katherine Birmingham, Tilden; Teresa Reid, Waller, and Viola I. Schnake, Wells.

TWO WAY POLICE RADIO NOW LINKS 55 DEPARTMENTS

Speeds Manhunts, Rushes Aid to Accidents.

Most of the police departments in the Chicago area are included in a big two-way radio network that has been found invaluable in the catching of criminals.

No less than 55 state, county, city and suburban departments belong to the network, and more are coming in as local governments find the money to purchase the equipment. Hundreds of squad cars now carry the two-way radio telephones thru which their crews can receive orders or communicate vital information direct to headquarters.

There is no clearing house for this network that could be regarded as a central office, but police officials point out that this is not necessary. Should a swiftly moving manhunt develop, the squads in the field would probably be directed from the police transmitter nearest the scene, and the headquarters might shift as the chase progresses.

Help Smaller Departments.

Some of the larger police departments serve their smaller neighbors in radio facilities. The three Cook county stations, for example, have made their radio transmitters available to nearby suburbs too small to afford their own broadcasting stations.

Altho most of the police radio systems are on different wave lengths, arrangements have been made so that the systems can be interlocked for the quick transmission of orders and information.

To illustrate, county police officials told of a recent instance in which, at the request of an out-of-towner that they intercept a man vacation-bound in northern Wisconsin, their message was relayed to Appleton, Wis., entirely thru police radios, in something less than three minutes.

Thru use of the interlocking network, the Cook and Lake county authorities in the last few months have on more than one occasion intercepted fugitives from the Milwaukee police.

Speed Up Routine Work.

Police emphasize, however, that two-way radio is useful not only for unusual occasions such as a manhunt, but also for speeding the routine work of any law enforcing department.

In the case of automobile accidents, for instance, time is saved thru the ability of headquarters to communicate directly with accident squads in the field. Thru two-way radio, the nearest squad can be sent to an accident scene, while other squads continue their regular work.

The county highway police estimate they average four minutes in reaching an accident scene after they receive the first call.

Give Fill-in Service.

Radio also helps the county highway department give fill-in protection for suburbs with one or two man police forces. After the local stations are closed, appeals to police are relayed directly to the county highway station, whence the nearest squad is sent to investigate.

In Cook county there are 14 suburbs without regular police protection. There are 21 others with only one of two policemen each.

Police radio in the Chicago area was pioneered by THE TRIBUNE and radio station W-G-N. Early in 1929 THE TRIBUNE installed radio receivers in 40 squad cars, and station W-G-N interrupted its regular programs to broadcast police messages. On the strength of this successful experiment the city voted the same year to install its own transmitter and equip its police automobiles with receivers.

'ANTI-SABOTAGE' IS FORUM TOPIC TUESDAY EVENING

This will be the seventh and final forum in a series on defense production problems which the commission is presenting in coöperation with the Illinois Institute of Technology under the United States Office of Education.

This diagram shows how short wave police radio networks of Chicagoland are linked with the four stations maintained by the Cook county highway police. The call letters indicate the suburb in question has its own wave length and transmitter and receiving system. The suburbs designated "mobile" have squad cars tuned to the wave length of the county highway station with which the black line links them. The smaller diagram shows how regular telephone trunk lines extend the interlocking network over an even larger area.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 1.

Remove stone bird baths to a shed to prevent cracking during cold weather. All statuary should be removed indoors. Attach a humidifier to radiators to give some humidity in the room where plants are standing. Most rooms are excessively dry and the plants suffer accordingly.

Syringe plants by placing in the tub and forcing water from the hose into all parts of stems and leaves to remove dust and insects. Mealy bugs and red spiders, two insidious pests that are often permitted to accumulate on plants, may be kept under control if syringing is consistently practiced.

Small cacti and other succulents planted in drainageless containers should be watered carefully altho the soil is usually too high in them to hold water. Keep cacti in a south window for best results.

Tuesday, Dec. 2.

Most flowering house plants are grown in comparatively small pots and as a result they become rootbound and soon exhaust the food elements. Applications of liquid food at intervals of about three weeks will keep the plants in good health. A lack of food is indicated by weak stems, small leaves, few flowers or scattered fruits.

Plants grown for their ornamental foliage require considerable amounts of nitrogenous food, altho a complete plant flood is preferable unless one has some knowledge of the particular soil used. Give flowering plants plenty of water or they wilt quickly.

If purchased from the florist it must be remembered that the plants have developed in the greenhouse where the atmospheric conditions are properly maintained. Changing to room conditions effects the plants, but watering can be taken care of in an intelligent manner. Examine the soil each morning and keep it moist.

Wednesday, Dec. 3.

Poinsettias dry out quickly, and the best way to water them is to place the pots in a basin of water, allowing it to stand until the soil is wet thru. Avoid sudden changes of temperature or the leaves will turn yellow and fall.

Some plants do best in a cool temperature, such as the primroses and cyclamen, but they require several sunny hours each day. Examine pot bulbs, such as tulips, narcissi, and hyacinth, and if thoroly rooted bring into heat where they will flower quickly.

Amaryllis bulbs can be planted now. If the bulbs are in pots remove some of the top soil and replace with fresh, rich soil. Water well and not again for some time, for the flower stalk appears before the leaves and little water is needed. These bulbs will flower in hyacinth glasses without soil, but at best the method is utilized as a novelty.

Thursday, Dec. 4.

Protect hardy chrysanthemums during winter. Too much covering is more often responsible for injury than anything else. Often too much is applied during a mild winter which smothers the plants but no one can, with certainty, anticipate winter conditions. Do not apply the covering material too soon—wait until the ground freezes, first cutting back the tops to within 7 or 8 inches of the ground; the stubs serve to hold the material in place.

First apply a thin covering, gradually applying more and more until it may be several inches deep. Material to use may consist of evergreen branches, coarse hay, or other litter that does not pack down. Leaves are excellent when used properly; cornstalks scattered around the plants and then a covering of leaves, held up by the stalks, do very well. Do not uncover too soon in spring.

Friday, Dec. 5.

Start a calla lily indoors. They make fine plants and are easily grown. When well started, these plants require feeding at frequent intervals. Cover the bulbs in outdoor beds after the ground is frozen. This also applies to the perennial borders.

Some perennials, such as the foxglove, Canterbury bell, pinks, Shasta daisies, coreopsis, and irises need only a bit of cover, or just enough to keep the frost in the ground and prevent heaving during spring thaws and subsequent injury.

Growing in their natural habitat, most plants have only leaves to cover them, but these fall gradually, lightly, and do not smother. Leaves can be obtained from oak forests and they do not pack, become soft and decay like those from softwoods.

Saturday, Dec. 6.

Naturalize some of the minor bulbous plants before the season is too advanced. These include the intensely blue muscari or grape hyacinth and the unusual feathered hyacinth; glory-of-the-snow or Chionodoxa with its gayly blue-white streaked flowers; white, Siberian Squills; the Guinea henflower or Fritillaria Meleagris.

Well drained pockets of soil in the rock garden are excellent for some of the small bulbs and tulip species, such as T. chrysantha, Clusiana, Eichleri, Kaufmanniana, and others. Protect during winter.

Sow hardy annuals now if the ground is in suitable condition, for they will start early in spring and flower much sooner than those sown in spring. They include poppies, California poppies, alyssum, cosmos, portulaca, zinnia, snapdragon, gaillardia, kochia, calliopsis, balsam, four-o'clock, Japanese hop, and others. Sow thinly by mixing the finer seed with sand.

Prepared in co-operation with Garfield park conservatory.

THIS SIX ROOM CITY HOUSE HAS 5 FLOOR LEVELS

Home Is Designed in the English Tradition.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[This is the first of two articles on an interesting home in Chicago.]

Here we find recaptured some of the valiant spirit of traditional English architecture, a spirit deep in the roots of our own colonial traditions and the inspiration of many of our present day homes.

It is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Anderson, 2222 West 113th place, Chicago. There are six rooms and a very interesting five level floor plan; also a masculine minded nursery bedroom for Kenneth Anderson, aged 4, who already is a lively and companionable member of the household.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's corner lot is 50 feet by 156 feet. They chose the modified English type of architecture because they liked the style, felt it suited the site and could be excellently adapted to their individual needs.

Home of Enduring Quality.

There is a definitely enduring quality in the beauty of this English minded home with its exterior walls of dark red brick, its steep, slate colored roofs, its massive chimney, and nicely landscaped lawn.

Mrs. Anderson doesn't believe in the old adage that one must build a house and live in it a year before one knows what one really wants. She said:

"We had studied a great many house plans and given a great deal of thought to what we needed. That's the important thing, after all, I think. If you know your needs and preferences before you decide to build you've gone a long way toward a house that satisfies you after it is finished.

"We had always had a preference for the English type house and liked the floor plans with their five levels that Mr. Boehme submitted to us. They seemed to meet our own needs precisely. We find it very convenient to have our master bedroom on the upper level, above and to the right of Kenneth's room, half a floor level below. There is more privacy for us and less likelihood of waking him if we come home late at night. Later on he can have his own friends in his own room—with less disturbance to the rest of the house."

Economically Planned.

This separation of the boy's room from the master bedroom and also from the living quarters is an idea which should work for general family satisfaction as the years move on.

Inside one finds a thoroly straightforward design, planned for convenience and economy. There is a square front entrance, with coat closet at the left, a reception hall beyond, and then access from this to the rear is thru a second hallway.

There is an open arrangement of living room, dining room and hall, with windows ample for daylight and ventilation and placed to give ample space for furnishings.

The five levels create interest in the plan. Below grade the first and second levels are given over to heater room, laundry, and recreation quarters. On the third or ground level there are the reception hall, in rust and ivory tones; the L-shaped living room and dining room with a great picture bay on the east wall, and the kitchen with its built-in breakfast wall.

4th Floor Guest Room.

On the fourth floor level is Kenneth's room and also a guest room. The guest room has two large closets, one of them a cedar closet.

"I wanted plenty of closet space and storage space," Mrs. Anderson said. "And I have it. I have eight closets and two linen closets and storage spaces on the west wall and in the basement."

There is a large bathroom on this level with a shower stall enclosure. Then on the fifth floor level there is a light, airy, spacious master bedroom with windows on three sides. In the upper hall of this level there is a closet large enough to be a bedroom, with a generous outside window. Here, too, is a bath. Below is space for a future bedroom.

A very livable floor plan, this.

HAS JOB TRAPPING WILD DUCKS AND LETTING THEM GO

Forest Preserves Aid in Banding Studies.

Catching wild ducks and letting them go is one function of a busy division of the Cook county forest preserve district. The division is headed by Lynn H. Hutchens, wild life technician.

Like most generalities, that is an over simplification. The job has to do with the study of wild life to help guide efforts at conservation.

The important part of Hutchens' work occurs between the catching and releasing, when he clamps a numbered aluminum band loosely about the fowl's leg and tosses the bird into the air to resume its own way of life.

Finders Make Report.

Later some bird bander at another station, or the hunter who bags the fowl will communicate his find to the United States fish and wild life service in Washington, D. C., giving the number and the place where the bird was taken.

The federal service will have a record of the bird, for each of the 2,000 banding stations thruout the nation reports its banding operations. After recording the new information, the service will report it to the station that banded the bird.

By such comparison of notes, technicians can estimate waterfowl population, the proportion of males to females, the approximate life span, the places of origin, the time and route of migrations, and many another fact that helps to direct conservation efforts and fix game laws.

Chicago in Waterfowl Path.

Chicagoland is in the path of the greatest of the nation's four major flyways for waterfowl. Hutchens soon will become a naval aviation cadet, but he has trained his assistant, John Jedlicka, to carry on.

McGinnes slough, a 265 acre marsh lake on a 480 acre forest preserve tract at Orland Park, southwest of Chicago, is the bird banding locale and is an almost ideal waterfowl preserve.

Four bird traps are set up there. Each day during the southward flight, which begins in August and continues sometimes into January, Hutchens and Jedlicka don hip boots, wade out to the traps, catch, band, and release the captives that have accumulated since the last visit, and make a record of their work.

Last year they banded 895 ducks of various varieties. Up to last week, this year's catch consisted of nearly 1,500, nine of which were wearing last year's bands.

Report on Last Year's Birds.

Of last year's 895 birds caught, 69 have been reported on. Of the 69 reports, 44 were from Illinois[mostly south], six were from Missouri, four each from Indiana, Florida, and Louisiana, and one each from Wisconsin, Iowa, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ontario, and Puerto Rico.

The biggest surprise was the one from Ontario, for it meant the duck, banded last fall, doubled back several hundred miles during the southward migration. The Puerto Rican report was freakish also, for ordinarily the ducks that use the Mississippi flyway winter near the mouth of that river.

Ducks which use the Mississippi flyway include teal[which are now in the midst of their southward flight], mallard, black duck, pintail, wood duck, baldpate, redhead, shoveler, ring-necked, buffle-head, and ruddy, to mention only a few.

Studies indicate that the birds travel the same flyways year after year. They indicate too that the southbound fowl take their own sweet time, merely keeping ahead of the icy weather.

Luther College Club.

The Rev. A. O. Storvik, pastor of St. Timothy Lutheran church, will be the speaker at the Chicago Luther College club at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Norske Klub, 2346 North Kedzie avenue.

BOYS KNOW HOW TO END WARS IN INCIDENT STAGE

Republic Opens Court of Arbitration.

A few adolescent boys still learning their history lessons know something that dictators don't know, nor kings, nor presidents nor other war minded men three times their age. These boys know that nothing is ever settled by a fight.

The mayor of the Boys Brotherhood republic, Alvin Lamm, a dark haired youth who attends Crane High school, says credit for this observation should go to Charles Henry, pudgy city judge from Manley High school. Young Henry says the way to end a fight is not to fight. The proper way is arbitration.

The purpose of the Boys Brotherhood republic is to help boys in trouble. That is why the young judge was concerned when there fell on his ears complaints from neighbors and police about boys fighting in the street.

How Gang Fights Start.

Two boys would have an argument. Maybe it would be over a football game or a dice game or something that somebody said about somebody.

Then one boy would hit the other boy in the eye. Then the other boy would wait until his eye healed and he would pop the other boy on the head. Then the first boy would get a gang of his friends and beat up the second boy. Next in the chapter of settling the argument would be a gang fight with several broken hands, a concussion or two, and broken windows.

Judge Henry, who lives at 3915 West 16th street, extends an invitation to all boys anywhere in the city to use the Boys Brotherhood republic's courtroom at 1530 South Hamlin avenue to settle their differences. The court for outside boys will be open every Sunday evening. Each boy may retain a boy attorney who has passed the bar examinations of the Boys Brotherhood republic.

No One Is Wrong.

"It has to be settled carefully by arbitration," says Mayor Lamm. "You can't ever solve it by saying one is wrong. The best way is to admit that both boys have some good points on the question and both have the bad. Then we can explain away the differences."

One case so far has been settled in the B. B. R. courtroom and there were no black eyes nor split heads required. Two boys started an argument over an interclub football game. It was about to become a gang war when Judge Henry invited them to use the boys' courtroom and have a real trial.

"The only shouting done was by the attorneys," said Mayor Lamm. "And that is to be expected."

When the trial was over the boys accepted the verdict calmly and shook hands. "Hey," said one of them afterwards, "they didn't say just who was wrong."

So every Sunday night the B. B. R. courtroom will open its doors. "The procedure will begin," says the judge, "with a 15 minute intermission of peace when the fighters can tell their stories to their attorneys. They then can decide on whether it will be a judge or jury trial.

Why Be Fat?
Here's the Most Amazing Way To Lose Weight You've Ever Read About!
Here's how to take off ugly fat—without strict diet lists, no strenuous exercises, no drugs. The easy Welch Way! And intelligent, cooperative people who faithfully followed Dr. Frederic Damrau's instructions lost an average of 7 pounds a month. Amazing results sworn to before a Notary Public. And listen how easy it is. Just mix ¾ glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass water, and drink before meals and at bedtime. Then this happens: First, you have less desire to eat sweet, fattening foods—thus reducing caloric intake. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime actually helps nature consume excess fat. Yet you needn't suffer a hungry moment. So start reducing the Welch Way today.
Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16. She recommends the easy Welch way to reduce.

Roman Banquet at York High

Relaxing the ancient law which banned women from such conclaves, members of the York High school Latin club discuss plans for their annual Roman banquet to be held Wednesday at the school in Elmhurst. Left to right, are Fred Koecher, Alice Cook, Jack Hackert, Fred Damarin, Aldo Luchetta, Marvelle Zilly, and La Vergne Schroder.

IT'S EAST LYNNE IN SERIOUS VEIN FOR RIVERSIDE

Amateurs to Produce Straight Drama.

be the instrument of my vengeance."

Perhaps Lady Isabel should have waited for more definite proof of her husband's perfidy, but had she done so there would have been no occasion for later acts in the play. How many other plots, now as then, would suffer were it not for what follows a misunderstanding?

At risk of spoiling the suspense for those who plan to attend the play for the first time and as a reminder to those for whom some of the details may be hazy, it may be explained that Carlyle divorces his wife and marries Barbara Hare. Lady Isabel, badly treated by Levison, leaves him, for he has neglected to make her his wife as promised. She learns of the illness of her small son [Bruce Hale] and applies for a position as his nurse. Disguised as Madame Vine she reveals herself as little Willie's mother in the death bed scene.

Death Bed Appeal.

[Other plays of the period with powerful appeal utilized the death bed scenes of children, among them "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and "Ten Nights in a Barroom."]

Despite her disguise, Lady Isabel is discovered by one of her former maids [Marian Charvat]. Miss Corney [Helen Brasee], a sister of Carlyle, also learns the secret, and a reconciliation is brought about at the death bed of Lady Isabel.

To Miss Corney, of that vanished type, "a quaint spinster sister," falls the task of providing much of the comedy contrast. Old men rôles will be taken by Ramsey Burch and Thomas Glenn. Robert Fuxa, Mary Jo Stark, and Robert Stapleton will appear in what are called "utility parts."

So, this week at the Riverside Little theater, the lines that thrilled so many audiences of the past will be repeated and again, for four nights in a row, Sir Francis Levison, "the fashionable roué," will, in the end, meet his just deserts.

Lois Wallner Will Sing 'Sweethearts' on Tuesday

"The Northerners," under the direction of Harry S. Walsh, will present a concert of popular and semi-classic music at 9:30 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. Lois Wallner, soprano soloist, will sing Sigmund Romberg's ever popular "Sweethearts."

Locating a Transmitter

In locating a transmitter you first draw a line across your map indicating the compass direction from which the signal was received. Then move several miles at a great angle. Now draw a line indicating the compass direction from the new point. The transmitter will be at the intersection of the two lines.

COMPOSER SEEKS AID IN WRITING W-G-N OPERETTA

An appeal for a lyric writer to work with a famous Italian composer on an operetta for the W-G-N $10,500 Great American Operetta quest will be aired at 2 p. m. today on "Help Your Neighbor," W-G-N service feature.

Anthony Misuraca, who holds degrees from the Italian Royal conservatory in piano, organ, voice, and composition and orchestration, will ask for a writer to help him complete a score for the W-G-N quest. Misuraca came to this country in 1926 and has been working on an American operetta since his arrival. His most famous work, "L' Ave de la Sera," won him a gold medal in international competition staged by the Italian Salzano, classical music organization.

The program is conducted by Verne Smith and Betty Hanna and aims to solve the problems and fill the needs of its Chicagoland neighbors.

MOSQUITO WAR BREEDS STRANGE MARSH MONSTER

Ungainly Machine Helps Eradicate Pests.

Necessity may be the mother of invention, but she has a crew of handy helpers among the personnel of the Des Plaines valley mosquito abatement district.

In the 13 years since formation of the district, the first of its kind in the Chicago area, the research ingenuity of Chief Engineer J. Lyell Clarke and his assistants has produced a variety of machinery and methods so excellent that they have been copied far and wide. There even is evidence that some of the machinery improvements worked out in the district's shop in Lyons are being incorporated into mechanical equipment for the nation's swift growing armed forces.

The job of the mosquito abatement district is to seek out mosquitoes and destroy them. The widely varying conditions under which they grow requires a versatility of special equipment that had the machinery manufacturers stumped.

Make Own Sprayers.

In numerous instances, engineers of the Des Plaines district actually showed the way for the manufacturers, and in the face of their discouraging advice developed mechanical ideas which the factory people adopted.

Take, for example, the big sprayers used to distribute pyrethrum larvicide over the surface of pools and sluggish streams where mosquitoes breed, to kill the insects before they grow wings. These strange looking monsters were pioneered in the Des Plaines valley district warehouse in Lyons.

Conventional spray outfits were unsuitable because they could not get close enough to the field of operations. Clarke and Lloyd Yettaw, his field foreman, asked the sprayer manufacturers to build trucks that could be driven thru marshes and in stream beds, but were met with headshakes.

High, Wide and Handy.

Using an old light automobile chassis for experimentation, Yettaw fitted oversize wheels and tires to it, and was able to take the contrivance thru footing that had mired all vehicles previously. The long legged machine was topheavy, so the width of the gauge was increased. The big wheels changed the steering characteristics, but Yettaw and his men whipped that.

Manufacturers have since copied the salient features of the sprayers, which are now being built commercially. Yettaw says his mechanical monster can outperform the much publicized army jeeps.

Compresses Air on Run.

One of the newer developments is the motorcycle unit used to spray the larvicide in sewer catch basins, a prolific source of insect pests. With the sidecar unit first used, long stops at gasoline stations were necessary to recharge the larvicide tanks with air. Now a compressor on each unit builds up air pressure while the vehicle goes from sewer to sewer.

Clarke and his men developed a special type of nozzle that not only spreads the spray evenly on the filth at the bottom of each catch basin, but also kills the adult insects hiding in the cavity above.

Mosquito abatement districts thruout the nation have copied the Des Plaines valley unit. The United States public health service has 16 of them in use in the District of Columbia.

Scow Travels Streams.

Spraying the surface of slow streams used to be a tedious process, carried out by men in wading boots and carrying knapsack spray outfits with which they had to return to their base frequently for refilling. Even then, they reached only a narrow strip along each shore, and larvæ in midstream escaped.

A special scow was developed, driven by an outboard motor and carrying a spray unit so powerful that its mists can cover a stream 160 feet wide at one time.

Like King Solomon, who got a bee to distinguish the real flowers from cunningly made artificial ones, Clarke turned to nature for a partial solution of his problems.

Minnows Help in Job.

He heard of a top feeding minnow, gambusia affinis, that had an unusual appetite for mosquito wrigglers. He transplanted some of them to the Chicago area from the south, and found, much to the surprise of himself and naturalists, that they would winter over in shallow waters.

These are the minnows with which garden pools, artificial ponds and similar genteel insect incubators are stocked by Clarke's crews.

Actress

Sondra Gair will play the role of Ellen in "Yes, My Darling Daughter" when the Garfield Park Theater guild presents the Mark Reed comedy Tuesday and Wednesday evening in the Garfield Park auditorium, Central Park boulevard at Washington.

Observe 40 Years at Hawthorne

Three Johnsons, now being honored by their fellow employes at Hawthorne Works, look over an old telephone which Western Electric was making in November, 1901, when each began his service with the company. In contrast are today's cradle type instruments. Left to right are G. Fred Johnson, 368 Herrick road, Riverside; C. B. Johnson, 529 North Lincoln avenue, Hinsdale, and J. F. Johnson, 734 Lombard avenue, Oak Park. There is no family relationship among the trio.

BIRD EPICURES KEEP OWNER BUSY ON THEIR DIETS

200 Hail from Lands Thruout World.

Arthur W. Halverson of 5705 West Erie street has birds in his basement. Including the ones also in the six foot aviary in the backyard he has 200. He has state and federal permits to keep them.

Arthur Halverson.

His musical tower of Babel in the backyard is as representative of foreign aristocrats as 1941 tea parties in the White House. There are an Inca dove, a Java sparrow, doves from Australia, Africa, India, and South America, a chukar partridge from Asia, a button quail from the Philippine Islands, a bamboo quail from China, a European blackbird and an African yellow weaver. Most startling is the Baltimore oriole with the orange breast and the black hood.

Feeding Takes Time.

The foreign birds have repaid him for his hospitality with demands for food that consume hours of time every morning. He grates carrots, boils eggs, shells beans, grinds up coffee cake, and stirs up an oatmeal pudding. The love birds won't eat worms and the others have lost their taste for them since he gave them fruit and vegetables.

If Mr. Halverson fixes a diet that doesn't agree with the birds, they don't scold or fuss. They just kill the young ones by pushing them out of the nest.

Mocking birds, says Mr. Halverson, are the best singers and all birds are faithful to their mates except pheasants. He says the thrush has the sweetest disposition, canaries are scrappy, and the orioles can't be trusted because of their long pointed bills.

A Fine Collection.

Halverson's curiosity about birds has turned his 30 foot lot into one of the best stocked aviaries in the city. He is a member of the Avicultural societies of California and of London, and writes on native birds.

When Mr. Halverson was a boy he owned 21 birds. He bred wild birds with canaries and studied the personalities of the offspring. When he grew up he became a traveling salesman and for years made his home wherever he hung his hat. Eight years ago he settled in Chicago. The first thing he did was to start collecting birds.

In 1935 he finished building an aviary with southern exposure, an L shaped house 6 feet high and 18 feet long. It has a glass door with a 2½ inch opening, and a running water fountain. His tropical birds occupy the warm basement of his two flat home.

A Full House There.

In addition to Halverson and his wife, an artist, other residents in his Austin home are robins, hermit thrushes, Wilson thrushes, wood thrushes, cat birds, brown thrushes, blackbirds, skylarks, Japanese robins, towbees, American goldfinches, Dickcissels, colored jucos, sparrows, grossbeaks, a nonpariel bunting, rose breasted grossbeaks, bobolinks, crown sparrows, and Indigo buntings. That is, in addition to Columbine birds, mourning doves, bob whites, and California quail.

The war is effecting the household. Ants' eggs formerly cost 80 cents a pound imported from France. Now they cost $4.

Robins don't eat worms in the Halverson household. If they are proffered one, they'll throw it back. They want seedless raisins, bananas, and oranges.

Mr. Halverson runs his own stockyards for the worm eaters. He has a sack full of meal in which he nurtures his own meal worms. Mrs. Halverson says she likes the 200 birds because she admires the colors, but doesn't particularly like them flying thru the house, and she doesn't care for the worms.

BAZARS OPEN YULE SEASON ON NORTH SIDE

Unity Church Will Hold 84th Sale.

The 84th anniversary bazar of Unity church, 656 Barry avenue, one of the oldest in the city, will be held Friday afternoon and evening in the parish house.

Organized on May 11, 1857, the first church was erected at Dearborn street and Walton place but burned in the Chicago fire.

The pastor, the Rev. John Rushton Heyworth, has served 11 years, and is president of the newly organized Lake View Council on Religious Action.

St. James Rededication.

Another old church, the St. James Evangelical Lutheran church, 2046 North Fremont street, will rededicate its newly remodeled edifice at a special service at 7:45 this evening. The first St. James' church was erected in 1870, the year preceding the great fire. The present gothic structure was built in 1916.

The rededicatory message will be read by the Rev. Theodore Nickel of Aurora, Ill. The St. James mixed choir, directed by J. G. Schmid and accompanied at the organ by T. Herhard Naeser, will sing several selections. A feature of the program will be the singing of the ancient "Apostolic Creed" in the German language by the St. James children's chorus. The Rev. Arthur C. Dahms, who prior to his St. James call in 1935 served for 18 years as missionary among Chicago's deaf mutes, is pastor of the congregation.

This afternoon Dr. Ernest F. Tittle, pastor of the First Methodist church of Evanston, will speak at the dedicatory services of the new Wesley hospital in Chicago.

Yule Tree Program.

The opening of Christmas Tree Lane Wednesday morning will herald the start of Christmas festivities at Evanston First Methodist. Dinner at the church followed by a musical in the evening featuring artists from the Northwestern University School of Music will complete the first day's program.

There will be another dinner Thursday evening followed by "School Day Frolics," starring an all-male cast some of whom will impersonate female rôles. Consisting of two scenes, "Sixth Graders in Action," and "A Program in the School Auditorium," the frolics was written by A. L. Gale. Mrs. Foster Irish and Mrs. Victor M. Langsett are co-chairmen for the show.

Another Christmas bazar will be held at the Second Presbyterian church, Evanston, Thursday. Included in the articles offered for sale will be baked foods, homemade candy, cookies, tea aprons, bedroom slippers, and novelties. Miss Helen E. McNab is general chairman for the sale and Mrs. George H. Shevlin and Mrs. Charles H. Ward are assisting. A luncheon and dinner will be served. The Woman's society is sponsoring the sale.

Women Hold Yule Sales.

Still another Christmas sale, sponsored by the Woman's auxiliary will be held in the parish house of the Church of Our Saviour, 530 Fullerton parkway Wednesday afternoon and evening. A cafeteria supper will be served thruout the evening.

The Woman's guild of the Wellington Avenue Congregational church, 617 West Wellington avenue, will hold a Christmas bazar Thursday and Friday in the parish house

The Women's auxiliary of the Church of the Atonement will hold the annual bazar Wednesday and Thursday in the parish house, 5749 Kenmore avenue. Afternoon tea and cafeteria supper will be served both days. Mrs. Charles DaLand and Mrs. Florence Shaw are co-chairmen. Their committee members are Mrs. W. W. Blodgett, Mrs. E. D. Atwater, Mrs. O. M. Woodburn, Mrs. William Cappeau, Mrs. A. C. Hofmann, and Mrs. C. H. Wicks.

The annual bazar given by the women of the Congregational church of Rogers Park, 1545 Morse avenue, will be held Wednesday in the parish house. It will be open from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 at night with luncheon at noon and a turkey dinner at 6 o'clock. A volleyball game for men is scheduled at 8 o'clock in the evening.

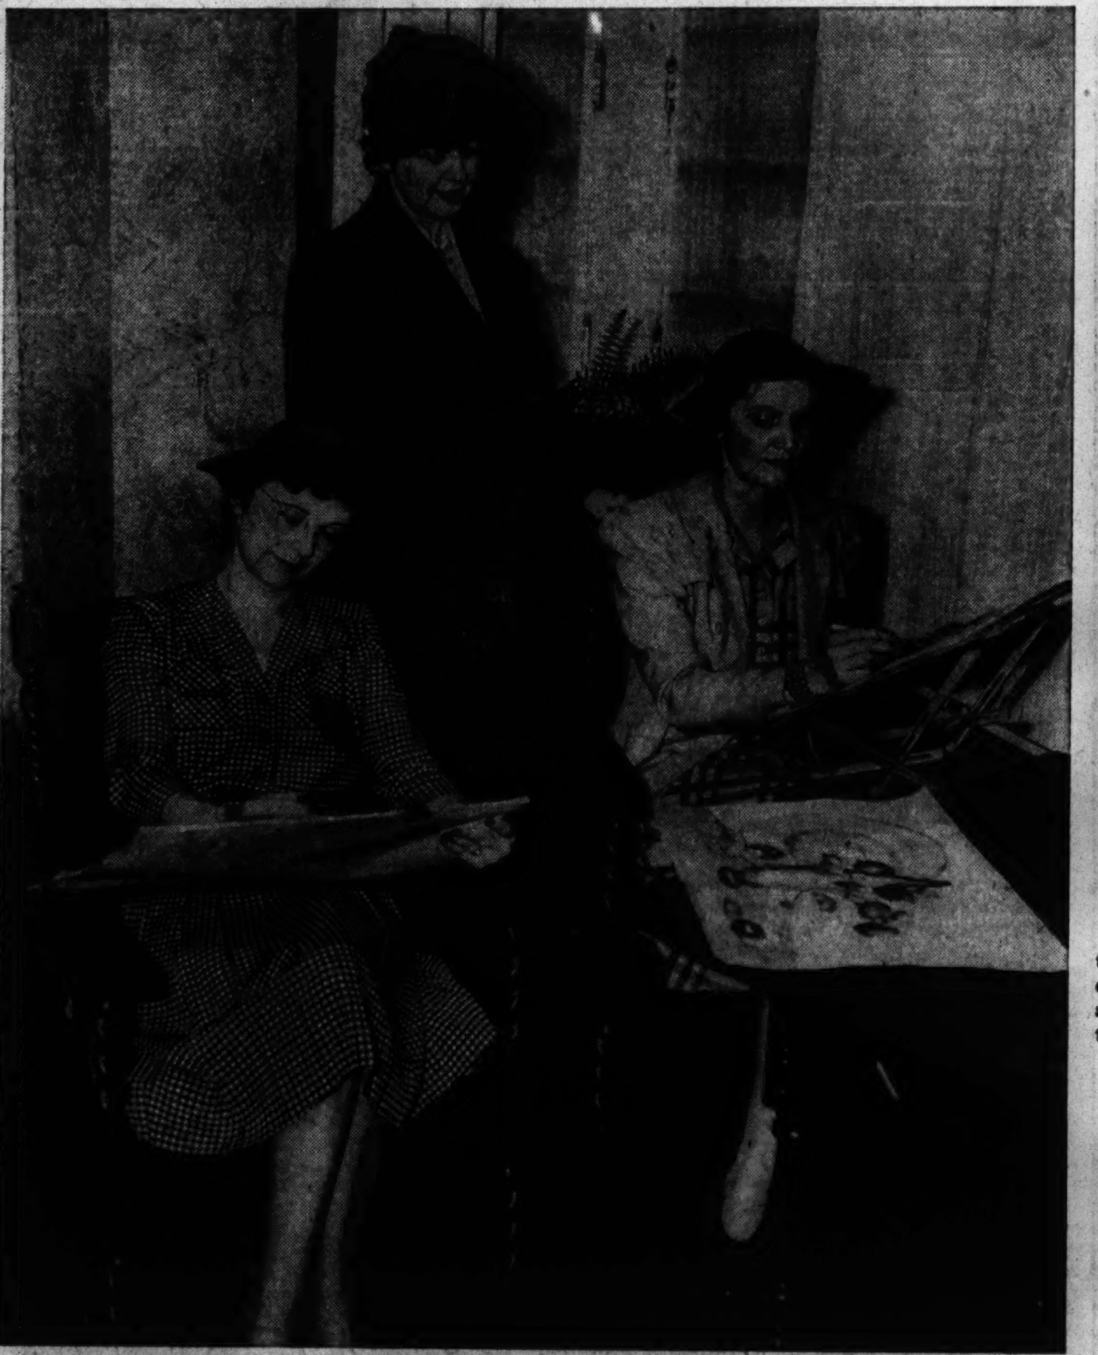
GIVE 5TH ANNUAL SKATERS' BALL FRIDAY EVENING

The fifth annual Skaters' ball sponsored by the Illinois Skating association will be held in the Logan Square Masonic temple, 2451 North Kedzie boulevard, Friday evening.

North side skaters who plan to attend are Shirley Jane Burnett, 7346 North Hoyne avenue, Bob Nutting, 1665 Winona street, Chuck Edwards, 2738 Coyle avenue, Byron Warnes, 460 Cedar street, Winnetka, Rickey Lifvendahl, 1040 Hollywood avenue, Junior Haenisch, 4038 North Ashland avenue.

According to Pete Miller, president of the Amateur Skating union and chairman of the ball, the first skating meet, Dec. 28, in Garfield park will be sponsored by the Catholic Youth organization. The city championship will take place Jan. 1 and the state championships, Jan. 4 in Glen Ellyn.

Rogers Park Woman's Club to Hold Golden Jubilee Tea Next Sunday



Fifty years of achievement will be celebrated at a golden jubilee tea by the Rogers Park Woman's club, 7077 North Ashland avenue, next Sunday afternoon. Beginning with 10 members, the club now has a roll call of 1,000, and nearly every day the large brick club building is a meeting place for several of the many groups making up a modern departmental club. Members of the fine arts department spend many hours painting from still life arrangements in the front lounge. Mrs. L. R. Allen and Mrs. J. W. Hamilton are the aritsts, while Mrs. George A. Brown is the "kibitzer." (Story on page 10.)

Tuesdays are the busiest days at the club. Special sessions open in the morning. At lunchtime, members are served cafeteria style at the club kitchen bar. Mrs. Peter T. Swanish, press and publicity chairman, and Mrs. Frank E. Badgley of the hospitality committee prepare to lunch together before the regular full club session in the afternoon.

Braille writing groups are in nearly every large woman's club. The Rogers Park braille writers, who work under the public welfare department, annually produce many copies of literary works which are bound and filed at the Chicago public library for the use of the blind. Mrs. Marie M. Fifer, left, and Mrs. Ronald G. Nish work with the stylus while Mrs. H. S. Johnson reads copy for them.

A book review or some other special feature often precedes the formal session which begins at 2 o'clock on Tuesdays. The club's various departments take turns presenting the programs, but Mrs. Augustus Mueller, recording secretary, is always on hand to keep the historical record, and Mrs. Ford Hicks, club president, takes charge of the opening ceremonies.

While the club itself observes its golden anniversary, Mrs. Lulu Simon, club housekeeper, counts 25 years of service there on Dec. 27. Mrs. Simon manages the entire club household from keeping the furniture polished to ordering the groceries.

(Diagram on page 5.)

In an unnamed spot in or about Chicago there is going to be some strange goings-on next Sunday morning—stealthy footsteps on the roof, maybe, face peering in the window, mysterious figure lurking behind the tree across the street, somebody shinnying up the drain pipe.

But let the old blunderbuss be! It's all in fun—just an experiment by the radio hams of Illinois Institute of Technology in the interest, more or less, of national defense.

From a secret hiding place which only he knows about, Anton Seda, senior mechanical engineering student and president of the institute's Amateur Radio club, will begin transmitting code signals, just like a fifth columnist, except that the Federal Communications commission knows all about it and has told the boys it's all right, to go ahead.

Students to Hunt Station.

The others of the radio fraternity have to track down Seda's transmitter like FBI men or army intelligence, the only difference being that the amateur sleuths will be using, in most cases, receivers and direction finding equipment of their own design and construction.

This is how the experiment is to be carried out:

At 9 o'clock, on the allotted frequency, 1750 kilocycles, Seda will begin signalling R in code—dot-dash-dot. R will be the identifying signal, which he will send for 15 minutes, giving the call letters of Armour college's short wave station W9WY, at the beginning and end of the 15 minute period. Transmission will be entirely by CW [continuous wave], all of the short wave amateurs operating by telegraphic code.

Sleuths to Meet at Brookfield.

After 15 minutes, better to simulate an illegally operated transmitter, the hidden station will not be heard on prearranged schedule. From 9:15 to 12:30 o'clock, Seda will "talk" from time to time with other stations, still operating on the assigned frequency, of course, and signing the proper call letters. But his brother hams in

Lions to Sell Libertyville to Its Residents

BY GLADYS PRIDDY.

The 44 men of the Libertyville Lions club are 44 salesmen. Their product is Libertyville. Their territory is—Libertyville. And their prospective customers are all living in Libertyville.

The Lions club, under the presidency of the Rev. Glenn M. Garber, pastor of the Libertyville Presbyterian church, decided late last summer to sell Libertyville to its own people. And the outcome of their decision is a slick paper color print magazine.

The paper, called "Our Town," and described further as "the book about Libertyville," will be formally presented to the town at a Lions club dinner at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Libertyville Presbyterian hall.

Will Distribute 3,000 Copies.

The Lions will distribute 3,000 copies of the book—it's free—along with their own description of Libertyville as the town where the country and city meet.

Glenn Price is the illustrator and designer of the book which locates the town of 4,000 as slightly south of the geographic center of Lake county. A town where the urban and rural meet, and the best of both are retained.

Historically, Libertyville first became a stopping place when the pioneers, trudging north from Chicago, paused there to rest in the grove that marked the site. Later, the stagecoach pased thru en route to Milwaukee. Its path, which was early called the Milwaukee road, is still the main street of Libertyville, and it's the only street in town which has never been private property.

George Vardin First Settler.

George Vardin, the first settler, came in 1835. On July 4, 1836, there were enough settlers for a flagpole dedication and the name was changed from Vardin's Grove to Independence Grove. Another short year passed, and the community was large enough to warrant a postoffice. Another Independence Grove in Illinois made another name change necessary. The early settlers stuck by the patriotic motif and chose Libertyville.

The place became Burlington for two short years as Lake county seat, but by 1841, it was Libertyville for good.

The Lions have put into their book all of Libertyville's heritage of first families and early homes, its claim to building the first school in Lake county [1836], the first Lake county bank, and the oldest continuously operated Lake county newspaper, the Libertyville Independent, which survives as the Independent-Register.

The great estates that surround the town are described, and there is room, too, for the "poor man's" estates, which are defined as anything from one to 20 acres.

Never Expect to Be Great.

Finally, the Lions proclaim thru their publication: "Our town never expects to become great. It is happy with its growth only in this respect: the new people who have arrived in Libertyville came for the most part because of choice, and not compulsion. This is the way our town wants its growth to continue—steadily, simply, serenely—by those of us who enjoy the friendly way of life."

And if there are any prospective Libertyville residents—well, the town has been free of indebtedness for five years. The village chief, Arthur E. Suter, is proud of that statement.

The Lions club itself is a young organization—only in its eighth year. Members say it grew out of a depression need, and it was set up as a purely service group.

Make Leaders for Community.

Its accomplishments, to date, are enumerated by President Garber. "We've made leaders for the community, first of all. Fellows who couldn't get up in public before are getting to be real preachers now. Maybe one of them will get my job. Some of them are leading singing, too. All practice at the club meeting. We've instilled confidence in lots of chaps. One of our philanthropies is providing glasses for any school child in need and unable to get them at home.

"We've taken the lead in bringing light industries to Libertyville. We have sought these as a link between school and bigger industry for our high school graduates."

These industries include a road equipment factory, a coupling company, scale craft model company, match company, textile factory, and paper goods concern.

The Lions have helped to develop recreational facilities, and they hire the lifeguard at the community beach each summer. The swimming hole is a lake development from a gravel pit.

PLAN OUTLINED FOR NEAR NORTH SIDE REBUILDING

Propose Improving Rundown Area.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

(Diagram on page 2.)

How a large near north side area might be improved into a highly desirable apartment section with the aid of the new neighborhood redevelopment corporation law was outlined by the Chicago plan commission last week thru its executive director, T. T. McCrosky.

This area, now marked by a wide variety of land uses, is bounded on the north by Chicago avenue, on the east by an extension of Tower court, on the south by Grand avenue, and on the west by the first alley west of Wells street.

It is one of three close-in areas in the city for which the plan commission has made detailed rehabilitation suggestions. The others are on the west and south sides.

Aided by Recent Law.

The law which makes the redevelopment possible was enacted at the last session of the legislature largely thru the efforts of the Chicago building congress. The committee that led the fight for the measure was headed by J. Soule Warterfield, vice president of the congress, and an authority on the causes and cures of land value decay.

The law empowers private interests under municipal supervision to acquire property in rundown areas, clear it of old structures, and build modern residential buildings amply surrounded by recreational space and necessary stores.

Redevelopment areas in cities of Chicago's size can be no smaller than two city blocks nor larger than 80 acres. The north side area under study contains 92 acres, but it would be developed by two or more corporations, which could work in harmony. The law provides that when 60 per cent of the land in a redevelopment area is purchased or placed under option, the other 40 per cent can be acquired by condemnation by the principle of eminent domain.

McCrosky made it clear that the plans his group advance are not intended as final. They merely illustrate graphically how the new law can help transform rundown neighborhoods by restoring property and tax values, he said.

Plan Demolition.

The plan contemplates demolition of all buildings in the north side area excepting public, religious and similar institutions, and a few privately owned structures too substantial to be torn down as yet. A new school would be provided at Superior and Dearborn streets, its grounds serving as play space for the surrounding neighborhood. A new park also would be established at Erie and Rush streets.

All north-south streets would remain open, but a few east-west thorofares such as Superior, Huron, and Ohio streets would be partially closed and turned into recreational area. The blocks between Erie and Ontario streets west of Wabash avenue are designated on the plan as part of the distributor network for the proposed superhighway system.

Apartment Buildings Proposed.

Residential buildings to be erected would be principally three story apartments and ten or twelve-story apartments. This high density is made virtually necessary because of relatively high land values on the near north side, it was pointed out. Stores would be permitted on the ground floors of buildings fronting on Chicago and Grand avenues and State street.

"The north area has been selected to illustrate a pattern of high density apartment houses on high priced land, and replacement of badly assorted land uses by unified development," McCrosky said.

"No area in the city is so well suited by its location for medium to high rental apartments for unmarried white collar workers and married couples whose children are of an age not requiring extensive recreation space."

Plan $68 Monthly Rents.

Building costs would run in the neighborhood of $5,220 for each dwelling unit, the commission estimates. Land costs would run about $3.50 a square foot, or $980 for each dwelling unit. There would be an average of 2.75 rooms per dwelling unit, and rents might be approximately $25 per room monthly or $68.60 per average dwelling unit.

The plan commission made this comparison of statistics for the three city areas as they are today:

	North.	West.	South.
Area in acres	92	226	225
Population	7,483	11,313	10,721
Total resid. structures	445	1,274	732
Res. str. blt. before 1885	164	507	172
Res. str. blt. before 1895	442	1,127	647
Total dwelling units	2,034	3,839	3,232
Assess. val. per res. str.	1,350	1,200	1,350
Front foot land vals.	$165 to $350	$30 to $150	$20 to $110

McCrosky pointed out that 1,320 dwelling units in the north side area are in what are regarded as substandard residential buildings. Of these 1,320 units, 493, or 37.3 per cent of the total, are unfit for use or in need of major repair, he said. All but 5.2 per cent of the residential buildings in the northern area in the study are at least 45 years old, he declared.

TECH STUDENTS TO PLAY RADIO HIDE AND SEEK

Hunt Transmitter in Test Sunday.

search of the station will be on their own.

The searching parties, divided into teams according to the number of receivers available, all will be parked by 9 o'clock on the lot at the zoölogical gardens in Brookfield, waiting for the first signal.

Since the problem is one of locating and running down an illegal transmitter, their receivers and direction finding equipment, commercial or homemade, will be of the mobile type, adapted to use in a car. Receivers will be fitted either with uni- or bi-directional loop antenna.

How the Hunt Starts.

During the first 15 minute period of transmission, a team, using a loop antenna, will be able to establish the exact geographical direction of the hidden transmitter. Having determined the direction in degrees of the compass, the map man will strike a line on his chart from the listening point in the degree-direction obtained from the first listening.

At the signing off signal the teams will disperse, each taking a direction perpendicular or at a wide angle to the first line of location drawn on the map, and traveling some five or six miles, depending upon the efficiency of its equipment.

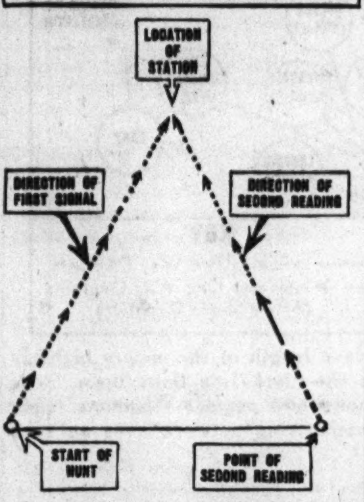
Now the searchers, no longer having a timetable of transmission periods, must wait for the next signal. From the second position, when the signal comes, another degree-direction line will be taken. The point of intersection of the two lines on the map will reveal to the sleuths the approximate location of Seda's hideout.

Final Chance for Laggards.

To give the laggards a final chance, the station again will transmit continuously from 12:30 to 1:30 o'clock, that is it will if some of the intelligence hams haven't by that time rooted out the ham fifth columnist and put his transmitter out of business.

Amateur short wave operators have an intercollegiate organization, Rho Epsilon fraternity. The Armour hams are Epsilon chapter. Members assisting President Seda with today's experiment are Jorma Leskinen, Curtis Hepperle, Ernest Schrot, and Rudolph Oras, all studying electrical engineering.

Locating a Transmitter



In locating a transmitter you first draw a line across your map indicating the compass direction from which the signal was received. Then move several miles at a great angle. Now draw a line indicating the compass direction from the new point. The transmitter will be at the intersection of the two lines.

SORORITY JOINS IN 'SMOKES FOR YANKS' CAMPAIGN

N. U. Girls Bring Yule Cheer to Soldiers.

"Smokes for Yanks!"

The "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi" had better look to her laurels as from now on it will be the girls of Gamma Phi Beta who will be capturing the hearts of lonely soldiers and sailors on the Atlantic and at bases in the Caribbean and Iceland.

The Gamma Phi Beta sorority at Northwestern university recently became the first sorority group to join the volunteers workers collecting "Smokes for Yanks!"

A Merry Christmas!

Wishing to do their part in helping to make it a Merry Christmas for the men away from home, the sorority officers held a meeting of their 76 chapter members and passed a resolution to contribute as a body $10 worth of cigarets in addition to individual contributions.

Sorority officers who are leading the chapter's campaign are: Virginia Wells, president; Dorothy Iverson, vice president and social chairman; Mary Ruth Chandler, treasurer, and Beth Hindley, secretary.

You Can Help Too.

Every one can help in making a soldier or sailor's Christmas a little happier. Just drop a pack of cigarets, or a can of pipe tobacco, or some cigars in the receiving station boxes located in stores thruout the city. Or you can send a check which will be used to purchase "Smokes for Yanks!" Just mail it to Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., Tribune Tower, Chicago.

TWO WAY POLICE RADIO NOW LINKS 55 DEPARTMENTS

Speeds Manhunts, Rushes Aid to Accidents.

Most of the police departments in the Chicago area are included in a big two-way radio network that has been found invaluable in the catching of criminals.

No less than 55 state, county, city and suburban departments belong to the network, and more are coming in as local governments find the money to purchase the equipment. Hundreds of squad cars now carry the two-way radio telephones thru which their crews can receive orders or communicate vital information direct to headquarters.

There is no clearing house for this network that could be regarded as a central office, but police officials point out that this is not necessary. Should a swiftly moving manhunt develop, the squads in the field would probably be directed from the police transmitter nearest the scene, and the headquarters might shift as the chase progresses.

Help Smaller Departments.

Some of the larger police departments serve their smaller neighbors in radio facilities. The three Cook county stations, for example, have made their radio transmitters available to nearby suburbs too small to afford their own broadcasting stations.

Altho most of the police radio systems are on different wave lengths, arrangements have been made so that the systems can be interlocked for the quick transmission of orders and information.

To illustrate, county police officials told of a recent instance in which, at the request of an out-of-towner that they intercept a man vacation-bound in northern Wisconsin, their message was relayed to Appleton, Wis., entirely thru police radios, in something less than three minutes.

Thru use of the interlocking network, the Cook and Lake county authorities in the last few months have on more than one occasion intercepted fugitives from the Milwaukee police.

Speed Up Routine Work.

Police emphasize, however, that two-way radio is useful not only for unusual occasions such as a manhunt, but also for speeding the routine work of any law enforcing department.

In the case of automobile accidents, for instance, time is saved thru the ability of headquarters to communicate directly with accident squads in the field. Thru two-way radio, the nearest squad can be sent to an accident scene, while other squads continue their regular work.

The county highway police estimate they average four minutes in reaching an accident scene after they receive the first call.

Give Fill-in Service.

Radio also helps the county highway department give fill-in protection for suburbs with one or two man police forces. After the local stations are closed, appeals to police are relayed directly to the county highway station, whence the nearest squad is sent to investigate.

In Cook county there are 14 suburbs without regular police protection. There are 21 others with only one of two policemen each.

Police radio in the Chicago area was pioneered by THE TRIBUNE and radio station W-G-N. Early in 1929 THE TRIBUNE installed radio receivers in 40 squad cars, and station W-G-N interrupted its regular programs to broadcast police messages. On the strength of this successful experiment the city voted the same year to install its own transmitter and equip its police automobiles with receivers.

This diagram shows how short wave police radio networks of Chicagoland are linked with the four stations maintained by the Cook county highway police. The call letters indicate the suburb in question has its own wave length and transmitter and receiving system. The suburbs designated "mobile" have squad cars tuned to the wave length of the county highway station with which the black line links them. The smaller diagram shows how regular telephone trunk lines extend the interlocking network over an even larger area.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 1.

Remove stone bird baths to a shed to prevent cracking during cold weather. All statuary should be removed indoors. Attach a humidifier to radiators to give some humidity in the room where plants are standing. Most rooms are excessively dry and the plants suffer accordingly.

Syringe plants by placing in the tub and forcing water from the hose into all parts of stems and leaves to remove dust and insects. Mealy bugs and red spiders, two insidious pests that are often permitted to accumulate on plants, may be kept under control if syringing is consistently practiced.

Small cacti and other succulents planted in drainageless containers should be watered carefully altho the soil is usually too high in them to hold water. Keep cacti in a south window for best results.

Tuesday, Dec. 2.

Most flowering house plants are grown in comparatively small pots and as a result they become rootbound and soon exhaust the food elements. Applications of liquid food at intervals of about three weeks will keep the plants in good health. A lack of food is indicated by weak stems, small leaves, few flowers or scattered fruits.

Plants grown for their ornamental foliage require considerable amounts of nitrogenous food, altho a complete plant flood is preferable unless one has some knowledge of the particular soil used. Give flowering plants plenty of water or they wilt quickly.

If purchased from the florist it must be remembered that the plants have developed in the greenhouse where the atmospheric conditions are properly maintained. Changing to room conditions effects the plants, but watering can be taken care of in an intelligent manner. Examine the soil each morning and keep it moist.

Wednesday, Dec. 3.

Poinsettias dry out quickly, and the best way to water them is to place the pots in a basin of water, allowing it to stand until the soil is wet thru. Avoid sudden changes of temperature or the leaves will turn yellow and fall.

Some plants do best in a cool temperature, such as the primroses and cyclamen, but they require several sunny hours each day. Examine pot bulbs, such as tulips, narcissi, and hyacinth, and if thoroly rooted bring into heat where they will flower quickly.

Amaryllis bulbs can be planted now. If the bulbs are in pots remove some of the top soil and replace with fresh, rich soil. Water well and not again for some time, for the flower stalk appears before the leaves and little water is needed. These bulbs will flower in hyacinth glasses without soil, but at best the method is utilized as a novelty.

Thursday, Dec. 4.

Protect hardy chrysanthemums during winter. Too much covering is more often responsible for injury than anything else. Often too much is applied during a mild winter which smothers the plants but no one can, with certainty, anticipate winter conditions. Do not apply the covering material too soon—wait until the ground freezes, first cutting back the tops to within 7 or 8 inches of the ground; the stubs serve to hold the material in place.

First apply a thin covering, gradually applying more and more until it may be several inches deep. Material to use may consist of evergreen branches, coarse hay, or other litter that does not pack down. Leaves are excellent when used properly; cornstalks scattered around the plants and then a covering of leaves, held up by the stalks, do very well. Do not uncover too soon in spring.

Friday, Dec. 5.

Start a calla lily indoors. They make fine plants and are easily grown. When well started, these plants require feeding at frequent intervals. Cover the bulbs in outdoor beds after the ground is frozen. This also applies to the perennial borders.

Some perennials, such as the foxglove, Canterbury bell, pinks, Shasta daisies, coreopsis, and irises need only a bit of cover, or just enough to keep the frost in the ground and prevent heaving during spring thaws and subsequent injury.

Growing in their natural habitat, most plants have only leaves to cover them, but these fall gradually, lightly, and do not smother. Leaves can be obtained from oak forests and they do not pack, become soft and decay like those from softwoods.

Saturday, Dec. 6.

Naturalize some of the minor bulbous plants before the season is too advanced. These include the intensely blue muscari or grape hyacinth and the unusual feathered hyacinth; glory-of-the-snow or Chionodoxa with its gayly blue-white streaked flowers; white, Siberian Squills; the Guinea henflower or Fritillaria Meleagris.

Well drained pockets of soil in the rock garden are excellent for some of the small bulbs and tulip species, such as T. chrysantha, Clusiana, Eichleri, Kaufmanniana, and others. Protect during winter.

Sow hardy annuals now if the ground is in suitable condition, for they will start early in spring and flower much sooner than those sown in spring. They include poppies, California poppies, alyssum, cosmos, portulaca, zinnia, snapdragon, gaillardia, kochia, calliopsis, balsam, four-o'clock, Japanese hop, and others. Sow thinly by mixing the finer seed with sand.

THIS SIX ROOM CITY HOUSE HAS 5 FLOOR LEVELS

Home Is Designed in the English Tradition.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[This is the first of two articles on an interesting home in Chicago.]

Here we find recaptured some of the valiant spirit of traditional English architecture, a spirit deep in the roots of our own colonial traditions and the inspiration of many of our present day homes.

It is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Anderson, 2222 West 113th place, Chicago. There are six rooms and a very interesting five level floor plan; also a masculine minded nursery bedroom for Kenneth Anderson, aged 4, who already is a lively and companionable member of the household.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's corner lot is 50 feet by 156 feet. They chose the modified English type of architecture because they liked the style, felt it suited the site and could be excellently adapted to their individual needs.

Home of Enduring Quality.

There is a definitely enduring quality in the beauty of this English minded home with its exterior walls of dark red brick, its steep, slate colored roofs, its massive chimney, and nicely landscaped lawn.

Mrs. Anderson doesn't believe in the old adage that one must build a house and live in it a year before one knows what one really wants. She said:

"We had studied a great many house plans and given a great deal of thought to what we needed. That's the important thing, after all, I think. If you know your needs and preferences before you decide to build you've gone a long way toward a house that satisfies you after it is finished.

"We had always had a preference for the English type house and liked the floor plans with their five levels that Mr. Boehme submitted to us. They seemed to meet our own needs precisely. We find it very convenient to have our master bedroom on the upper level, above and to the right of Kenneth's room, half a floor level below. There is more privacy for us and less likelihood of waking him if we come home late at night. Later on he can have his own friends in his own room—with less disturbance to the rest of the house."

Economically Planned.

This separation of the boy's room from the master bedroom and also from the living quarters is an idea which should work for general family satisfaction as the years move on.

Inside one finds a thoroly straightforward design, planned for convenience and economy. There is a square front entrance, with coat closet at the left, a reception hall beyond, and then access from this to the rear is thru a second hallway.

There is an open arrangement of living room, dining room and hall, with windows ample for daylight and ventilation and placed to give ample space for furnishings.

The five levels create interest in the plan. Below grade the first and second levels are given over to heater room, laundry, and recreation quarters. On the third or ground level there are the reception hall, in rust and ivory tones; the L-shaped living room and dining room with a great picture bay on the east wall, and the kitchen with its built-in breakfast wall.

4th Floor Guest Room.

On the fourth floor level is Kenneth's room and also a guest room. The guest room has two large closets, one of them a cedar closet.

"I wanted plenty of closet space and storage space," Mrs. Anderson said. "And I have it. I have eight closets and two linen closets and storage spaces on the west wall and in the basement."

There is a large bathroom on this level with a shower stall enclosure. Then on the fifth floor level there is a light, airy, spacious master bedroom with windows on three sides. In the upper hall of this level there is a closet large enough to be a bedroom, with a generous outside window. Here, too, is a bath. Below is space for a future bedroom.

A very livable floor plan, this.

New Home on Five Levels

Steep roofs, walls of deep red brick and attractive landscaping hold this home securely to the ground and lend an enduring quality to its dignity and beauty. The floor plan is of real interest—five levels. The owners are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Anderson, 2222 West 113th place,

HAS JOB TRAPPING WILD DUCKS AND LETTING THEM GO

Forest Preserves Aid in Banding Studies.

Catching wild ducks and letting them go is one function of a busy division of the Cook county forest preserve district. The division is headed by Lynn H. Hutchens, wild life technician.

Like most generalities, that is an over simplification. The job has to do with the study of wild life to help guide efforts at conservation.

The important part of Hutchens' work occurs between the catching and releasing, when he clamps a numbered aluminum band loosely about the fowl's leg and tosses the bird into the air to resume its own way of life.

Finders Make Report.

Later some bird bander at another station, or the hunter who bags the fowl will communicate his find to the United States fish and wild life service in Washington, D. C., giving the number and the place where the bird was taken.

The federal service will have a record of the bird, for each of the 2,000 banding stations thruout the nation reports its banding operations. After recording the new information, the service will report it to the station that banded the bird.

By such comparison of notes, technicians can estimate waterfowl population, the proportion of males to females, the approximate life span, the places of origin, the time and route of migrations, and many another fact that helps to direct conservation efforts and fix game laws.

Chicago in Waterfowl Path.

Chicagoland is in the path of the greatest of the nation's four major flyways for waterfowl. Hutchens soon will become a naval aviation cadet, but he has trained his assistant, John Jedlicka, to carry on.

McGinnes slough, a 265 acre marsh lake on a 480 acre forest preserve tract at Orland Park, southwest of Chicago, is the bird banding locale and is an almost ideal waterfowl preserve.

Four bird traps are set up there. Each day during the southward flight, which begins in August and continues sometimes into January, Hutchens and Jedlicka don hip boots, wade out to the traps, catch, band, and release the captives that have accumulated since the last visit, and make a record of their work.

Last year they banded 895 ducks of various varieties. Up to last week, this year's catch consisted of nearly 1,500, nine of which were wearing last year's bands.

Report on Last Year's Birds.

Of last year's 895 birds caught, 69 have been reported on. Of the 69 reports, 44 were from Illinois[mostly south], six were from Missouri, four each from Indiana, Florida, and Louisiana, and one each from Wisconsin, Iowa, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ontario, and Puerto Rico.

The biggest surprise was the one from Ontario, for it meant the duck, banded last fall, doubled back several hundred miles during the southward migration. The Puerto Rican report was freakish also, for ordinarily the ducks that use the Mississippi flyway winter near the mouth of that river.

Ducks which use the Mississippi flyway include teal[which are now in the midst of their southward flight], mallard, black duck, pintail, wood duck, baldpate, redhead, shoveler, ring-necked, buffle-head, and ruddy, to mention only a few.

Studies indicate that the birds travel the same flyways year after year. They indicate too that the southbound fowl take their own sweet time, merely keeping ahead of the icy weather.

Luther College Club.

The Rev. A. O. Storvik, pastor of St. Timothy Lutheran church, will be the speaker at the Chicago Luther College club at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Norske Klub, 2346 North Kedzie avenue.

BOYS KNOW HOW TO END WARS IN INCIDENT STAGE

Republic Opens Court of Arbitration.

A few adolescent boys still learning their history lessons know something that dictators don't know, nor kings, nor presidents nor other war minded men three times their age. These boys know that nothing is ever settled by a fight.'

The mayor of the Boys Brotherhood republic, Alvin Lamm, a dark haired youth who attends Crane High school, says credit for this observation should go to Charles Henry, pudgy city judge from Manley High school. Young Henry says the way to end a fight is not to fight. The proper way is arbitration.

The purpose of the Boys Brotherhood republic is to help boys in trouble. That is why the young judge was concerned when there fell on his ears complaints from neighbors and police about boys fighting in the street.

How Gang Fights Start.

Two boys would have an argument. Maybe it would be over a football game or a dice game or something that somebody said about somebody.

Then one boy would hit the other boy in the eye. Then the other boy would wait until his eye healed and he would pop the other boy on the head. Then the first boy would get a gang of his friends and beat up the second boy. Next in the chapter of settling the argument would be a gang fight with several broken hands, a concussion or two, and broken windows.

Judge Henry, who lives at 3915 West 16th street, extends an invitation to all boys anywhere in the city to use the Boys Brotherhood republic's courtroom at 1530 South Hamlin avenue to settle their differences. The court for outside boys will be open every Sunday evening. Each boy may retain a boy attorney who has passed the bar examinations of the Boys Brotherhood republic.

No One Is Wrong.

"It has to be settled carefully by arbitration," says Mayor Lamm. "You can't ever solve it by saying one is wrong. The best way is to admit that both boys have some good points on the question and both have the bad. Then we can explain away the differences."

One case so far has been settled in the B. B. R. courtroom and there were no black eyes nor split heads required. Two boys started an argument over an interclub football game. It was about to become a gang war when Judge Henry invited them to use the boys' courtroom and have a real trial.

"The only shouting done was by the attorneys," said Mayor Lamm. "And that is to be expected."

When the trial was over the boys accepted the verdict calmly and shook hands. "Hey," said one of them afterwards, "they didn't say just who was wrong."

So every Sunday night the B. B. R. courtroom will open its doors. "The procedure will begin," says the judge, "with a 15 minute intermission of peace when the fighters can tell their stories to their attorneys. They then can decide on whether it will be a judge or jury trial.

Has Role on Air

Anita Louise, movie star currently appearing with Owen Davis Jr. in "Mr. and Mrs. North" at the Harris theater, will be heard from 4 to 4:30 p. m. (CST) today on W-G-N in a radio adaptation of Morrison Wood's play, "The Double Crosser."

Sweetheart Swing Bands on Spotlight Band Hour

A careful balance of sweet and swing orchestras is scheduled on W-G-N and Mutual's "Spotlight Bands" cavalcade this week. The bands of Charlie Barnet, Eddy Duchin, Tommy Tucker, Johnny Messner, and Benny Goodman will follow on successive nights starting tomorrow.

The program is aired from 9:15 to 9:30 p. m. every Monday thru Friday on W-G-N and 117 other Mutual outlets. On Saturdays "Spotlight Bands" presents a half-hour show beginning at 9:15 p. m. that features the dance band rolling up the largest retail sale of a phonograph recording, based on a coast-to-coast survey.

GRACE MOORE, THOMAS STAR IN 'TOSCA' ON W-G-N

Chicago Opera on Mutual at 10 P. M. Tomorrow.

The Chicago Opera's production of Puccini's "La Tosca," starring Grace Moore and John Charles Thomas, will be broadcast exclusively by W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual Broadcasting system from 10 to 10:45 p. m. tomorrow.

Miss Moore will be making her initial appearance on this season's series of Chicago Opera productions on W-G-N-Mutual. Thomas was heard last Monday in "Falstaff."

Miss Moore will sing the title rôle of Floria Tosca; Thomas will be heard as Scarpia.

The supporting cast includes Frederick Jagel, tenor, as Mario Cavaradossi; Vittorio Trevisan, baritone, as Sacristan; Giuseppe Cavadore, tenor, as Spoletta, and Richard Wentworth, basso, as Sciarrone, the gendarme. Carlo Perone will conduct the orchestra.

"La Tosca" provides a tense, exciting drama for Miss Moore and Thomas with a score that includes such arias as "Vissi d'Arte e d'Amour," "E Lucevan le Stelle," and "O Dolci Mani."

The radio production of the opera will be under the direction of Lou Jakobson. Robert Venables, W-G-N-Mutual announcer, in addition to his running commentary during the performance, will interview one of the members of the Chicago Opera personnel between acts.

Venables knows opera from arias to stage bolts. At the same theater from which he broadcasts each Monday he worked in positions ranging from call boy to assistant stage manager.

Venables' opera commentaries include many anecdotes about the stars performing in each production. Personal, intimate, and interesting they add to the listeners understanding and enjoyment of the world of opera. Venables is a friend of John Charles Thomas, Richard Bonelli, Charles Marshall, and many other famous singers.

COMPOSER SEEKS AID IN WRITING W-G-N OPERETTA

An appeal for a lyric writer to work with a famous Italian composer on an operetta for the W-G-N $10,500 Great American Operetta quest will be aired at 2 p. m. today on "Help Your Neighbor," W-G-N service feature.

Anthony Misuraca, who holds degrees from the Italian Royal conservatory in piano, organ, voice, and composition and orchestration, will ask for a writer to help him complete a score for the W-G-N quest. Misuraca came to this country in 1926 and has been working on an American operetta since his arrival. His most famous work, "L' Ave de la Sera," won him a gold medal in international competition staged by the Italian Salzano, classical music organization.

The program is conducted by Verne Smith and Betty Hanna and aims to solve the problems and fill the needs of its Chicagoland neighbors.

MARSHALL TO BE GUEST TODAY OF ELSON AND ANSON

Everett Marshall.

Everett Marshall, popular American baritone now appearing in "Blossom Time" at the Grand Opera house, will be the guest in the radio funfest, "An Hour with Elson and Anson," from 3 to 4 p. m. today, on W-G-N.

Also appearing on the program will be the Cappy Barri Trio, harmonica wizards currently billed at the Blackhawk restaurant. Marshall has been featured in many W-G-N-Mutual programs in the past years.

Cappy Barri, virtuoso of the harmonica, and his two co-workers have appeared in the movies, "Mad About Music," "Pot o' Gold," and other films as well as in numerous vaudeville performances.

Patti Clayton, featured vocalist, will be accompanied by Arni Barnett and his orchestra.

Why Be Fat?
Here's the Most Amazing Way To Lose Weight You've Ever Read About!

Here's how to take off ugly fat—without strict diet lists, no strenuous exercises, no drugs. The easy Welch Way! And intelligent, cooperative people who faithfully followed Dr. Frederic Damrau's instructions lost an average of 7 pounds a month. Amazing results sworn to before a Notary Public. And listen how easy it is. Just mix ¾ glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass water, and drink before meals and at bedtime. Then this happens: First, you have less desire to eat sweet, fattening foods—thus reducing caloric intake. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime actually helps nature consume excess fat. Yet you needn't suffer a hungry moment. So start reducing the Welch Way today.

Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16. She recommends the easy Welch way to reduce.

KAY CHASE BACK PENNING PAINTED DREAMS SCRIPTS

Other News and Views of Radio Headliners.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

News and views from the studios: Kay Chase is back writing Painted Dreams for W-G-N after a vacation of two months. Her first script since she has returned will be aired at 1:15 p. m. tomorrow. Heretofore, when vacationing Kay has taken her typewriter with her, writing on trains, planes, boats and buses. This time a substitute took her place. Kay also will be back in the rôle of Joyce Foster in the serial. Kay has written the show for a decade.

Friends and associates of Durward Kirby, Chicago NBC announcer, are congratulating him. Yesterday he received an H. P. Davis Announcer's Award for 1941. The late Harry P. Davis was a Pittsburgh radio pioneer. The award is made each year to an NBC announcer in each of four regions for excellence in announcing. Kirby received $300 in cash together with a medal and ring. Kirby, besides announcing various shows, is master of ceremonies of Club Matinée.

First Operetta Club.

A club formed in Brooklyn in May, 1940, by Clare Mason has been granted a charter in the Chicago Theater of the Air clubs. Altho it is officially chapter No. 38 it claims to have been the very first group to listen regularly to W-G-N's Saturday night operettas.

Arturo Toscanini is to make his first appearance on the air this season with the NBC Symphony orchestra at 8:30 p. m. next Saturday over the NBC Blue network. A special treatment of the "Blue Danube Waltz" will be featured.

Ginny Simms, who has just recently left the Kay Kyser College of Musical Knowledge, is carving out quite a career of her own. Besides her new Friday evening radio show she is making pictures for R-K-O. And next Thursday she will make a guest appearance with Rudy Vallee and John Barrymore.

Margery Mayer, who got her radio start singing on W-G-N and then went to the Hymns of All Churches program, has gone to New York and will be heard on the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air over WMAQ at 4 today.

Gunther for Swing.

John Gunther, foreign correspondent, probably will take over Raymond Gram Swing's program while Swing vacations, starting about Christmas. The substitution hinges on Gunther's being able to get back from Britain in time. Swing expects to be off the air three weeks.

The life story of Grant Wood, noted contemporary American painter, will be dramatized on the Art institute's Great Artist series at 2:15 p. m. Tuesday on W-G-N. The Goodman Theater Players will dramatize the highlights of his life.

First Nighter series started its 12th year of presenting original plays on WBBM-CBS Friday night. Barbara Luddy and Les Tremayne are the current stars. Don Ameche used this show as a springboard to Hollywood.

The Quiz Kids have just returned from a brain battle at the University of Michigan. They bested a quintet of professors 420 to 390. Joan Bishop, Jack Lucal, Richard Williams, Gerard Darrow, and Harve Fischman made the trip.

PHILLIPS SCHOOL WILL BE SALUTED ON CITIZENS HOUR

Wendell Phillips High school will be saluted on the Citizens of Tomorrow program to be aired over W-G-N from 1:30 to 2 p. m. today. This program is presented by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, with Philip Maxwell as master of ceremonies, in salute to the achievement and promise of the youth of America.

The program is recorded on Wednesday and presented in transcribed form on Sundays, giving students and their friends who participated in the broadcast an opportunity to hear themselves on the air.

Mr. Maxwell also conducts The Chicago Tribune News quiz with cash awards for the winners. Three Phillips High students compete today against Evelyn Davis and Robert Pavelchik of Kelvyn Park High who have been winners for several weeks.

Miss Julia A. Mulligan will conduct the school a cappella choir in several selections. Mrs. Maudella B. Bousfield, principal of the school, will speak briefly. Two more names will be added to the roll of honor: Calvin Hall of Phillips and Jean Albrecht, Milwaukee, Wis. Next week Englewood High will be the honor school.

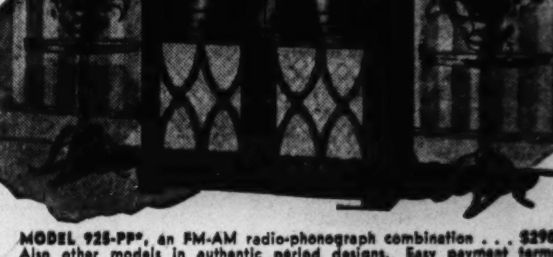
The gay, romantic story of "Rio Rita" will be told in song and words on the Chicago Theater of the Air on W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m. next Saturday with Marion Claire, Thomas L. Thomas, and Attilio Baggiore as headliners.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will read a letter from Lord Kemsley, British publisher. This communication was in reply to Col. McCormick's letter to the Briton in which he declared he and many other Americans are willing to aid England in arms "if necessary to prevent your being conquered," but opposed a new American expeditionary force.

Miss Claire will sing the rôle of Rita. Betty Winkler, one of Chicago's leading dramatic stars, will take the speaking lines for the same character. Thomas is cast in the masculine lead of Capt. Jim Stewart and Bret Morrison will take his speaking part. Baggiore will sing the rôle of Roberto, Rio's brother.

Musical background will be supplied by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and the chorus directed by Robert Trendler. John Weigel will be narrator. William A. Bacher is the producer.

Others in the dramatic cast include: Marvin Mueller, Ella Braca, Willard Waterman, John Walsh, Bob Jellison, and Bloyde Wright.



Have say Merry Christmas at your home with a Stromberg-Carlson

MODEL 925-PF*, an FM-AM radio-phonograph combination . . . $290. Also other models in authentic period designs. Easy payment terms.

● The nervous tension that comes from extended listening to the ordinary radio is pleasantly missing with a Stromberg-Carlson.

For in 47 years of pioneer work in sound transmission and reception, Stromberg-Carlson has developed ways to eliminate ear strain. The "full-floating" suspension of this set's high fidelity Speaker, for example, effectively reduces cabinet echoes. And Frequency Modulation under the Armstrong system, virtually banishes static.

Hear No. 925-PF* (above) on any program or record, and you'll agree, "There is nothing finer than a Stromberg-Carlson!"

WOMAN'S CLUB OF ROGERS PARK MARKS 50 YEARS

Membership Grows from 10 to 1,000.

(Picture on page 1.)

[Montfort Photo.]

Fifty years of Rogers Park Woman's club history—a period in which membership increased 100 fold—will be celebrated at a golden anniversary reception at 4 o'clock next Sunday in the clubhouse, 7077 North Ashland avenue. The character of this club, which began with a roll call of 10 back in 1891 and now numbers 1,000, is indicated in the name of the celebration. Members call their club birthday the "Semi-Centenary," tacit announcement to the public that they exepct to keep right on growing for another half century at least.

Mrs. Ford Hicks, 1529 Thorndale avenue, golden jubilee president, will head the receiving line. The reception will be managed by the semicentenary committee, headed by Mrs. Edward A. King, 1901 Farwell avenue, club president in 1913-'15, who came to Rogers Park as a bride in March, 1891, and joined the brand new Woman's club the next February.

Mrs. Edward A. King.
[Jackson Photo.]

Mrs. King, still an active clubwoman, has coöperated in compiling the historical data that is part of all birthday celebrations. Founding of the club was, in part, an outgrowth of the physical situation of Rogers Park, a community between Chicago and Evanston and dependent on one or the other for educational and cultural advantages. Rail transportation was not good in those days, and early settlers describe Sheridan road as "hub deep in mud." Women of the community had been especially interested in clubs since the founding of the General Federation of Women's clubs in 1890.

Idea Begin on Porch.

Thus, the little group meeting on Mrs. Charles Saunders' front porch on an August afternoon in 1891 soon began talking over what club work would mean in their social and cultural life.

Those women included Mrs. Saunders' sister, Miss Eliza Van Norden Young, who now resides in Evanston, Mrs. Edgar S. Foote, Dr. H. C. B. Alexander, Mrs. Edward D. Coxe, Mrs. F. D. Gifford, Mrs. L. H. Jennings, Mrs. Ada R. E. Clark, Mrs. F. H. Doland, Mrs. J. P. Easter, and Mrs. Thomas Wild.

The club was not actually organized that day, but the idea became a working objective, and 10 women attended the first regular club session at the home of Mrs. Coxe, at what is now 1708 Lunt avenue, in December, 1891. Mrs. Foote became the first president.

All of this time, Mrs. King had been arranging and rearranging her things in the peak roofed colonial home her husband had built at Bosworth and Pratt avenues. Years later she was to hear the house referred to in Denver, Colo., as "King's Folly," because its plate glass windows and generally good construction were considered too fine for the neighborhood. But Mr. King believed in Rogers Park and subdivided 10 acres there to substantiate his conviction that the territory would develop.

Joins Club at 22.

By February, Mrs. King, a petite matron of 22, joined the club. The other members were nearly all old enough to be her mother, but age differences faded in the single purpose of setting up a club beneficial to community and members alike.

The club filed incorporation papers and by 1893 was affiliated in the Illinois and General federations, and the membership had increased from 10 to 46. Each member had to buy her own chair [Mrs. King still recalls purchasing hers], and a name plate was attached to it. The chairs were stored on the second floor of the King home, and Mr. King patiently let them down by a rope into the living room for every meeting. After the meetings the chairs were hauled upstairs again by the rope method.

The club progressed rapidly from its original literary pursuits and "papers" on history into an organization dedicated to civic and humanitarian projects.

Campaigned for Parks.

The club aided Mrs. Fannie Chadband, who had a private kindergarten, to install a kindergarten in Field school. The department of education was organized with all of the Field teachers as honorary members. That was in 1894-'95 when Dr. Harriet C. B. Alexander headed the club. A philanthropy department followed shortly, and by 1902, under the second presidency of Mrs. Phillipina G. Jennings, the club campaigned for public parks and playgrounds.

The club moved into a lodge hall, where members had to supplement the sketchy janitor service during meetings. Then followed a long stay at the first Masonic temple [the Doland block]. Mrs. King recalls: "We must have established a reputation for law and order, because the Masons let us stay for 15 years."

Those Treacherous Folding Chairs.

And in that 15 years, the clubwomen became juggling artists—learning to sit on folding chairs on slippery floors and balance refreshment plates and teacups. A slight jar could and did bring about disaster—after clubwomen and teacup both sliding across the floor. The chairs, members learned painfully, always fell away from the unfortunate women and closed up with a loud clatter.

The club's silver anniversary was momentous because its present home, the large red brick building at 7077 North Ashland avenue, was completed. That building now houses a weekly program of regular club sessions, Red Cross sewing, fine arts groups, and programs for all of the other departments and committees that make up a modern woman's club.

In Receiving Line.

Mrs. Hicks, heading next Sunday's receiving line, will have her board of directors with her. They are Mrs. Alexander F. Kerr, first vice president; Mrs. John M. Fannin, second vice president; Mrs. Augustus H. Mueller, recording secretary; Mrs. Victor R. Clark, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Walter N. Emerson, treasurer, and Mrs. Miles D. Catton, Mrs. Roland O. Witcraft, Mrs. Thomas O'Leary, Mrs. Stephen W. Doty, Mrs. Peter T. Swanish, Mrs. W. J. Wenrich, Mrs. William J. Reding, Mrs. Harry G. Batchelor Jr., Mrs. Henry A. Boehmer, Mrs. Harry W. Raymond, and Mrs. William Broan, department chairmen.

Mrs. A. L. Grotenhuis and Mrs. E. J. Warren are the semicentenary committee members assisting Mrs. King with the reception plans. Former presidents of the club will be hostesses. They include Mrs. E. Jackson Dewire, Mrs. James Massie, Mrs. Samuel James, Mrs. Joseph F. Peacock, Mrs. Earl G. Whitaker, Mrs. Louis G. Wetzel, Mrs. David J. McCammon, Mrs. Reginald Ford, Mrs. Sarkis H. Nahigian, Mrs. Harry S. Gradle, and Mrs. King. The juniors will be pages.

Miss Teckla Doniat, 4129 Kenmore avenue, will be hostess at the monthly session of the Buena Park Catholic Woman's club tomorrow. Members will meet at Miss Doniat's home for the study session at 1:30, and the business meeting will open at 2 o'clock.

Wolfe, who is in the army air corps, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wolfe of East Chicago. The couple are now residing in Houston, Tex., where Lieut. Wolfe is stationed.

SCHOOLS TO LIST 5,000 GIRLS WHO LIKE TO DANCE

They'll Be Partners for Men in Training.

The board of education is going to help find dancing partners for United States soldiers and sailors in training in various Chicago area encampments. Since early summer Miss Ernestine Badt, director of social centers and supervisor of a soldiers and sailors committee, has been working on the plan.

By Jan. 1 Miss Badt expects to have files in all sections of the city listing the names of some 5,000 girls who will dance with soldiers and sailors and whose parents have given consent. Within three days after requests are received from churches, YMCA's and fraternal groups who wish to entertain the men, hundreds of girls will be provided thru Miss Badt's committee.

Parents Must Consent.

Regulations have been set up by Miss Badt in order to insure the new program success. "We have been three years working on social mixers thru high school centers," says Miss Badt, "and nothing has gone wrong yet."

No girl can register as a dancing partner for soldiers and sailors unless she has a certificate of permission signed by her mother, father and a witness. The parents must also consent to provide for escorting the girls to and from the parties. "Service men will not be permitted to escort the girls home," says Miss Badt, "and no girl may attend the parties unless her name is on file with the committee."

Girls must be at least seniors in high school and must be no younger than 18 years. "The boys don't want them any younger," says Miss Badt, "and army and navy officials also prefer the older girls."

Approved by Service.

The approval of the plan has been received from a score of army and navy officials. The committee was supplied with the list of all army morale officers early in the summer by Col. N. B. Wood.

The program for registering dancing partners was launched by Miss Badt after numerous requests for girls to dance with the young navy cadets at the Great Lake Training school when they were treated to parties. "These boys are not all Chicagoans," explains Miss Badt, "and some have no opportunity even to talk to a girl. They are naturally eager for dancing partners. Several times I was expected to produce 200 girls at a few minutes notice."

The board of education will only do the inviting of the dancing partners from its file of names. The parties will be arranged by organizations interested in the welfare and morale of the men in training, and organizations will plan a mixer program with grand marches, counter marches and "robber" dances.

Chaperons Are Listed.

Chaperons in charge of the various social centers' lists of dancing partners, and their schools are Edith S. Garriott, Amundsen; Rose Ramsey, Austin; Ethel M. Bourke, Bowen; Grace P. PROPOSE 225 ACRE HOUSING PROJECT

SEEK ONE WAY TRAFFIC ROUTE ON 55TH STREET

Gage Park Citizens Cite Necessity.

Six specific suggestions for the improvement of traffic conditions on 55th street west of Western avenue were drawn up last week by a joint committee from the Gage Park Citizens' Improvement club and the Gage Park Business Men's association and submitted to Mayor Kelly's office with an explanatory letter signed by Robert Schulze, president of the improvement organization.

Civic bodies, safety committees of women's clubs and parent-teacher associations have been discussing the 55th street traffic problem for several years with a view toward elimination of safety hazards and congestion. The south area council of the Chicago Motor club made a survey of the area and, more than a year ago, recommended measures for traffic regulation.

Cites Traffic Increase.

In his and the committee's letter to the mayor Mr. Schulze stated: "West 55th street carries more traffic than it should bear, making it dangerous for pedestrians to cross the street and irritating motorists who must wait in long lines for traffic light changes.

"The Gage Park Improvement club and the Gage Park Business Men's association have studied this problem in joint conferences and wish to point out that, due to the increased traffic on 55th street by reason of the airport, the new Studebaker plant, the Diesel plant in La Grange, and increasing defense activities essential to the country's welfare, steps should be taken to alleviate traffic and increase safety on West 55th street."

One Way Streets.

The six point plan recommended by the joint committee of the two organizations was as follows:

1. Make West 55th street a westbound one way street from Western to Cicero avenues.
2. Make West 56th street an eastbound one way street from Cicero to Western avenues.
3. Strict enforcement of the 25 mile speed limit by police to safeguard the lives of school children and other pedestrians crossing 55th street.
4. Erection of 25 miles per hour signs from Western avenue west on 55th street by the department of streets.
5. Elimination of truck traffic from 55th street, with the recommendation that the mayor submit the proposal to the city council for immediate action.
6. The organization of a safety council in the Gage park community representing business men, factory executives, women's clubs, PTAs, Legion posts, and all other groups.

Improvement of 56th.

It was noted with the second suggestion that conversion to a one way street "would necessitate improving 56th street over the Grand Trunk lines and providing for a suitable outlet at Western avenue, but no elevation of any tracks would be required." A copy of the letter was sent to the motor club.

When the motor club made its survey of the area a volume of approximately 19,000 cars in 55th street was crossing the Western avenue intersection in a period of 16 hours, with the volume gradually decreasing to less than 10,000 at Pulaski road.

The motor club engineers recommended two measures: [1] complete rebuilding of the intersection of Garfield boulevard and Western avenue so that traffic proceeding either east or west in Garfield and 55th streets and using Western avenue either in the park district or the city street would be divided into definite lanes, and [2] the elimination of parking on the south side of 55th street from Western to Cicero avenues from 7 to 10 o'clock in the morning and on the north side of the street from 4 to 7 at night.

On Joint Committee.

On the joint committee that drew up the six point plan are Charles S. Bubscz, Dr. O. W. Hesse, and Herbert Wetzel, representing the citizens' improvement group, and Michael Rehak, Jerry Peach, and Edward Dubsky of the business men's organization.

Glendale post of the American Legion already has begun organizing the community safety council proposed by the committee.

HEAD OF Y WORK IN WAR PRISONS TO TALK IN CITY

Dr. Conrad Hoffmann, superviser for the International of YMCA in the German prisoners of war camps in Canada, will speak tomorrow before two meetings in the Englewood Y, 6545 Union avenue.

At 12:15 o'clock he will address the Railsplitters club, a service organization of business and professional men, at a luncheon meeting. In the evening he will speak under the auspices of the Laymen's association of the Southtown Church-YMCA Coöperative program.

Arthur C. Swanson, president of the Railsplitters will be master of ceremonies at the luncheon meeting, and Howard C. Kingsbery, general chairman of the Church-YMCA program, will preside in the evening.

Famous Lithuanian Chorus Will Present Opera 'Carmen' This Afternoon

Chicago's famed Lithuanian chorus, Pirmyn, which took top honors last summer in its first entry into Chicagoland Music Festival competition, will give Bizet's opera, "Carmen," this afternoon in the Eighth Street theater, 800 South Wabash avenue. This is Carmen, the fiery, wayward gypsy, dancing her flirtatious dance for the susceptible Don Jose. Alice Stephens is the Carmen of the company, and Victor Bender is Don Jose. The chorus is using a Lithuanian libretto.

Escamillo, the toreador, sings of his prowess in the bull ring, of the beautiful senoritas who languish for his love, in short, that he is a most remarkable fellow, while Frasquita and Mercedes listen with fluttering hearts. Frasquita (left) is Anita Novicki, and Mercedes is Aldona Grigoni. Algerd Brazis appears as Escamillo, for whom Carmen spurns her former love.

With heavy heart, Micaela bewails Carmen's unscrupulous bewitchment of Don Jose, her lover, "I shall see the guilty one, who by infernal arts doth sever from his duty him whom I loved . . ." Ona Skever portrays the disconsolate Micaela in this scene from the opera.

Frasquita (Anita Novicki) whispers a secret to El Remandado, the smuggler (Bruno Norman). "Carmen" follows a succession of five successful operatic productions by the Lithuanian singers, who are directed by Charles Stephens, a faculty member of the American Conservatory of Music. They have given concerts in Cleveland, Detroit, St. Louis, Toronto, and several of the larger cities in the Chicago vicinity. In 1938, as guests of the Lithuanian government, they went to Europe, singing in all the principal cities of Lithuania and Poland, in London and in Paris.

Charles Kulikowski, Joseph Gembara, K. K. Budny, N. E. Paweski, and Leo Gawrych are serving on the reception committee.

St. Bartholomew's Church Holding Bazar and Dinner

The annual homecoming of Mercy High school alumnæ will take place at 2 o'clock this afternoon in the school auditorium. Guest speaker will be the Rev. J. L. Callahan of the Dominican House of Studies in River Forest. During the program the class of 1942 will be initiated with Mercy alumnæ and the Mercy federation. High School Play.

Christ the King High school club players will present "School Days, 1892-1992," at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in Hackman hall at the Academy of Our Lady, 95th and Throop streets.

U. OF C. BANDSMEN TO PRESENT FREE CONCERT TODAY

A group of marches dedicated to the armed forces of the United States will be featured at the annual fall concert of the 75 piece University of Chicago band in Leon Mandel hall. The band is directed by Harold Bachman. The program will start at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

The concert will include selections from Beethoven, Handel, and Moussorgsky. Another highlight will be three musical works, each of which emphasizes a particular section of the band — woodwinds, brasses, and percussion choirs. There also will be three Negro dances arranged by Florence B. Price.

The concert is open to the public without admission charge or tickets.

Organist of Our Redeemer Church in Recital Today

W. Carl Meyer, organist at Our Redeemer Lutheran church, 6430 Harvard avenue, will give a recital at 4 o'clock this afternoon at the church in celebration of the installation of a new console organ. Louis Groth, tenor, will be heard in a group of songs. Dr. A. J. A. Bachman, William Gakemeier, and Robert List are members of the music committee. Guido Schuessler and Luther Schuessler are pastors.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

NINE Hyde Park Boy Scout troops will bring their collections of waste paper to Farmer's Green Field, 50th street and Dorchester avenue, for a public defense aid demonstration Saturday. The Hyde Park Scouters club recently promoted a contest among the troops to collect old newspapers and other paper to help the city-wide waste paper defense drive. Each troop's bundles will be weighed and awards will be presented for the largest. Vernon T. Brauns is president of the club.

New officers of the Woodlawn-South Shore Kiwanis club are Ralph J. Silverwood, president; Frans G. Englund, vice president, and Clarence M. Elliott, treasurer.

Lawrence J. Dahlgren, 8224 Avalon avenue, has been reëlected president of the John Marshall Law School alumni and Bernard Barnard, 6925 Jeffery avenue, is first vice president.

GENOA council, Knights of Columbus, will pay tribute to James F. Riley Jr., 1339 East 75th street, at a meeting tomorrow evening at 7439 Cottage Grove avenue. Mr. Riley was the youngest grand knight ever to hold office when he led the council for two terms. During his administration the membership of the council remained on the K. of C. honor rolls and he is said to have been partially responsible for making the council one of the largest in the city. Francis X. Poynton, 8130 Calumet avenue, is chairman of the committee working on the program. The committee includes all of the council's officers.

Four south siders have rôles in the production of Dickens' "Christmas Carol" to be presented by the Jack and Jill Players at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon in the Forester theater, 1016 North Dearborn street. They are Robert Ellis, 2402 East 77th street, as "Tiny Tim"; Jack Dvorak, 5506 Honore street, as Elizabeth Cratchit; Roland Butterfield, 8754 South Elizabeth street, as Marley's ghost, and Teresa Gregalunas, 2720 East 76th street, as "The Ghost of Christmas Present."

(Diagram on page 10.)

In an unnamed spot in or about Chicago there is going to be some strange goings-on next Sunday morning—stealthy footsteps on the roof, maybe, face peering in the window, mysterious figure lurking behind the tree across the street, somebody shinnying up the drain pipe.

But let the old blunderbuss be! It's all in fun—just an experiment by the radio hams of Illinois Institute of Technology in the interest, more or less, of national defense.

From a secret hiding place which only he knows about, Anton Seda, senior mechanical engineering student and president of the institute's Amateur Radio club, will begin transmitting code signals, just like a fifth columnist, except that the Federal Communications commission knows all about it and has told the boys it's all right, to go ahead.

Students to Hunt Station.

The others of the radio fraternity have to track down Seda's transmitter like FBI men or army intelligence, the only difference being that the amateur sleuths will be using, in most cases, receivers and direction finding equipment of their own design and construction.

This is how the experiment is to be carried out:

At 9 o'clock, on the allotted frequency, 1750 kilocycles, Seda will begin signalling R in code—dot-dash-dot. R will be the identifying signal, which he will send for 15 minutes, giving the call letters of Armour college's short wave station W9WY, at the beginning and end of the 15 minute period. Transmission will be entirely by CW [continuous wave], all of the short wave amateurs operating by telegraphic code.

Sleuths to Meet at Brookfield.

After 15 minutes, better to simulate an illegally operated transmitter, the hidden station will not be heard on prearranged schedule. From 9:15 to 12:30 o'clock, Seda will "talk" from time to time with other stations, still operating on the assigned frequency, of course, and signing the proper call letters. But his brother hams in search of the station will be on their own.

The searching parties, divided into teams according to the number of receivers available, all will be parked by 9 o'clock on the lot at the zoölogical gardens in Brookfield, waiting for the first signal.

Since the problem is one of locating and running down an illegal transmitter, their receivers and direction finding equipment, commercial or homemade, will be of the mobile type, adapted to use in a car. Receivers will be fitted either with uni- or bi-directional loop antenna.

How the Hunt Starts.

During the first 15 minute period of transmission, a team, using a loop

PLANNERS URGE REBUILDING OF RUNDOWN AREA

Would Utilize Only Private Capital.

Detailed suggestions for the reclamation of rundown areas on the south, west, and north sides were made public last week by the Chicago plan commission thru its executive director, T. T. McCrosky.

The commission's plan was offered as an illustration of what can be done under the new neighborhood redevelopment corporation law. This law makes it possible for private interests under municipal guidance to acquire sites in rundown areas and improve them with residential, service, and recreational facilities in line with modern concepts of adequate housing.

Passage of the law was urged by a committee of the Chicago building congress which was headed by J. Soule Warterfield, vice president of the congress and a leader in the fight to correct decay of Chicago property values.

Plan Is Guide, Not Blueprint.

McCrosky emphasized that, while the suggested plan was based on careful studies, it was advanced not as a working draft, but merely as a guide toward what might be accomplished with the redevelopment machinery now at hand.

The three areas included in the study were picked, McCrosky said, because they conform with the law's definition of deteriorated localities, they illustrate a variety of types of reclamation possible, and they are close to places of work.

The south territory included in the plan is bounded, roughly, on the north by 26th street, on the east by the railroads that skirt the lake shore, on the south by 31st street and on the west by the Rock Island railroad. It includes 225 acres.

It is larger than one redevelopment corporation could administer under the law, which specifies that a development area in a city of Chicago's size can be no smaller than two city blocks nor larger than 80 acres. It was made large purposely to show the possibilities and advantages of correlating separate adjacent projects, McCrosky declared.

Much Land Already Cleared.

"This near south side Negro area," he said, "presents the outstanding opportunity for developing a community of real homes of modest type for families now living in very unsatisfactory conditions despite their economic ability to pay for adequate housing.

"The cost of development will be materially lower than in other close-in areas, as much of the land has already been cleared of buildings."

Under the suggested plan virtually all private buildings in the area would be torn down. Some of the present streets would be partially closed, enough being left only to care for necessary interior traffic.

New buildings, conforming strictly to the new Chicago code soon to be offered for passage, would be spaced far enough apart to admit plenty of light and fresh air and permit landscaping. Parks would cover at least 10 per cent of the area, as the redevelopment law provides.

Include Shopping Center.

In the suggested plan, shopping centers are indicated for 31st street at State street, Indiana avenue and Cottage Grove avenue, and for 26th street at State street, Indiana avenue and South Park way. Most of these are transfer points. Ample provision would be made for the parking of automobiles in these centers.

No recommendations are made for the area lying between 26th and 29th streets and running from the alley east of State to the alley east of Michigan, because the buildings here, mostly commercial in type, are too substantial to be demolished.

The existing Drake school would be increased in size, and a new school and playground would be established at the southwest corner of 30th and State streets. Other play areas would be plentifully sprinkled thruout the region, so that no home would be more than a block or so from such a spot.

All churches, hospitals and other religious or semipublic buildings would remain, as would large residential structures in substantial condition.

For Higher Income Brackets.

A few of the new residential structures to be erected would be apartments for higher income Negro families, most of them along the lake front and on either side of South Park way and Cottage Grove avenue.

The rest would be, for the most part, row houses, which are considered suitable for the south side because they lend themselves to tenant maintenance and permit large private yards.

Statistical Comparison.

Here is a comparison of the statistics for the south, west, and north development areas as they are today:

	North.	West.	South.

ENGLEWOOD HIGH TO BE 'CITIZENS' AIR SHOW GUEST

W-G-N Will Broadcast Program Sunday.

Englewood High school will take its place next Sunday in the parade of "Citizens of Tomorrow" broadcasts over W-G-N. Followers of the series, tuning in at 1:30 o'clock, will hear a half hour program highlighted by music of a student chorus of 50 voices, school cheers, and a review of the history of a school which is rooted in a community antedating the Civil war by more than a decade.

Hundreds of Englewood students, with members of the faculty and special guests, will assemble at 4:30 o'clock Wednesday in the W-G-N audience studio to make the recording for Sunday's broadcast. Later a party of 100 will be THE TRIBUNE'S guests at the showing of two motion pictures, "From Trees to Tribunes," and "The All-American Way."

50 Voice Chorus to Sing.

The chorus to be heard on the broadcast will be composed of 30 girls and 20 boys. With Charles Espenshade, head of the music department at Englewood, conducting, the students will sing "Allah's Holiday," a Friml composition; "The Volga Boat Song" and "In the Field," both of which they have learned in Russian, and a Koshetz arrangement of "The Cossacks' March."

Posting of the colors—the national flag and the school banner—is performed with impressive ceremony for each "Citizens of Tomorrow" broadcast. To Cadet Sergts. John Maniatis, Charles Crump, Gus Mazarakus, and William Garner of the school's ROTC unit will go the honors of color guard duty on the Englewood program. Donald Davies, Harry Pappas, Peter Chelepis, and Carl Fuqua will lead the school colors. Davies is a cadet captain in the ROTC.

An Englewood team will be pitted against surviving veterans of other broadcasts in the customary news quiz, and each of the winners will emerge with a $5 award. Names of outstanding Chicagoland high school seniors will be added to the "Citizens of Tomorrow" honor roll. "Jimmy and Jerry," the typical high school students, will give their customary report on the week's school news.

Philip Maxwell of The Tribune staff, presiding as master of ceremonies and Jimmy and Jerry's "principal," will introduce the special guests—Joseph C. Thompson, principal at Englewood; Willis E. Tower and Dr. Frank G. Bruner, both retired principals of the school; District Superintendent Oscar F. Fowler, and Frederick Parker, Juvenile court officer.

To Sketch School History.

Miss Mildred Wheeler, who has been on the Englewood staff for 20 years, first as administrative assistant and for the last 12 years as assistant principal, will sketch the school's history.

Englewood High school had its beginning in the preparatory department of the Cook County Normal school, which was brought to the district in 1879 by progressive community leaders. The history of education in Englewood dates from the first small schoolhouse built at 65th and State streets in 1852, the year the first railroad touched Chicago Junction, as the small community of homes clustered about the railroad depot was then known.

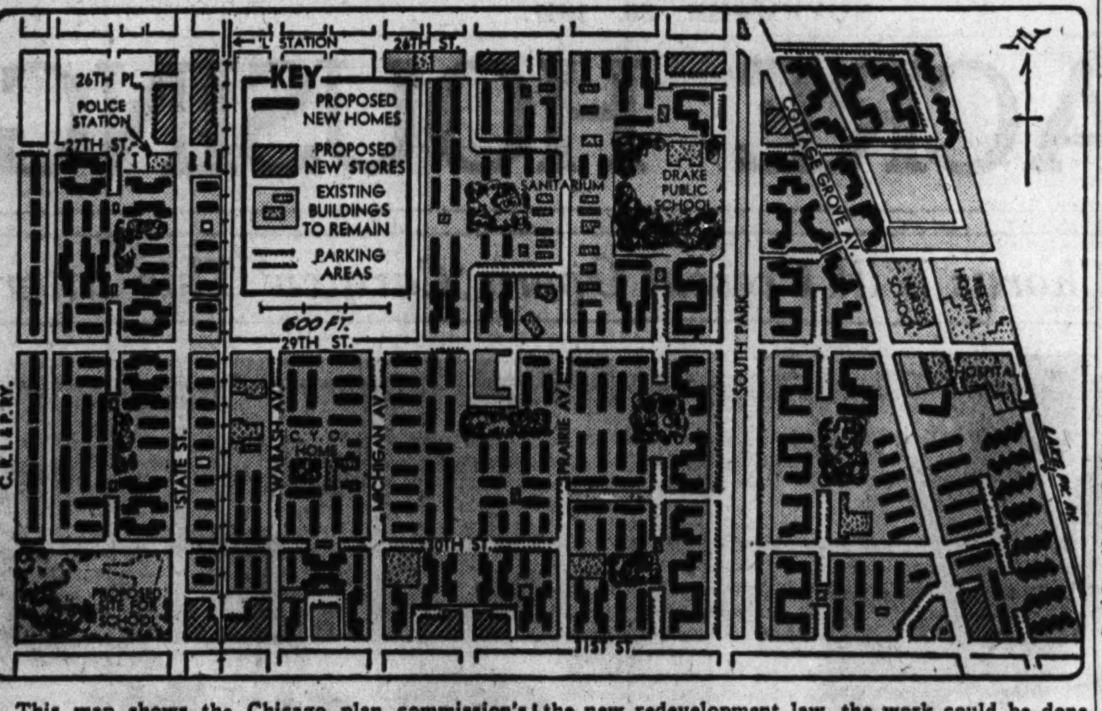
By 1874 the Normal preparatory school had developed into a high school in which 50 pupils were enrolled. There were three teachers and a principal. The high school occupied the second and third floors of a new 12 room building, which housed the elementary school on the first floor. The Englewood High school of today has more than 5,000 students.

Englewood was the first high school to have a summer school and a night school. It was the first to build an auditorium with proper acoustics, the first to install a pipe organ, the first to employ a matron for girls.

On its long list of alumni are the names of Clarence A. Dykstra, S. Emory Thomason, Harry M. Beardsley, Kellogg Speed, John Storrs, Archibald Motley, E. Simms Campbell, Emma Brodbeck, Leo Sowerby, Irwin Fisher, and Anna Ludmila.

Englewood, like other high schools, has its honor societies, dramatic and musical organizations, athletic teams and social, subject, and service clubs. It has two publications. Its students contribute to the James E. Armstrong loan fund, an organ fund, and a food fund for needy pupils.

How Planning Would Benefit South Side



This map shows the Chicago plan commission's suggestions for the reclamation of a 225 acre tract on the near south side in which realty values have been declining for several years. All but a few existing buildings would be torn down, and the rebuilders would start virtually from scratch. By the terms of the new redevelopment law, the work could be done by private interests under municipal guidance. This means the property would bear its full share of the tax load, which is not the case with government housing projects.

OUTLINES GUIDE FOR REBUILDING IN RUNDOWN AREA

Housing Would Be a Private Project.

dential structures remaining in the south side development area, 23.5 per cent were built before 1885 and 88.4 per cent before 1895.

Of the 3,232 dwelling units [which means that an average of more than four families live in each residential building], 2,525 or 78.1 per cent are in substandard residential structures, and 1,678 are either unfit for use or are in need of major repairs.

The plan commission estimates that the cost of each residential dwelling unit in the south area will be about $4,100. At a rental charge of $17.25 per room per month, and an average of 3.65 rooms per dwelling unit, the average rent cost for each unit would be $63 a month. The assessed valuation would be approximately 25 per cent of the building cost.

ENGLEWOOD 'Y' PROVIDES CROSS SECTION OF LIFE

The Englewood YMCA, at 6545 South Union avenue, boasts a larger group of activities and services than any other YMCA in the city as a result of a survey recently completed by the central YMCA for the Community fund.

Of 236 community groups in the city that receive leadership and help from 19 different branches of the YMCA, 84—or 35 per cent—receive help from Englewood. These range from 17 P-TA groups to 82 Protestant churches united in a unique way for union services, sports programs, a daily radio broadcast, and qualified instruction for Sunday school teachers.

Nineteen per cent of 439 community organizations which use their local YMCA for a meeting place are served at Englewood.

Among some of the unusual services of the Englewood "Y" are a speakers' bureau to provide speakers on almost any topic for local groups, a film exchange and provisions for showing sound pictures, the Hi-Y Dunes cabin and the Palos Hill lodge, use of Camp Cutten at Lake Villa during spring and fall week-ends, and use of the swimming pool for mixed groups.

The "Y" conducts 124 group activities on a free basis for the community.

HARVEY JUNIOR WOMEN DRESSING HOLIDAY DOLLS

To Exhibit Handiwork Tomorrow Night.

St. Nick has a reliable corps of helpers in the Harvey Junior Woman's club. Forty-two of the young women, almost half of the membership, have been busy for several weeks at the American home department's annual pre-Christmas job of dressing dolls.

Mrs. Robert Dalberg, the chairman, has arranged for a display of the dolls in their holiday array at the regular club meeting tomorrow night in the faculty dining room at Thornton Township High school. There will be a jury of experts to judge the work of the doll seamstresses for neat sewing, originality of costume, completeness of ensemble and juvenile appeal and to award prizes.

Before delivering the dolls to purchasers, a second exhibit will be held for the senior club at its meeting Wednesday, and for three days they will be displayed in the Monarch laundry window in town. SOUTH SHORE 'Y' TO LAUNCH 1942 FINANCE DRIVE

Set Campaign Goal at $8,500.

A banquet will launch the South Shore YMCA's 11th annual finance campaign at 6:30 o'clock tomorrow evening in the St. John's Methodist church, 7350 Jeffery avenue. The campaign, which closes Monday, Dec. 15, was planned to raise the $8,500 necessary for the 1942 budget. W. John Allen, 7128 Cornell avenue, is general chairman of the drive.

Since the south shore department was established in 1930, more than 10,000 boys and girls have registered for activities, according to James Bridge, chairman. The work has been on a nonfee paying basis and at present is conducted from the headquarters at 2320 East 75th street.

Youth Work Important.

Considered most important is the work done for high school youth thru the Hi-Y and Tri-Hi-Y clubs which are dedicated to encouraging high standards of Christian character thruout the home, school, and community.

Today there are 24 such clubs with an enrollment of 360 affiliated with the "Y."

During this year a total of more than 600 boys and girls joined the "Y's" 45 clubs. In addition, another 500 participated in the athletic and recreational program conducted thru the schools and community.

Pledge $3,000.

A special names division, consisting of eight men, have promised to garner $3,000 to help in the campaign. They are Charles E. Bradley, 7443 Luella avenue; James Bridge, 8218 Clyde avenue; C. W. Howe, 2315 East 69th street; Walter B. Kessens, 7731 Yates avenue; J. N. Elliott, 7317 Chappel avenue; Leo Fredericks, principal of the Bradwell school; H. L. Stuntz, 1320 East 72d place, and A. C. Clemenson, 7801 Exchange avenue. Mr. Bradley is chairman of the division. Altogether, approximately 100 workers will participate in the drive.

And Season It with Sage Housewifely Proverbs.

Holiday festivities on the southwest side are destined to be pleasantly affected this season by a small brown volume compiled by the Englewood Woman's club and known as the "Englewood Woman's Club Cook Book." Fresh off the press, it is to go on sale tomorrow on the club's regular meeting day. Some members have placed orders for a dozen or more copies for Christmas gifts.

Miss Anna L. Reed. [Koehne photo.]

Into the book have gone 350 recipes, each the culinary specialty of the member who contributed it. Some of the women have given recipes that were handed down thru generations of cooks in the family. Other recipes are new, vitamin conscious originals. Some, redolent of distant places, are the prized mementoes of travel in foreign lands.

Gathering the material, compiling it systematically, Miss Anna L. Reed, 308 West 66th street, has seasoned the book with sage [no pun] bits of housewifely wisdom and apt quotations from Shakespeare and Robert Burns.

Famed in Church as Cook.

Miss Reed's cooking abilities are proverbial in her church circle. She is the ways and means chairman of the Englewood club, and was the originator of the idea for a book of members' recipes as a means of raising revenues for club operations. Assisted by her sister, Mrs. David W. Johnson, she has been working on the compilation since June.

If it is known that Miss Reed is baking chocolate cake for the occasion, the success of a benefit supper at her church is assured. Miss Reed give her chocolate layer cake recipe in the new cook book, and she also contributes menus for luncheons and receptions.

The gem among Mrs. Johnson's recipes is an oxtail soup which she learned to make in the deep south. Requiring three hours to prepare, the soup, served with boiled rice, is a full meal. Mrs. Lester Lanyon's reputation as one of the club's most able hostesses is linked with a French recipe for onion soup. Mrs. Lanyon tells how to make her rich onion pottage and she also contributes a prize vegetable soup recipe to the club collection.

No-Shrink Sponge Cake.

Mothers who have heard the praises of ham jambayola sung by their sons and daughters, returning from a party at the H. Clay Calhoun home, will learn how Mrs. Calhoun makes the savory concoction of ham, onion, rice, and tomatoes. Mrs. John Haeberlin, the president, contributes the recipe for a ham souffle which has become a favorite repast at board meetings.

The women of Mrs. J. M. Van Valkenburgh's family have been using the recipe which she gives for "shrinkless sponge cake" for more than 100 years. Among other time tested recipes that have won place in the new cook book are Mrs. Otto Lange's great grandmother's marble cake and Mrs. Fred Bauchhenss' great aunt's old fashioned molasses cookies.

NEW RANGE AIDS MARKSMEN OF ARMOUR CLUB

60 Students Train to Improve Aim.

Engineers may claim exemption from the draft but at least 60 students at the Armour College of Engineering of the Illinois Institute of Technology are taking no chances of being caught unprepared. They are members of the Rifle club and rifle team, and practice whenever they get a chance.

The membership of the club has grown fast since the range in the physics building was renovated. New paint helps reduce the glare, a new heating arrangement keeps the sharpshooters warm, and shooting jackets and telescopic sights for examining targets without going to them make for efficiency. The range is open nine hours a day.

Sport in 20th Year.

This is the 20th year for the sport, which threatens now to become a major activity. The 10 man rifle team has postal matches scheduled with a dozen engineering schools and universities. The stiffest competition is met at the annual midwest championships sponsored by the University of Chicago in the spring.

In the midwest meet the school is represented usually by three four man teams. In the last six years they've seldom been outranked.

Unlike most rifle clubs, this one uses heavy barrel rifles which fire a .22 caliber shell.

Leaders of Club.

QUINN CHAPEL HOLDS REUNION SERVICES TODAY

More than 1,500 present and former members of the Quinn Chapel African Methodist church, 2401 Wabash avenue, are expected at the annual homecoming service at 11 o'clock this morning. The service is sponsored by the Allenites and 12 associated Quinn chapel clubs.

A special feature will be the 3:30 o'clock service designed especially for approximately 500 old members who have been connected with the church for at least 35 years. Mrs. Novella Landry and Mrs. Lucy Miller are cochairmen of this service. Mrs. Isabella Simpson is general chairman.

SCHOOLS TO LIST 5,000 GIRLS WHO LIKE TO DANCE

They'll Be Partners for Men in Training.

The board of education is going to help find dancing partners for United States soldiers and sailors in training in various Chicago area encampments. Since early summer Miss Ernestine Badt, director of social centers and supervisor of a soldiers and sailors committee, has been working on the plan.

By Jan. 1 Miss Badt expects to have files in all sections of the city listing the names of some 5,000 girls who will dance with soldiers and sailors and whose parents have given consent. Within three days after requests are received from churches, YMCA's and fraternal groups who wish to entertain the men, hundreds of girls will be provided thru Miss Badt's committee.

Parents Must Consent.

Regulations have been set up by Miss Badt in order to insure the new program success. "We have been three years working on social mixers thru high school centers," says Miss Badt, "and nothing has gone wrong yet."

No girl can register as a dancing partner for soldiers and sailors unless she has a certificate of permission signed by her mother, father and a witness. The parents must also consent to provide for escorting the girls to and from the parties. "Service men will not be permitted to escort the girls home," says Miss Badt, "and no girl may attend the parties unless her name is on file with the committee."

Girls must be at least seniors in high school and must be no younger than 18 years. "The boys don't want them any younger," says Miss Badt, "and army and navy officials also prefer the older girls."

Approved by Service.

The approval of the plan has been received from a score of army and navy officials. The committee was supplied with the list of all army morale officers early in the summer by Col. N. B. Wood.

The program for registering dancing partners was launched by Miss Badt after numerous requests for girls to dance with the young navy cadets at the Great Lake Training school when they were treated to parties. "These boys are not all Chicagoans," explains Miss Badt, "and some have no opportunity even to talk to a girl. They are naturally eager for dancing partners. Several times I was expected to produce 200 girls at a few minutes notice."

The board of education will only do the inviting of the dancing partners from its file of names. The parties will be arranged by organizations interested in the welfare and morale of the men in training, and organizations will plan a mixer program with grand marches, counter marches and "robber" dances.

Chaperons Are Listed.

Chaperons in charge of the various social centers' lists of dancing partners, and their schools are Edith S. Garriott, Amundsen; Rose Ramsey, Austin; Ethel M. Bourke, Bowen; Grace P. Diaz, Crane; Mary J. Morgan, Farragut; Elizabeth I. Balhouse, Fenger; Anita D. Maloy, Hyde Park; Elizabeth Lynskey, Kelly.

Ingeborg Storvick, Kelvyn Park; Margaret Collins and Mary A. Srill, Lane Technical; Janet Freckleton, Lindblom; Minnie Lomax, Medill; Elizabeth Turner, Phillips; Agnes M. Polka, Steinmetz; Henrietta K. Hintz, Taft; Katherine Birmingham, Tilden; Teresa Reid, Waller, and Viola I. Schnake, Wells.

A Christmas program will be presented by Aquinas students. Mrs. John V. Dunne, 7840 Bennett avenue, will have charge of the shower.

TWO WAY POLICE RADIO NOW LINKS 55 DEPARTMENTS

Speeds Manhunts, Rushes Aid to Accidents.

Most of the police departments in the Chicago area are included in a big two-way radio network that has been found invaluable in the catching of criminals.

No less than 55 state, county, city and suburban departments belong to the network, and more are coming in as local governments find the money to purchase the equipment. Hundreds of squad cars now carry the two-way radio telephones thru which their crews can receive orders or communicate vital information direct to headquarters.

There is no clearing house for this network that could be regarded as a central office, but police officials point out that this is not necessary. Should a swiftly moving manhunt develop, the squads in the field would probably be directed from the police transmitter nearest the scene, and the headquarters might shift as the chase progresses.

Help Smaller Departments.

Some of the larger police departments serve their smaller neighbors in radio facilities. The three Cook county stations, for example, have made their radio transmitters available to nearby suburbs too small to afford their own broadcasting stations.

Altho most of the police radio systems are on different wave lengths, arrangements have been made so that the systems can be interlocked for the quick transmission of orders and information.

To illustrate, county police officials told of a recent instance in which, at the request of an out-of-towner that they intercept a man vacation-bound in northern Wisconsin, their message was relayed to Appleton, Wis., entirely thru police radios, in something less than three minutes.

Thru use of the interlocking network, the Cook and Lake county authorities in the last few months have on more than one occasion intercepted fugitives from the Milwaukee police.

Speed Up Routine Work.

Police emphasize, however, that two-way radio is useful not only for unusual occasions such as a manhunt, but also for speeding the routine work of any law enforcing department.

In the case of automobile accidents, for instance, time is saved thru the ability of headquarters to communicate directly with accident squads in the field. Thru two-way radio, the nearest squad can be sent to an accident scene, while other squads continue their regular work.

The county highway police estimate they average four minutes in reaching an accident scene after they receive the first call.

Give Fill-in Service.

Radio also helps the county highway department give fill-in protection for suburbs with one or two man police forces. After the local stations are closed, appeals to police are relayed directly to the county highway station, whence the nearest squad is sent to investigate.

In Cook county there are 14 suburbs without regular police protection. There are 21 others with only one of two policemen each.

Police radio in the Chicago area was pioneered by THE TRIBUNE and radio station W-G-N. Early in 1929 THE TRIBUNE installed radio receivers in 40 squad cars, and station W-G-N interrupted its regular programs to broadcast police messages. On the strength of this successful experiment the city voted the same year to install its own transmitter and equip its police automobiles with receivers.

'ANTI-SABOTAGE' IS FORUM TOPIC TUESDAY EVENING

A discussion of "Anti-Sabotage" by A. H. Johnson, special agent of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will be given at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening in the Defense building, 176 West Washington boulevard. The talk is sponsored by the Chicago Commission on National Defense.

This will be the seventh and final forum in a series on defense production problems which the commission is presenting in coöperation with the Illinois Institute of Technology under the United States Office of Education.

Designed to aid the small manufacturer with problems of obtaining and fulfilling defense contracts, the forums are conducted free. A new series will be announced beginning Jan. 1, 1942.

SALE OF CRAFT GOODS WILL AID DISABLED VETS

Under auspices of the Veterans' Craft exchange, which works in affiliation with the American Legion Auxiliary of Illinois, handicraft products of disabled soldiers and sailors will be on sale the first four days of this week in the Club Woman's bureau on the ninth floor of Mandel Brothers.

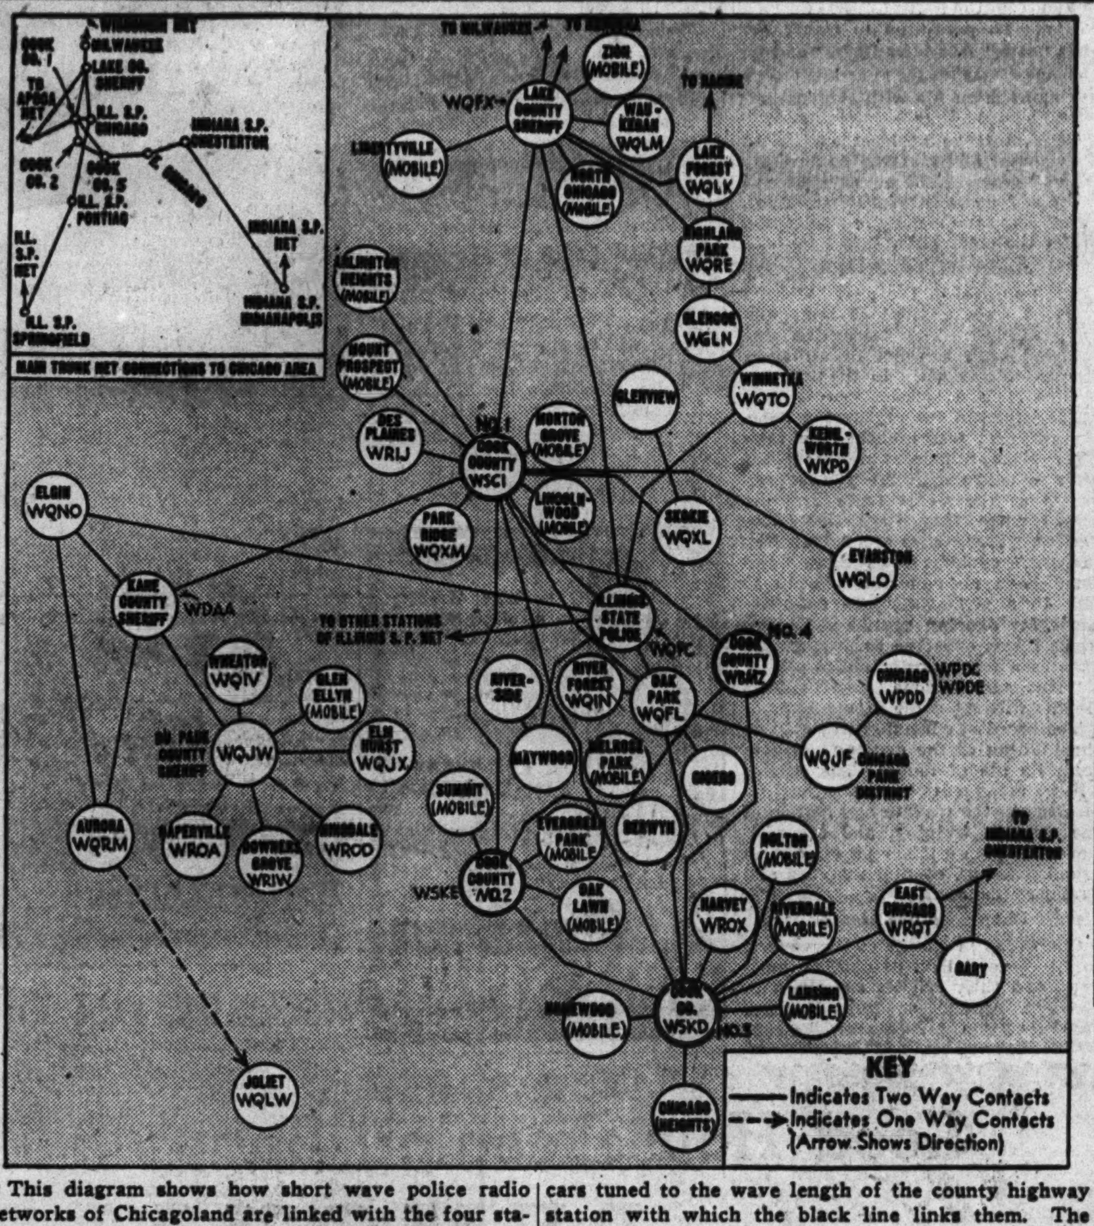
Materials for the articles, including rugs, leather work, baskets, kitchen articles, woodcraft, aprons, and woven goods, have been sold to the men by the government at cost price. Veterans will receive the entire proceeds of the sale.

The activity is under the direct auspices of a committee of which Mrs. Lucille Dowd of Homewood is chairman.

Career Institute Seniors to Present Fashion Show

The senior classes of Career institute, 720 North Michigan avenue, will present a fashion show and bridge party Saturday afternoon in the school's auditorium. Proceeds will go to the scholarship fund.

A Web to Enmesh Wrongdoers



This diagram shows how short wave police radio networks of Chicagoland are linked with the four stations maintained by the Cook county highway police. The call letters indicate the suburb in question has its own wave length and transmitter and receiving system. The suburbs designated "mobile" have squad cars tuned to the wave length of the county highway station with which the black line links them. The smaller diagram shows how regular telephone trunk lines extend the interlocking network over an even larger area.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Dec. 1.

Remove stone bird baths to a shed to prevent cracking during cold weather. All statuary should be removed indoors. Attach a humidifier to radiators to give some humidity in the room where plants are standing. Most rooms are excessively dry and the plants suffer accordingly.

Syringe plants by placing in the tub and forcing water from the hose into all parts of stems and leaves to remove dust and insects. Mealy bugs and red spiders, two insidious pests that are often permitted to accumulate on plants, may be kept under control if syringing is consistently practiced.

Small cacti and other succulents planted in drainageless containers should be watered carefully altho the soil is usually too high in them to hold water. Keep cacti in a south window for best results.

Tuesday, Dec. 2.

Most flowering house plants are grown in comparatively small pots and as a result they become rootbound and soon exhaust the food elements. Applications of liquid food at intervals of about three weeks will keep the plants in good health. A lack of food is indicated by weak stems, small leaves, few flowers or scattered fruits.

Plants grown for their ornamental foliage require considerable amounts of nitrogenous food, altho a complete plant flood is preferable unless one has some knowledge of the particular soil used. Give flowering plants plenty of water or they wilt quickly.

If purchased from the florist it must be remembered that the plants have developed in the greenhouse where the atmospheric conditions are properly maintained. Changing to room conditions effects the plants, but watering can be taken care of in an intelligent manner. Examine the soil each morning and keep it moist.

Wednesday, Dec. 3.

Poinsettias dry out quickly, and the best way to water them is to place the pots in a basin of water, allowing it to stand until the soil is wet thru. Avoid sudden changes of temperature or the leaves will turn yellow and fall.

Some plants do best in a cool temperature, such as the primroses and cyclamen, but they require several sunny hours each day. Examine pot bulbs, such as tulips, narcissi, and hyacinth, and if thoroly rooted bring into heat where they will flower quickly.

Amaryllis bulbs can be planted now. If the bulbs are in pots remove some of the top soil and replace with fresh, rich soil. Water well and not again for some time, for the flower stalk appears before the leaves and little water is needed. These bulbs will flower in hyacinth glasses without soil, but at best the method is utilized as a novelty.

Thursday, Dec. 4.

Protect hardy chrysanthemums during winter. Too much covering is more often responsible for injury than anything else. Often too much is applied during a mild winter which smothers the plants but no one can, with certainty, anticipate winter conditions. Do not apply the covering material too soon—wait until the ground freezes, first cutting back the tops to within 7 or 8 inches of the ground; the stubs serve to hold the material in place.

First apply a thin covering, gradually applying more and more until it may be several inches deep. Material to use may consist of evergreen branches, coarse hay, or other litter that does not pack down. Leaves are excellent when used properly; cornstalks scattered around the plants and then a covering of leaves, held up by the stalks, do very well. Do not uncover too soon in spring.

Friday, Dec. 5.

Start a calla lily indoors. They make fine plants and are easily grown. When well started, these plants require feeding at frequent intervals. Cover the bulbs in outdoor beds after the ground is frozen. This also applies to the perennial borders.

Some perennials, such as the foxglove, Canterbury bell, pinks, Shasta daisies, coreopsis, and irises need only a bit of cover, or just enough to keep the frost in the ground and prevent heaving during spring thaws and subsequent injury.

Growing in their natural habitat, most plants have only leaves to cover them, but these fall gradually, lightly, and do not smother. Leaves can be obtained from oak forests and they do not pack, become soft and decay like those from softwoods.

Saturday, Dec. 6.

Naturalize some of the minor bulbous plants before the season is too advanced. These include the intensely blue muscari or grape hyacinth and the unusual feathered hyacinth; glory-of-the-snow or Chionodoxa with its gayly blue-white streaked flowers; white, Siberian Squills; the Guinea henflower or Fritillaria Meleagris.

Well drained pockets of soil in the rock garden are excellent for some of the small bulbs and tulip species, such as T. chrysantha, Clusiana, Eichleri, Kaufmanniana, and others. Protect during winter.

Sow hardy annuals now if the ground is in suitable condition, for they will start early in spring and flower much sooner than those sown in spring. They include poppies, California poppies, alyssum, cosmos, portulaca, zinnia, snapdragon, gaillardia, kochia, calliopsis, balsam, four-o'clock, Japanese hop, and others. Sow thinly by mixing the finer seed with sand.

THIS SIX ROOM CITY HOUSE HAS 5 FLOOR LEVELS

Home Is Designed in the English Tradition.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

[This is the first of two articles on an interesting home in Chicago.]

Here we find recaptured some of the valiant spirit of traditional English architecture, a spirit deep in the roots of our own colonial traditions and the inspiration of many of our present day homes.

It is the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Anderson, 2222 West 113th place, Chicago. There are six rooms and a very interesting five level floor plan; also a masculine minded nursery bedroom for Kenneth Anderson, aged 4, who already is a lively and companionable member of the household.

Mr. and Mrs. Anderson's corner lot is 50 feet by 156 feet. They chose the modified English type of architecture because they liked the style, felt it suited the site and could be excellently adapted to their individual needs.

Home of Enduring Quality.

There is a definitely enduring quality in the beauty of this English minded home with its exterior walls of dark red brick, its steep, slate colored roofs, its massive chimney, and nicely landscaped lawn.

Mrs. Anderson doesn't believe in the old adage that one must build a house and live in it a year before one knows what one really wants. She said:

"We had studied a great many house plans and given a great deal of thought to what we needed. That's the important thing, after all, I think. If you know your needs and preferences before you decide to build you've gone a long way toward a house that satisfies you after it is finished.

"We had always had a preference for the English type house and liked the floor plans with their five levels that Mr. Boehme submitted to us. They seemed to meet our own needs precisely. We find it very convenient to have our master bedroom on the upper level, above and to the right of Kenneth's room, half a floor level below. There is more privacy for us and less likelihood of waking him if we come home late at night. Later on he can have his own friends in his own room—with less disturbance to the rest of the house."

Economically Planned.

This separation of the boy's room from the master bedroom and also from the living quarters is an idea which should work for general family satisfaction as the years move on.

Inside one finds a thoroly straightforward design, planned for convenience and economy. There is a square front entrance, with coat closet at the left, a reception hall beyond, and then access from this to the rear is thru a second hallway.

There is an open arrangement of living room, dining room and hall, with windows ample for daylight and ventilation and placed to give ample space for furnishings.

The five levels create interest in the plan. Below grade the first and second levels are given over to heater room, laundry, and recreation quarters. On the third or ground level there are the reception hall, in rust and ivory tones; the L-shaped living room and dining room with a great picture bay on the east wall, and the kitchen with its built-in breakfast wall.

4th Floor Guest Room.

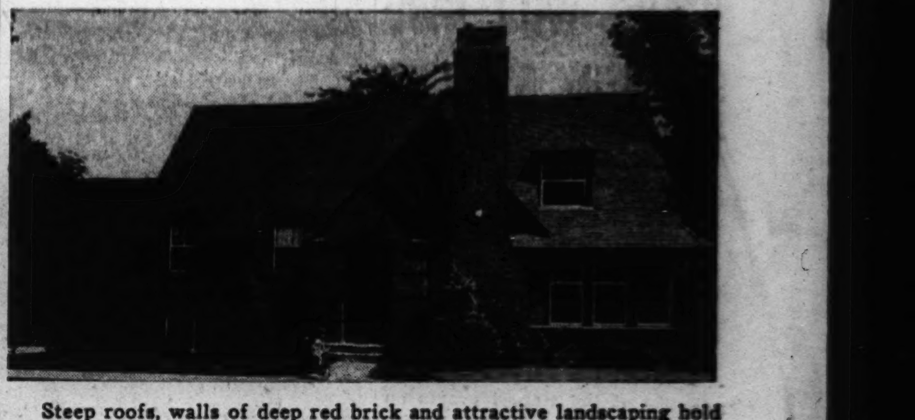
On the fourth floor level is Kenneth's room and also a guest room. The guest room has two large closets, one of them a cedar closet.

"I wanted plenty of closet space and storage space," Mrs. Anderson said. "And I have it. I have eight closets and two linen closets and storage spaces on the west wall and in the basement."

There is a large bathroom on this level with a shower stall enclosure. Then on the fifth floor level there is a light, airy, spacious master bedroom with windows on three sides. In the upper hall of this level there is a closet large enough to be a bedroom, with a generous outside window. Here, too, is a bath. Below is space for a future bedroom.

A very livable floor plan, this.

New Home on Five Levels



Steep roofs, walls of deep red brick and attractive landscaping hold this home securely to the ground and lend an enduring quality to its dignity and beauty. The floor plan is of real interest—five levels. The owners are Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Anderson, 2222 West 113th place,

HAS JOB TRAPPING WILD DUCKS AND LETTING THEM GO

Forest Preserves Aid in Banding Studies.

Catching wild ducks and letting them go is one function of a busy division of the Cook county forest preserve district. The division is headed by Lynn H. Hutchens, wild life technician.

Like most generalities, that is an over simplification. The job has to do with the study of wild life to help guide efforts at conservation.

The important part of Hutchens' work occurs between the catching and releasing, when he clamps a numbered aluminum band loosely about the fowl's leg and tosses the bird into the air to resume its own way of life.

Finders Make Report.

Later some bird bander at another station, or the hunter who bags the fowl will communicate his find to the United States fish and wild life service in Washington, D. C., giving the number and the place where the bird was taken.

The federal service will have a record of the bird, for each of the 2,000 banding stations thruout the nation reports its banding operations. After recording the new information, the service will report it to the station that banded the bird.

By such comparison of notes, technicians can estimate waterfowl population, the proportion of males to females, the approximate life span, the places of origin, the time and route of migrations, and many another fact that helps to direct conservation efforts and fix game laws.

Chicago in Waterfowl Path.

Chicagoland is in the path of the greatest of the nation's four major flyways for waterfowl. Hutchens soon will become a naval aviation cadet, but he has trained his assistant, John Jedlicka, to carry on.

McGinnes slough, a 265 acre marsh lake on a 480 acre forest preserve tract at Orland Park, southwest of Chicago, is the bird banding locale and is an almost ideal waterfowl preserve.

Four bird traps are set up there. Each day during the southward flight, which begins in August and continues sometimes into January, Hutchens and Jedlicka don hip boots, wade out to the traps, catch, band, and release the captives that have accumulated since the last visit, and make a record of their work.

Last year they banded 895 ducks of various varieties. Up to last week, this year's catch consisted of nearly 1,500, nine of which were wearing last year's bands.

Report on Last Year's Birds.

Of last year's 895 birds caught, 69 have been reported on. Of the 69 reports, 44 were from Illinois[mostly south], six were from Missouri, four each from Indiana, Florida, and Louisiana, and one each from Wisconsin, Iowa, Tennessee, Kentucky, Ontario, and Puerto Rico.

The biggest surprise was the one from Ontario, for it meant the duck, banded last fall, doubled back several hundred miles during the southward migration. The Puerto Rican report was freakish also, for ordinarily the ducks that use the Mississippi flyway winter near the mouth of that river.

Ducks which use the Mississippi flyway include teal[which are now in the midst of their southward flight], mallard, black duck, pintail, wood duck, baldpate, redhead, shoveler, ring-necked, buffle-head, and ruddy, to mention only a few.

Studies indicate that the birds travel the same flyways year after year. They indicate too that the southbound fowl take their own sweet time, merely keeping ahead of the icy weather.

Luther College Club.

The Rev. A. O. Storvik, pastor of St. Timothy Lutheran church, will be the speaker at the Chicago Luther College club at 3 o'clock this afternoon in the Norske Klub, 2346 North Kedzie avenue.

BOYS KNOW HOW TO END WARS IN INCIDENT STAGE

Republic Opens Court of Arbitration.

A few adolescent boys still learning their history lessons know something that dictators don't know, nor kings, nor presidents nor other war minded men three times their age. These boys know that nothing is ever settled by a fight.

The mayor of the Boys Brotherhood republic, Alvin Lamm, a dark haired youth who attends Crane High school, says credit for this observation should go to Charles Henry, pudgy city judge from Manley High school. Young Henry says the way to end a fight is not to fight. The proper way is arbitration.

The purpose of the Boys Brotherhood republic is to help boys in trouble. That is why the young judge was concerned when there fell on his ears complaints from neighbors and police about boys fighting in the street.

How Gang Fights Start.

Two boys would have an argument. Maybe it would be over a football game or a dice game or something that somebody said about somebody.

Then one boy would hit the other boy in the eye. Then the other boy would wait until his eye healed and he would pop the other boy on the head. Then the first boy would get a gang of his friends and beat up the second boy. Next in the chapter of settling the argument would be a gang fight with several broken hands, a concussion or two, and broken windows.

Judge Henry, who lives at 3915 West 16th street, extends an invitation to all boys anywhere in the city to use the Boys Brotherhood republic's courtroom at 1530 South Hamlin avenue to settle their differences. The court for outside boys will be open every Sunday evening. Each boy may retain a boy attorney who has passed the bar examinations of the Boys Brotherhood republic.

No One Is Wrong.

"It has to be settled carefully by arbitration," says Mayor Lamm. "You can't ever solve it by saying one is wrong. The best way is to admit that both boys have some good points on the question and both have the bad. Then we can explain away the differences."

One case so far has been settled in the B. B. R. courtroom and there were no black eyes nor split heads required. Two boys started an argument over an interclub football game. It was about to become a gang war when Judge Henry invited them to use the boys' courtroom and have a real trial.

"The only shouting done was by the attorneys," said Mayor Lamm. "And that is to be expected."

When the trial was over the boys accepted the verdict calmly and shook hands. "Hey," said one of them afterwards, "they didn't say just who was wrong."

So every Sunday night the B. B. R. courtroom will open its doors. "The procedure will begin," says the judge, "with a 15 minute intermission of peace when the fighters can tell their stories to their attorneys. They then can decide on whether it will be a judge or jury trial.

Miss Moore will be making her initial appearance on this season's series of Chicago Opera productions on W-G-N-Mutual. Thomas was heard last Monday in "Falstaff."

Miss Moore will sing the title rôle of Floria Tosca; Thomas will be heard as Scarpia.

The supporting cast includes Frederick Jagel, tenor, as Mario Cavaradossi; Vittorio Trevisan, baritone, as Sacristan; Giuseppe Cavadore, tenor, as Spoletta, and Richard Wentworth, basso, as Sciarrone, the gendarme. Carlo Perone will conduct the orchestra.

"La Tosca" provides a tense, exciting drama for Miss Moore and Thomas with a score that includes such arias as "Vissi d'Arte e d'Amour," "E Lucevan le Stelle," and "O Dolci Mani."

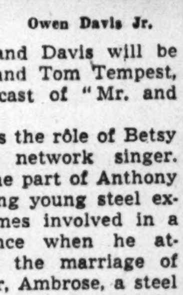
The radio production of the opera will be under the direction of Lou Jakobson. Robert Venables, W-G-N-Mutual announcer, in addition to his running commentary during the performance, will interview one of the members of the Chicago Opera personnel between acts.

Venables knows opera from arias to stage bolts. At the same theater from which he broadcasts each Monday he worked in positions ranging from call boy to assistant stage manager.

Venables' opera commentaries include many anecdotes about the stars performing in each production. Personal, intimate, and interesting they add to the listeners understanding and enjoyment of the world of opera. Venables is a friend of John Charles Thomas, Richard Bonelli, Charles Marshall, and many other famous singers.

ANITA LOUISE, OWEN DAVIS IN A W-G-N DRAMA

Anita Louise and Owen Davis Jr., stars in the play "Mr. and Mrs. North" now appearing at the Harris theater, will be featured in a radio drama, "The Double Crosser," from 4 to 4:30 p. m. today on W-G-N. The play was written by Morrison Wood, who will produce and direct it.



Owen Davis Jr.

Supporting Miss Louise and Davis will be Coburn Goodwin and Tom Tempest, members of the cast of "Mr. and Mrs. North."

Miss Louise plays the rôle of Betsy Bates, glamorous network singer. Davis will enact the part of Anthony Hallam, enterprising young steel executive who becomes involved in a three way romance when he attempts to thwart the marriage of Betsy to his father, Ambrose, a steel magnate. The father is played by Goodwin, and Tom Tempest is cast as the family butler.

Bears' Game on WENR.

When the Chicago Bears, world professional football champions, make their final eastern invasion of the season today to play the Philadelphia Eagles in Philadelphia, Fort Pearson will be on hand to broadcast a play-by-play description of the game at 12:55 p. m. over WENR.

'RIO RITA' WILL BE PRESENTED NEXT ON THEATER OF AIR

The gay, romantic story of "Rio Rita" will be told in song and words on the Chicago Theater of the Air on W-G-N, W59C, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m. next Saturday with Marion Claire, Thomas L. Thomas, and Attilio Baggiore as headliners.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will read a letter from Lord Kemsley, British publisher. This communication was in reply to Col. McCormick's letter to the Briton in which he declared he and many other Americans are willing to aid England in arms "if necessary to prevent your being conquered," but opposed a new American expeditionary force.

Miss Claire will sing the rôle of Rita. Betty Winkler, one of Chicago's leading dramatic stars, will take the speaking lines for the same character. Thomas is cast in the masculine lead of Capt. Jim Stewart and Bret Morrison will take his speaking part. Baggiore will sing the rôle of Roberto, Rio's brother.

Musical background will be supplied by the W-G-N Symphony orchestra under the baton of Henry Weber and the chorus directed by Robert Trendler. John Weigel will be narrator. William A. Bacher is the producer.

Here's the Most Amazing Way To Lose Weight You've Ever Read About!
Here's how to take off ugly fat—without strict diet lists, no strenuous exercises, no drugs. The easy Welch Way! And intelligent, cooperative people who aithfully followed Dr. Frederic Damrau's instructions lost an average of 7 pounds a month. Amazing results sworn to before a Notary Public. And listen how easy it is. Just mix ¾ glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ glass water, and drink before meals and at bedtime. Then this happens: First, you have less desire to eat sweet, fattening foods—thus reducing caloric intake. Second, the natural dextrose in Welch's is quickly consumed. This regime actually helps nature consume excess fat. Yet you needn't suffer a hungry moment. So start reducing the Welch Way today.
Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16. She recommends the easy Welch way to reduce.

GARY G. O. P. AND U. OF C. FRAT AID 'SMOKES' DRIVE

Set Up Boxes to Aid Yanks at Camp.

"Smokes for Yanks!"

A fraternity at the University of Chicago and the Young Republicans' club of Gary yesterday joined the rapidly increasing corps of volunteer workers who are seeing to it that the American soldiers and sailors patroling the Atlantic and on duty at bases in Iceland and the Caribbean area will have cigarets, cigars and tobacco.

The Phi Kappa Psi chapter at the U. of C. have placed a receiving station box in their frat house at 5555 Woodlawn avenue and the 42 house members have resolved to fill it up. The individual contributions of the members have already brought the group's objective closer. Other students on the campus will be invited to the Kappa house to drop a smoke for a Yank into the box.

Leaders of Drive.

Leading the chapter's campaign are Alfred Gentzler, house president; Philip Strick, vice president; John White, treasurer; Jack Kahoun and Chester Smith, secretaries.

The 250 members of the Young Republicans club have each contributed cigarets and cigars to the "Smokes for Yanks!" campaign and have set up 20 receiving station boxes in Gary.

Elie Colosimo, president of the group, said the club will wage a campaign that will get all Gary to remember the men on duty away from home with smokes for Christmas.

Here's How You Can Help.

Every one can help to make it a merrier Christmas for those men. Next time you buy cigars, or a pack of cigarets, or a tin of tobacco, buy one for a Yank and drop it in the receiving boxes which are in stores, restaurants and hotels thruout the city. Cash contributions may be sent to Tribune Charities, Inc., Tribune Tower, Chicago.

YOUR FUTURE

IN prosperous times a cemetery lot is a source of comfort to its owner. A deed to interment property lightens at least some portion of a man's anxiety about the future.

But in these difficult days, cemetery lot ownership helps create confidence in the future in still another way: while rising prices steadily decrease the real worth of your dollar, they have no effect on the value of interment property. Thus, your deed to a cemetery lot—far from representing an expenditure—actually represents a saving.

Let us help you choose your location now. You save if you act promptly. Drive out or phone.

SUGGEST ROUTES TO HELP DRIVERS AVOID DELAYS

Motorists Can Escape Calumet Tangles.

Motorists who travel thru the increasingly congested Calumet region would save time by taking one of several alternate routes, the Chicago Motor club pointed out last week. A survey shows that 50,000 vehicles sometimes use Indianapolis boulevard [U. S. 12, 20, and 41] in a single day.

The volume of traffic in that district has become a problem for three principal reasons, Charles M. Hayes, motor club president, explained. Defense industries are employing more workers, there has been a steady increase in interstate travel, and there are more registered motorists.

Home-to-Job Traffic.

The problem is considered twofold. One is local traffic which involves workers in the Calumet region who drive back and forth to their homes, usually in Chicago's south side. The other is thru traffic coming from Indiana and the east, some of which desires to miss Chicago.

Local traffic passing between South Chicago and northern Indiana can circumvent this bottleneck area by a number of by-passes. The following is considered preferred: proceeding south from 95th street, there are three principal routes which may be used—Doty avenue to 130th street to Brainerd; Torrence avenue to Brainerd; and Avenue O to Brainerd. Brainerd then leads across the state line to Calumet avenue [U. S. 41] which is followed a short distance to Indiana 312 which leads to U. S. 12 east of East Chicago.

For motorists traveling north from 95th street, Yates, Jeffery, and Stony Island are all streets less heavily traveled than U. S. 41 [South Shore drive] and all lead to Jackson park.

By-Pass Routes.

Motorists who live on the southwest side or motorists who are driving to points north of Chicago may avoid city traffic by going a few miles out of their way. U. S. 30, the farthest south, and U. S. 6 are both good highways. Route 30 may be reached by Illinois 83, which crosses such principal routes as Harlem, Cicero, Western, and Halsted. Both may also be reached by Torrence avenue.

Testimony of motorists, according to the motor club, shows that the advantages of time and convenience outweigh the longer distance on these routes.

Ald. William A. Rowan [10th] is currently advocating a plan which would split routes U. S. 12, 20, and 41, bringing them in on different streets in order to eliminate congestion.

The opening of 106th street between Indianapolis boulevard and Torrence soon will provide another artery for south side traffic. Confusion among motorists, pedestrians and surface line cars is expected to result when it is first opened, however, since there are no traffic lights at the intersection with Indianapolis.

600,000 Transfer Yearly.

J. C. Johnson of the Chicago and Calumet District Transit company, has pointed out that 600,000 persons transfer between the Chicago surface lines and the Indiana bus system during the course of a year, resulting in an average of one coach every 6 minutes during a 22 hour day. Ald. Rowan will request the city and state to make traffic counts at the intersection to determine what form of protection would be adequate.

DINNER PLANNED BY ENGLEWOOD HISTORY GROUP

The fifth annual dinner meeting of the Englewood Historical assocition will be held at 6:30 o'clock Tuesday at the Englewood YMCA. Other speakers include Ray Blunt, who will tell of plans of the Southtown Planning association; Miss Pearl Field, who will tell of the work of the West Side Historical association in the schools, and the Rev. Donald Harrington and William McDonnell.

Other officers are Mrs. Martin Otto, vice president; Frank G. Kartzke, secretary; A. Woodcock, treasurer; Miss Diekman, program chairman; Mrs. Nick De Young, social chairman; J. F. Patton, historian, and Miss Beatrice Carswell, custodian.

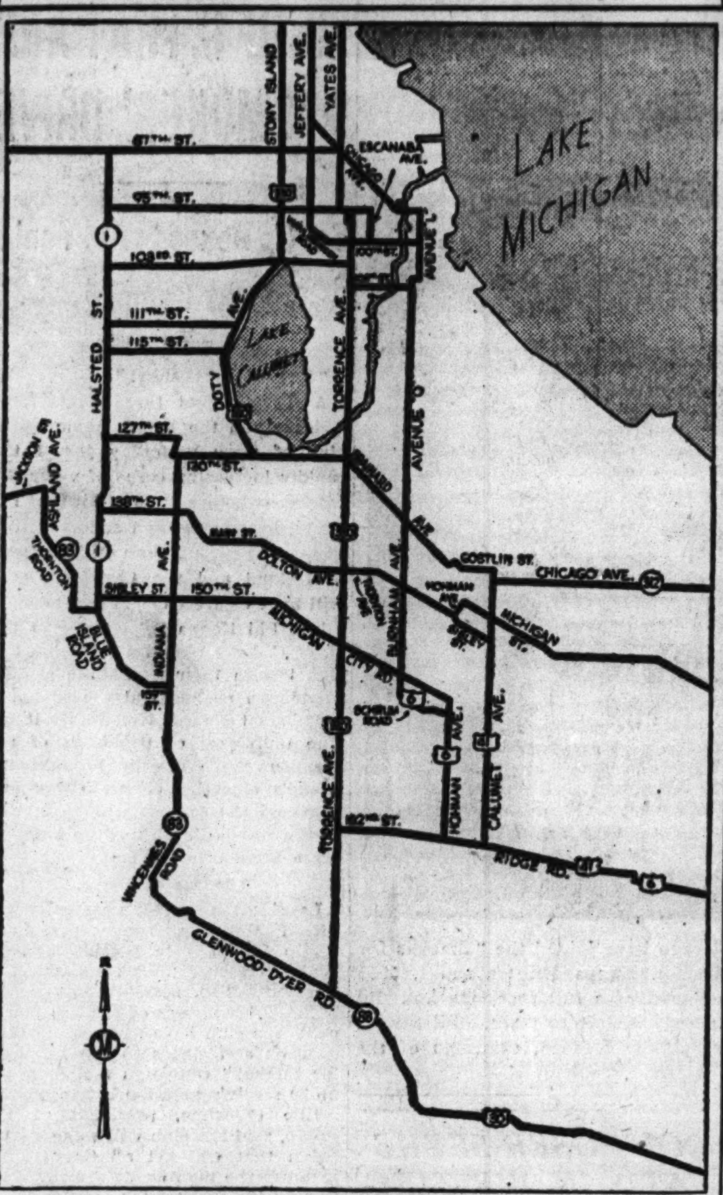
How to Avoid Traffic Delays



These are the alternate routes suggested by the Chicago Motor club for motorists who wish to travel to or from the city without using Indianapolis boulevard and South Shore drive or who wish to circumvent Chicago traffic.

TECH STUDENTS TO PLAY RADIO HIDE AND SEEK

Hunt Transmitter in Test Sunday.

antenna, will be able to establish the exact geographical direction of the hidden transmitter. Having determined the direction in degrees of the compass, the map man will strike a line on his chart from the listening point in the degree-direction obtained from the first listening.

At the signing off signal the teams will disperse, each taking a direction perpendicular or at a wide angle to the first line of location drawn on the map, and traveling some five or six miles, depending upon the efficiency of its equipment.

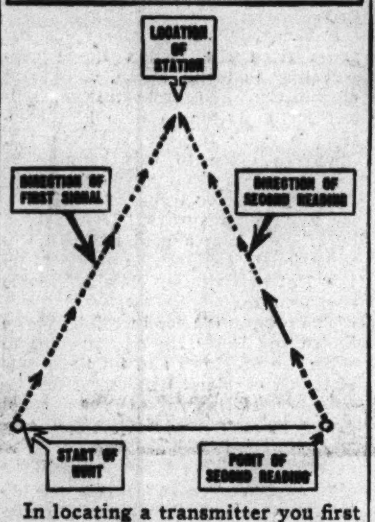
Now the searchers, no longer having a timetable of transmission periods, must wait for the next signal. From the second position, when the signal comes, another degree-direction line will be taken. The point of intersection of the two lines on the map will reveal to the sleuths the approximate location of Seda's hideout. The more patient and painstaking will make three or four readings before setting out for the kill.

Final Chance for Laggards.

To give the laggards a final chance, the station again will transmit continuously from 12:30 to 1:30 o'clock, that is it will if some of the intelligence hams haven't by that time rooted out the ham fifth columnist and put his transmitter out of business.

Amateur short wave operators have an intercollegiate organization, Rho Epsilon fraternity. The Armour hams are Epsilon chapter. Members assisting President Seda with today's experiment are Jorma Leskinen, Curtis Hepperle, Ernest Schrot, and Rudolph Oras, all studying electrical engineering.

Locating a Transmitter



In locating a transmitter you first draw a line across your map indicating the compass direction from which the signal was received. Then move several miles at a great angle. Now draw a line indicating the compass direction from the new point. The transmitter will be at the intersection of the two lines.

CLUB ANNOUNCES TRAFFIC MARKERS AT BLUE ISLAND

The safety and traffic department of the Chicago Motor club has announced that 17 new traffic signs have been erected in Blue Island.

School crossing warnings were placed at Maple avenue north of New street, at New street east and west of Maple avenue; on Ann street north and south of Grove street; on James street east of Ann street, and on Grove street east of Ann street.

New signs were installed on two corners at Prairie, Oak, Walnut, and Union streets where they intersect Greenwood avenue.

An American flag will be presented to Draft board No. 9, 1233 East 55th street, at 8 o'clock Wednesday evening by Mrs. John F. Meara, 6153 South Laflin street. The flag is a memorial to Mrs. Meara's brother, Thomas S. Gilboy, who served with the 65th field artillery, Battery D, during the first World war and died last April 8.

The presentation will be made by Mrs. Warren Roush, 1118 East 82d street, Americanism chairman of Woodlawn American Legion auxiliary, and members of both Woodlawn post and its auxiliary will attend.

Get more for your money and save time and energy with helpful Tribune want ads.

"LIKE THE APARTMENT, JOE?"

"I sure do. But how did you find one so easily?"

"Right out of the Tribune want ads. I knew just where to go to find what we wanted."

Have you tried this easy way to locate an apartment? Because the Tribune prints more apartments to rent want advertising than all other Chicago newspapers combined, you have the biggest choice of apartments when you consult these offerings.

Selection is easy because offers are grouped by locations in Chicago and suburbs and by numbers of rooms. It takes only a few minutes to list the ones which interest you and by inspecting these only you save time and useless stair climbing to look over apartments which could not possibly suit you. Review the Apartments to Rent columns in the Tribune want ad section now.

"Do I Smell Apple Pie?"

How much longer are you going to put up with a hopelessly old stove? Or a broken-down washing machine? Or do without any one of a dozen or more household appliances which can save you time and energy?

Good appliances need not be extravagant purchases if you watch the Household Appliances column in the Tribune want ad section. There you will find bargains in stoves, refrigerators, vacuum cleaners, ironers and many other helpful appliances. Review these money-saving offers now.

"Keep it dark, Bill—I never dared attempt one until we got our table top stove"

"Over a Thousand already!"

"Is Dad Using the Car?"

"Not a chance, sis—I asked. He's so proud of it I'm almost afraid to ask him for it."

You can be proud of the car you buy if you get one of the late model bargains advertised in the Tribune want ad section. They are good looking, sweet running and economical to own and drive.

Right now, while you are reading the paper, review today's Used Automobiles for Sale listings. Note the variety and selection of late models. Your present car may be the only down payment required. If you need a better car, why not go after one of these bargains today?

"The raise did it, honey. They're paying real money for trained men."

What could you buy with the extra pay trained men and women are getting now?

If you want the specialized training which can help you get ahead faster, consult the Instruction, Trade Schools, Musical and Dramatic and Dressmaking and Millinery Schools columns in the Tribune want ad section. There you can select the right course to qualify you for a better job at more pay.

Because they get better results, want ad users place more want advertising in the Tribune than they place in all other Chicago newspapers combined.

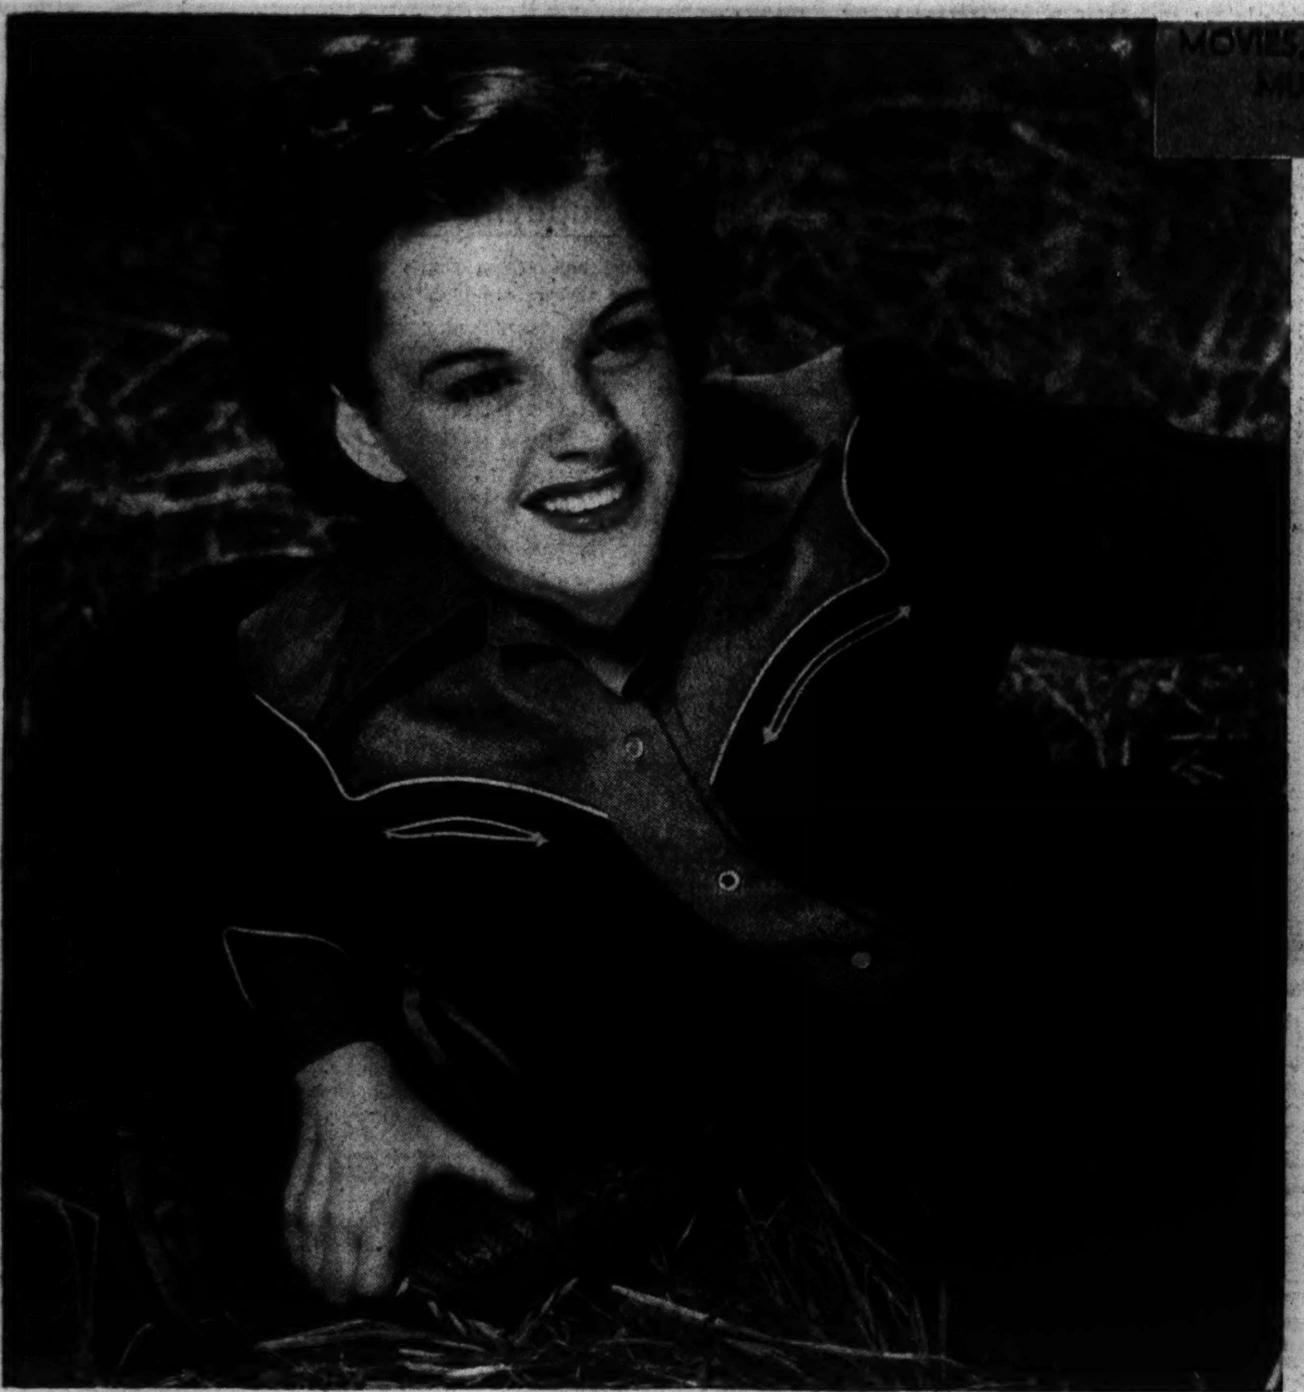
On the Screen



"Babes on Broadway" is the title of Judy Garland's next film. In this production she's co-starred with Mickey Rooney. Here's a new picture of Judy, who in real life is Mrs. David Rose.

The dark haired beauty pictured here is Mona Marjs. She plays one of the feminine leads opposite Jeffrey Lynn and Philip Dorn in "Underground."

Alexis Smith is one of Warner Brothers' most promising starlets. She's currently appearing in "Dive Bomber."

Drama Critic Discusses Problems of Local Producers

Selection of Plays, Actors Called Vital

By Cecil Smith.

The whole confused subject of local theatrical production has come into the foreground of attention again, with the presentation of "Village Green" at the Great Northern theater. The Carl Allensworth comedy, which relighted the historic Jackson boulevard house on Thanksgiving night, marked the beginning of an attempt to keep the theater occupied all season, at an economical $1.65 top, with a series of "moderate Broadway successes." Clyde Elliott and Lee Sloan, the new producers, believe that there is a real and growing audience for plays produced specifically for Chicago and retailed at a reasonable price.

Even tho I could not conscientiously recommend "Village Green" as anything very intoxicating in the way of entertainment, I wish our new local producers all the success in the world. With a little luck and a little foresight, they may win back to the theater a sizable audience for whom $2.75 and $3.30 seem like astronomical prices for an orchestra seat. This may reëstablish the one-time "family trade," which has by now been thoroly wooed and won by the movies.

• • •

The ultimate success of the project depends upon two equally important factors — how wise the selection of plays is, and how well they are done. Before "Village Green" opened at the Great Northern, I racked my brain to discover why Mr. Sloan and Mr. Elliott had determined to cast their lot with that particular play. I had seen the play in New York with Frank Craven in the rôle Jack Norworth acts here, and I had been lulled gently to sleep by it. And not even the presence of the popular Mr. Craven in the cast could keep "Village Green" alive in New York beyond its 25th performance.

Jack Norworth.
[Bloom Photo.]

I suspect, tho I do not know, that the explanation is very simple. Probably no play of more promising aspect was available for independent Chicago production. There is a shortage of first class scripts nowadays, what with Hollywood attracting a large share of the nation's best playwrights away from Broadway. Already the theater zone in New York is strewn with the wreckage of plays presented this fall which were not interesting enough to make the grade commercially. Virtually every script of great merit falls into the hands of one or another of the Broadway producers, and every one of these scripts which is translated into success on the stage is sent out on tour by the original producer.

• • •

Mr. Elliott and Mr. Sloan, and any one else who wants to compete with the established Broadway producers, are therefore confronted with the tough problem of securing rights to plays which are amusing or striking enough to warrant the expense of production. With business picking up notably in all the cities of the road, Broadway producers are slower than ever to relinquish any rights to local entrepreneurs.

The history of "George Washington Slept Here" presents a clear example of this trend. When the New York run of this diverting Kaufman and Hart farce was over, the play was not sent on tour, because the rather heavy mechanics of its staging allowed an unduly small margin of profit. Accordingly it was farmed out to various summer theaters in the east and in the middle west; in this region it was given by professionals at Port Washington and by amateurs at Williams Bay and elsewhere.

By all the usual rules of show business "George Washington Slept Here," having been released last summer even to amateurs, ought to be available to Mr. Sloan and Mr. Elliott, who undoubtedly could make a good thing of it in Chicago. But it is not available, if a recent report in Variety is correct; the revival of business on the road is apparently about to lead to the formation of a New York produced road company, and that puts an end to any immediate notion of a local production.

Good actors are almost as hard to secure as good plays. At present the United States has two markets for acting talent—New York for the legitimate stage and Hollywood for the movies. Unemployed actors do not like to stray far away from one or the other of these centers of activity, for important rôles are sometimes cast on a few hours' notice. Oftentimes an actor or actress may obtain a long and successful engagement as a result of a chance meeting with a producer in Sardi's or at the Stork club; a producer confronted with a choice between an actor within easy telephone reach and an actor a thousand miles away, is likely to choose the actor who is at the other end of a five cent phone call.

These, I believe, are the two greatest obstacles in the way of any one who wants to make Chicago a production center. I do not mean to sound like a calamity howler, however, and Mr. Elliott and Mr. Sloan may know how to secure a long succession of good plays and a superior aggregation of actors. I certainly hope so, for their sake and for the profit of Chicago and the middle west. We could do with a small theatrical renaissance right now.

APPEARS IN 'CLAUDIA'

Marguerite Namara appears in "Claudia" as that flamboyant opera singer, Mme. Daruschka. Chicago's oldest comedy is still packing them in at the Selwyn theater.
[Seymour Photo.]

Notes of the Theater

Judging by telephone calls to this department it is not too premature to announce special Christmas and New Year's Eve performances of the local theatrical fare. "Louisiana Purchase," the musical comedy at the Erlanger theater, will give two performances on the night that 1942 rolls in. The first, at the usual time of 8:30, has a price scale ranging from $2.20 to $6.60. The second, starting at midnight, is scaled from $1.65 to $5.50.

The management of the musical hit has conceived of a convenient Christmas gift that takes the form of a holiday greeting, which when brought to the box office will entitle the holder to a ticket or tickets for any performance the holder selects. These gifts can be purchased at the box office or by mail order.

The author and director of "Claudia," Rose Franken, was in town last week to look over the Chicago company of her comedy success—to check up on the performance and visit with the members of the cast. She is currently relaxing—if you can use that verb about the busy Miss Franken—from having helped to organize and direct the third or Pacific coast company of "Claudia," which has just been launched. She arrived in time to help the local production celebrate its 100th performance last night. So far more than 100,000 people have seen the play here.

During Christmas week "Claudia" will give three matinées. The regular one on Wednesday, Dec. 24, will be skipped in favor of one on the next day, Thursday. This performance will start at 3 o'clock. Then there also will be matinées on the following Friday and Saturday, both of which will start at the usual time of 2:35.

Following the run of "Blossom Time," which expects to close on Dec. 20, the Grand Opera house will be taken over by another revival of "The Student Prince." This will open on Dec. 25 for a two and one-half week engagement, and on the following Monday, Jan. 12, "Pal Joey" will take its place. The John O'Hara-Rodgers and Hart musical comedy was supposed to come to Chicago last fall, but its popularity in New York kept it there up until last night. Vivienne Segal and George Tapps head the cast of this much acclaimed show.

The new Mitzi in the current, umpteenth edition of "Blossom Time," is announced as a protégée of the opera star, Grace Moore. Patricia Wing by name, she hails from the town of Paterson, N. J., altho she is of Russian and Bavarian parentage. Her mother was a former grand opera singer, and gave her her first musical instruction when the girl was at a very tender age. It is recorded that Patricia gave a piano recital in New York's austere Town Hall when she was only 12. Four years later she made her first professional appearance as a singer in New York. It was J. J. Shubert, producer of "Blossom Time," who heard her sing and gave her the part she now plays nightly at the Grand—her first major rôle.

Patricia Wing.
[Korman photo.]

Emlyn Williams' play, "The Corn Is Green," completed a year's run in New York last Tuesday night. It is the longest such engagement the play's star, Ethel Barrymore, has enjoyed thus far in her long and varied career. Promised to local Theater guild and American Theater society subscribers, the drama probably will close in the east after the holiday season and jump directly to Chicago without any stopovers.

Owen Davis, who dramatized the "whodunnit" at the Harris theater, known as "Mr. and Mrs. North," has written to his son, one of the play's stars, to say he is busy on another drama script. The prolific and venerable American playwright is concocting a play about the FBI, and he expects to have it completed next summer in time for a straw hat theater tryout.

Jean Arden Cobb of the "Village Green" company is a specialist in caustic or trouble brewing women. At the moment she is playing the snooping Harmony Godkin at the Great Northern theater. Her previous Chicago appearance was as one of the nastier females in "The Women," when it played at the Auditorium theater. Between times she has been seen as the country-detesting wife of "George Washington Slept Here."

John Golden's next production is now scheduled to be "Not on Friday," a play by a newcomer, George O'Neal. It is to be hoped that Mr. Golden will serve Chicago as well as he did with the entertaining "Theater" and give this city a view of his latest production before subjecting it to the none too kindly treatment of the eastern critics.

Tributary theater notes:

The Garfield Park Theater guild will stage "Yes, My Darling Daughter" on Tuesday and Wednesday night at the Garfield park auditorium, Central Park and Washington boulevards.

"Rat Holler," the current production of the James Hargis Connelly players, will be shown tonight, Saturday and next Sunday in their intimate playhouse in the Kimball building.

Martha King's dramatization of Dickens' "A Christmas Carol" will be staged by the Jack and Jill Players at Forester's theater at 2:30 on Saturday afternoon.

The Goodman theater dramatic school opens a two and one-half week engagement of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" on Thursday night.

Rica Martine Adds Spark to Show at Chez

By Will Davidson.

Rica Martine, whose last name is pronounced as if her first name were "Dry," has brought a spark and a breath of life into the current Chez Paree show that it rather definitely needed.

Senorita Martine is beautiful. Your first inclination is to regret her fairly obvious imitations of Carmen Miranda, but when she goes into a nitwit routine with Lou Holtz you get the idea.

Mr. Holtz and Ethel Shutta are the mainstays of this revue, without being particularly sensational. There are very few men who can match Lou's finesse as a dialectician, and when his material is clean and good he's hilarious. His timing, his perfection of detail, his ability to understate what a lesser talent would smother with elaboration make his yarns gems of listening matter. It must be a tough job to be so good, however, for all too occasionally ennui gets in its work and Lou lays an egg.

Ethel Shutta can't quite get over Chicago's elephantine memory. Let her come out here with some new songs and what happens? The crowd laughs, but immediately sets up a clamor for "Fifty Thousand Indians" or "Major Burns" or any one of a dozen old favorites. And bless her heart, she gives.

Other acts in the revue are the Six Willys, fast jugglers; Lois Harper, tap dancer, and the Rossillianos, Polish dance team. Lou Breese plays his usual fine music, and now has two girl singers, the Williams sisters. Bobby Ramos continues as an elegant alternate music maker.

• • •

They haven't exactly turned the Panther room into a tea garden, but they've turned a Teagarden into the Panther room. The sturdier folks love it, for the Hotel Sherman's jive hive is filled with musical blues as only Mr. T. can play them. Those blues come out of a powerful brass section, they come bounding off the drums. And they come from the mouths of Jack and his two swell vocalists, Kitty Kallen and David Allen. That trio, incidentally, turns in the neatest trick of the evening with their presentation of "The Waiter, the Porter, and the Upstairs Maid."

Jack Teagarden.

Walter Donahue, singing, dancing master of ceremonies, tops the floor show with his slightly too gracious but energentic work. His support comes from a dog act, Carlton Emmy and his Mad Wags, and a group of models who display southern play wear with a comparatively minor amount of self consciousness.

For fun, Carl Marx, the clown, still is the Sherman's finest attraction. He's a never tiring masterpiece of humor.

• • •

The singing find of the season is now doing her charming stuff with the Noteables, that entirely delightful little crew of musicians in the Buttery of the Ambassador West. She is Mary Jane Howard, graduate of the north shore taverns, and if she isn't a star within a year there's something wrong with the booking agencies. Or my judgment. The Noteables, before Howard, were the best four man crew in what musical business comes this way. Now they're whatever comes next above best.

• • •

You've heard practically nothing else but Tschaikowsky's piano concerto lately, but until you've heard Griff Williams play it in the Little Show in the Empire room your time has been wasted. Deploying his brass, reed, and string units around the room under cover of a blackout song by Bob Kirk, Griff springs the beautiful strains of the number on you with dramatic effect. It is a great arrangement.

This entire Little Show is one of the best yet. Featured act is Virginia Austin and her puppets. Altho her material is weak, her act is charming, and is excellent for this spot. You can't escape, however, the fact that it is Griff Williams who makes this show. The charm and the musical talent that have been setting records and may yet keep Eddy Duchin out of the room for another couple of months is the greatest single commodity the Palmer House has had for sale in its big room in many a year.

At the Oriental theater the stage attraction is the A. B. Marcus All New Girl Revue, which promises a bevy of beautiful girls and a host of other entertainers. On the screen is "Public Enemies."

The Rialto theater's stage show is headed by Eve Arden, known as the "Park Avenue Lady Godiva." An Australian film, "40,000 Horsemen and a Girl" is the film.

Concerts

Next Sunday brings a plethora of musical attractions to town:

Cecil Leeson, saxophonist, will be heard in the afternoon in Kimball hall in what promises to be a novel recital. A Concerto for saxophone by the Czech composer, Jaromir Weinberger, will be given its local première at that time.

J. Charles Gilbert, the Schubert of many a production of "Blossom Time" and soloist on the Grant park series last summer, will give his first Chicago recital in the afternoon at the Civic theater.

Daniel Ericourt, pianist, will play works by Bach, Ravel, Chopin, and Debussy in a recital in Orchestra hall in the afternoon.

The Fine Arts string quartet will give the second of its series of concerts in Fullerton hall in the late afternoon. The program lists Mozart's Quintet in E flat for horn and strings, Hindemith's Third quartet, and the Brahms Sextet in B flat.

Sir Thomas Beecham, the noted English conductor, will lecture on Mozart and his works in the Arts club in the evening.

POPULAR RECORDINGS

One of those titles you wish you'd thought up — "Horse 'n Boogie" — graces about the hottest number Abe Lyman has played for Bluebird in many a turntable turn. It is backed by a satisfactory "I Wish I Had a Dime."

John Kirby, always reliable, goes positively impressionistic in his slow, weird "Night Whispers." Back of it is a gentlemanly sort of jump number, "Tweed Me." [Victor]. An old favorite, "In the Hall of The Mountain King," gets a neat swing treatment from Jan Savitt, also Victor. Ray Eberle's singing makes Glenn Miller's "Dreamsville, Ohio," a promising platter. [Bluebird]. And Tommy Dorsey has cooked up a strong version of "Somebody Loves Me" for Victor.

A few weeks ago at a ringside table in Chicago's Bismarck hotel Art Kassel was talking eagerly about a new tune, "Angeline." It sounded good, even when he hummed it. Now it's on wax and will be featured in a Fitch Bandwagon show. It is backed by Marion Holmes' cute vocalizing of "I'm a Little Teapot." [Bluebird].

Another novel goes musical, in title at least. This one is "One Foot in Heaven." Vaughn Monroe makes the tune a slow rhythm tempter.

Grace Moore and Jagel Appear in Two Operas This Week

Company Will Present Three Puccini Works

By Edward Barry.

This is Grace Moore and Frederick Jagel week at the Civic Opera house. The Chicago Opera company is presenting these two distinguished American artists in "Tosca" tomorrow evening and "La Bohème" Saturday afternoon.

Douglas Beattie. [Jackson Photo.]

This fourth and penultimate week of the season could also be billed as Puccini week, for all three of the Italian master's familiar works are scheduled for performance. Besides "Tosca" and "La Bohème" there is "Madame Butterfly" Wednesday night. Great interest attaches to this production because it will bring forward Licia Albanese for her first Chicago Cio-Cio-San.

Miss Moore has had one of those Horatio Alger careers in which pluck and luck and ability and hard work have all figured largely. She bravely gave up a promising career as choir singer in a small Tennessee church and went first to Washington, then to New York. In the latter city she sang for a while in a Greenwich village café, but her ambitions transcended even this, and it was not long before she had broken into musical comedy. She was a great success in this line of work and was prominently featured in Irving Berlin's Music Box Revue.

• • •

Still unsatisfied, she applied to the Metropolitan opera for an audition, which was granted. She was turned down and, afire with ambition, she sailed off to Europe for a year and a half's intensive study. Again she rapped on the Metropolitan's inhospitable door and this time was admitted. She made her debut in "La Bohème" early in 1928.

Other operatic engagements in both America and Europe followed. Miss Moore still had radio and the movies to conquer, and this she proceeded to do in short order. She became a regular feature of network broadcasting and one of the big boxoffice draws of the film business. Even now, seven years after its production, her picture, "One Night of Love," lingers in the minds of countless movie addicts.

In the last few years Miss Moore has done a variety of things. For example, she studied the part of Louise in the Charpentier opera of the same name with the composer himself and sang it both for the films and on the operatic stage.

• • •

Mr. Jagel is the Brooklyn born tenor who started his adult life as an insurance man but who, a few years later, became a familiar figure in Italian opera houses. He had decided to drop his insurance work and to devote the bulk of his time to music study. As Frederico Jeghelli he sang in Turin, Milan, Rome and other cities, returning to America in 1927 [when he was 30] to make his Metropolitan debut. Since then he has had innumerable operatic engagements, not only in New York but in Chicago, Ravinia park, San Francisco, Los Angeles, and other centers as well. He also has done considerable concert work.

Readers with long memories may remember that it was Mr. Jagel who, four seasons ago, made a quick dash by air from New York to Chicago to take part in a performance of Bellini's "Norma." Martinelli, scheduled for the rôle, had fallen ill. The curtain had to be held, but Jagel arrived, and gave a highly creditable performance.

Miss Albanese, next Wednesday's Butterfly, is an Italian soprano who made her Chicago operatic debut only last Nov. 10. As Micaela in "Carmen" she impressed her audience by the perfection of her style and the charm of her stage presence.

• • •

Moore, Jagel, and Albanese are far from furnishing all of the cast interest of this fourth opera week. To mention only a few others, there is John Charles Thomas playing his powerful Scarpia tomorrow night, Vittorio Trevisan doing his famous Sacristan in the same preformance, Douglas Beattie shouldering important rôles in three of the week's operas ["Tosca" tomorrow, "Butterfly" Wednesday, and "Martha" Saturday night], George Czaplicki playing his noble Sharpless Wednesday, and his bluff Marcel Saturday afternoon, James Melton singing both Pinkerton Wednesday and Lionel Saturday night, Charlotte Symons taking the rôle of Marguerite in Friday's "Faust," Roberto Silva doing his first Chicago Mephistopheles in the same performance, Richard Bonelli singing Valentine [also in "Faust"], and Josephine Antoine singing the name part in the Saturday night "Martha."

Either Carlo Peroni or Emile Cooper conducts every performance except Wednesday's. On that evening Giuseppe Bamboschek, who has had extensive experience directing in the Metropolitan and other opera houses, will be in charge.

• • •

Monday at 8—Puccini's "Tosca," with Grace Moore, Frederick Jagel, Giuseppe Cavadore, John Charles Thomas, Vittorio Trevisan, Douglas Beattie, and Richard Wentworth. Conductor: Carlo Peroni.

Wednesday at 8—Puccin's "Madame Butterfly," with Licia Albanese, Jane Johnson, Ada Paggi, James Melton, Giuseppe Cavadore, George Czaplicki, Stefan Kozakevich, and Douglas Beattie. Conductor: Giuseppe Bamboschek [debut].

Friday at 8—Gounod's "Faust," with Charlotte Symons, Margery Mayer, May Barron, Sydney Rayner, Richard Bonelli, George Czaplicki, and Stefan Kozakevich. The Littlefield ballet. Conductor: Emile Cooper.

Saturday at 2—Puccini's "La Bohème," with Grace Moore, Dorothy Kirsten, Frederick Jagel, Giuseppe Cavadore, George Czaplicki, Roberto Silva, Stefan Kozakevich, and Richard Wentworth. Conductor: Emile Copper.

Saturday at 8—Flotow's "Martha," with Josephine Antoine, Coe Glade, James Melton, Douglas Beattie, Richard Wentworth, and Stefan Kozakevich. The Littlefield ballet. Conductor: Carlo Peroni.

Monday, Dec. 8, at 8—Rossini's "The Barber of Seville," with Josephine Antoine, Ada Paggi, Nino Martini, Anthony Marlowe, Richard Bonelli, Vittorio Trevisan, Virgilio Lazzari, and Richard Wentworth. Conductor: Carlo Peroni.

VISITING CONDUCTOR

Tomorrow night Vladimir Golschmann will conduct the visiting St. Louis Symphony orchestra in a concert in Orchestra hall. The soloist, Mischa Mischakoff, is the former concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony. [Day Photo.]

Notes of Music and Musicians

On Monday night the St. Louis Symphony orchestra will pay one of its infrequent visits to Chicago and give a concert in Orchestra hall. Vladimir Golschmann, its conductor, is better known here than his ensemble for he has directed the Chicago Symphony on the Ravinia festivals of 1937 and 1939. As soloist on its program the St. Louis Symphony will offer Mischa Mischakoff. The violinist is no stranger to Orchestra hall, since he performed on its concert stage on countless occasions as a former concertmaster of the Chicago Symphony. Today he is concertmaster of the NBC Symphony orchestra.

Tomorrow's program offers one novelty and three familiar items:

Overture and Allegro .... Couperin
[Transcribed for orchestra by Darius Milhaud]
[First performance in Chicago]
Concerto for Violin, No. 3, G Major [Kochel 216] .... Mozart
Mischa Mischakoff.
Orchestral Fragments, Second Series, from "Daphnis and Chloe" .... Ravel
Symphony No. 5, Opus 47 .... Shostakovich

Ella Steele, soprano, will give a recital in Kimball hall on Thursday evening under the sponsorship of Zeta chapter of Phi Beta. Miss Steele will be remembered as one of the soloists in last season's presentation of Pierné's "The Children at Bethlehem" by the Chicago Symphony. She has scheduled a promising list of songs for her program—compositions by Donaudy, Marx, Arensky, Mozart, Obradors, Pierné, Ravel, and others.

"Rigoletto" will be staged by the American Opera company in Kimball hall this evening under the direction of John Alten. Edith Confare will sing Gilda, Arthur Wilkensen the Duke of Mantua, and Martin Boughan the title rôle. Next Saturday and Sunday the company will give "Faust" in English.

The Chicago Chamber Music society presents the Russian Trio in the second of its Tuesday morning series at the Arts club this week. The program includes Schumann's Trio in D minor, Opus 63, No. 1, and Turina's Trio in B minor, Opus 76, No. 2.

On Saturday afternoon the Chicago Public library will present the following program on its free concert of recordings:

Quartet, A Major .... Boccherini
"La Mer" .... Debussy
Symphony No. 1, C Minor .... Brahms

Three orchestral excerpts from Shostakovich's opera, "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk" form the major novelty on the Illinois Symphony orchestra's program in the Civic theater tomorrow night. It was this work which was the direct cause of the composer's brief lapse from governmental grace, when an article in the Moscow Pravda denounced the opera as theatrically vulgar and musically formalistic and bourgeois.

A second Chicago première on the program, to be conducted by Izler Solomon, is the Norfolk Rhapsody No. 1, composed in 1906 by the eminent English composer, Ralph Vaughan Williams.

The soloist for the evening will be Jane Nelson, Chicago contralto. She is one of the winners of the Chicagoland Music Festival and has appeared in leading rôles in the Fine Arts opera productions.

The program:

Overture to "Cosi fan tutte" .... Mozart
"Che faro senza Euridice," from "Orfeo and Euridice" .... Gluck
Jane Nelson.
Symphony No. 2, D Major; Opus 73 .... Brahms
"Ah, mon fils," from "Le Prophète" .... Meyerbeer
Jane Nelson.
Three fragments from "Lady Macbeth of Mzensk" .... Shostakovich
[First performance in Chicago.]
Norfolk Rhapsody No. 1 .... Vaughan Williams
[First performance in Chicago.]
Rhumba, from Symphony No. 2 .... McDonald

The Lutheran Oratorio Society of Chicago, Robert Reuter, conductor, offers one of the earliest of the many performances of Handel's "Messiah" that that oratorio gets at this season of the year. The chorus will sing it on Friday night in Kimball hall. Earl Mitchell will be the accompanying organist, and the soloists will be Ethel Reid Lundberg, soprano; Gertrude Gressens, contralto; Ralph Niehaus, tenor, and J. Edward Martin, bass.

Joseph Golan, 10 year old violin prodigy, will give a recital in Kimball hall this afternoon. Despite his tender age he has appeared as soloist with the American Concert orchestra and has been a winner in the Chicagoland Music Festival concerts.

Orchestra to Honor Mozart Anniversary

[Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, one of the most gifted composers the world has known, died at Vienna on Dec. 5, 1791. In recognition of the 150th anniversary of his death, Frederick Stock will conduct the Chicago Symphony orchestra in an all-Mozart concert in Orchestra hall Thursday evening and Friday afternoon. The program will consist of the Symphony in E Flat Major (Köchel No. 543); the Concerto for Flute and Harp (Köchel No. 299), with Ernest Liegl and Joseph Vito as soloists; the Symphonie Concertante for Violin and Viola (Köchel No. 364), with John Weicher and Milton Preves as soloists, and the Overture to "Don Giovanni."]

By Cecil Smith.

Wolfgang Mozart.

Like almost every great composer, Mozart is frequently as much misunderstood as he is loved. He is, we are told, the perfect exponent of the so-called "classical" attitude toward musical composition. He is extoled as the one composer who ever attained perfect balance and symmetry in his music, and the one composer whose command of musical form was so meticulous and exact that no single misplaced note was ever allowed to disturb the perfectly proportioned shape of his music.

The conception of Mozart as a composer of completely regular, foursquare, boxlike musical structures has unhappily gained almost universal currency. Many musical performers are given over to so implicit a belief in the monotonous regularity of Mozart's musical forms that they play his music rigidly and inexpressively, as tho even the slightest display of sentiment might distract the listener's attention from the formal plan of the music.

• • •

If this assumption of the complete regularity and balance of Mozart's music were based upon fact, we might expect to hear from him nothing but an unbroken series of painstakingly correct four measure rhythmic phrases and a harmonic scheme employing a monotony of dominant and tonic chords deployed like alternate questions and answers. The music would achieve unbearable sameness, and except for the accident of different melodic and rhythmic formulas, every sonata or symphony would sound essentially like every other sonata or symphony.

Fortunately Mozart's music is not like this. It is by no means entirely symmetrical and balanced, and it frequently displays a most heretical disregard for regularity of structure. Each work by Mozart is a special entity, different from all others not only in its thematic material but even more importantly in its disregard of complete formal regularity.

The whole trouble, in this popular misunderstanding of classicism, lies in the fact that musical form is usually described as something static, like a picture or a building. A first theme and a second theme, or an exposition, a development, and a recapitulation, are spoken of as tho they were fixed and immovable materials, to be understood at a single glance, like the walls and roof of a building or the outlines and masses of a drawing.

• • •

Every one except a professional musical analyst, of course, knows that music is not like this at all. A piece of music is a succession of tones, or of combinations of tones, which gradually make themselves known over a period of time. When we hear a piece of music we do not hear first themes and development sections; we hear a continuous series of related sounds. We cannot recognize and label a first theme until the playing of it is all over. When we listen to a piece of music, we hear musical ideas in the process of being created. Only by means of memory and imagination can we impose a permanent, static design upon what we have heard.

The designs which we create in memory after the music is all over constitute what is usually called musical form. A composer, of course, bears such designs in mind as he writes music, for he desires to have us understand the form he has employed. But this is only a means of making music hold together with the unity that some degree of repetition and regularity can create in the mind and memory of the listener.

In Mozart's day certain specific forms or designs—such as the sonata, the rondo, and the three-part song form—were widely accepted by composers and the public alike. Mozart used these forms, but never as a straight-jacket to the spontaneous creation of living, moving musical ideas. Many of his compositions are quite incorrect formally, because he preferred freedom of musical expression to slavish obedience to rule and law. The ideal musical form was undoubtedly always in the background of his mind; but because both he and his audiences understood the normal requirements of musical forms, he felt fully justified in placing the achievement of expressive beauty above the mere filling out of a specified form.

• • •

In this regard Mozart composed precisely as any good composer must, for obvious formal regularity is exclusively the tool of small artistic minds and of academic reactionaries. In spite of the assertions of most history books, the best 18th century classical composers and the best 19th century romantic composers were alike in their refusal to be chained down by arbitrary form. The difference is one of degree; in certain regards Schumann thought it well to depart farther from certain basic regularities than Mozart did, but both composers were aware of the structures which were implied in their music, no matter how many liberties they might take.

The greatest single quality of Mozart's music, it seems to me, is its unique economy of means. Without becoming dull or dry, Mozart can say more in four measures than Schumann usually can in eight or César Franck in an entire symphony. Whereas Schumann began to make a fetish of freedom from formal control, and whereas César Franck was scarcely even likely to know a good musical idea from a bad one, Mozart never wasted any energy. He never broke the rules just to be breaking them, and he never allowed mystical or oratorical enthusiasm to deflect him from his constant task of writing the most meaningful music possible in the most succinct and economical compass. This, I think, is what is meant by the true, if high-sounding, statement that musical content and musical form are more perfectly identified in Mozart's music than in that of any other composer.

Current Music News

Egon Petri.

On Tuesday night the Adult Education council will present the second artist on its Musical Arts piano series, Egon Petri. The noted Dutch pianist last appeared in Chicago two seasons ago, playing on the series and with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. Mr. Petri's prodigious mental and technical equipment have fitted him for tackling some of the most difficult and least played compositions in piano literature. This week he was elected to perform a so-called "Symphony" composed of four of the 12 études in minor keys, Opus 39, by the French composer, Charles V. Alkan. Alkan was a major pianist of the 19th century, who left behind a vast collection of piano works, largely of the brilliantly technical order. He is best known here for an étude, known as "The Wind," which finds its way onto occasional recital programs. Tuesday's program also promises one of Beethoven's last major works for the piano, the 33 variations on a waltz by Diabelli, Opus 120. Liszt's "Venice and Naples," from the second "Years of Pilgrim age" books, completes the program.

Dr. Petri also will be heard in recital on Monday night at 8:15 on the Northwestern university's school of music concert series in Cahn auditorium of Scott hall. The program is entirely different from that he will play downtown and includes the Bach-Busoni Prelude and Fugue in D, the Brahms-Handel variations, the 12 études in Chopin's opus 25, Medtner's Two Fairy Tales, a Prelude, Gavotte and March by Prokofieff and the Preludes in G major and G minor by Rachmaninoff.

At the Young People's concert on Wednesday afternoon in Orchestra hall the Chicago Symphony orchestra will be led by Hans Lange. The soloist will be 14 year old Jean Graham.

George Chavchavadze. [Abrasch Photo.]

George Chavchavadze, pianist, will be heard as soloist with the Civic orchestra on Saturday night when that ensemble plays the regular popular concert in Orchestra hall. The soloist, a Georgian prince now residing in this country, made his debut in Chicago last season in recital. On this occasion he will play the Grieg concerto in A minor. Frederick Stock will conduct the program, which also features Lalo's Overture to "Le Roi d'Ys," Franck's Symphony in D minor, and Rimsky-Korsakoff's Capriccio Espagnol.

Students Drop French Study for Spanish

By the Rev. John Evans.

Undergraduates enrolled in the arts courses at Lafayette college, Easton, Pa., are not repeating the mistake made by college students during the first World war, when they dropped the study of German, but there has been a large decrease in the number of students enrolled in French courses, and a tremendous increase in Spanish courses, according to a survey made by Prof. Harold W. Streeter, acting head of the department of modern languages.

The survey shows that the number of students enrolled in German courses this year is about the same as last, while the decrease of students in French is about 30 per cent, and the increase in Spanish almost six times that of a year ago.

• • •

Pointing out that Spanish has been approved together with German and French as one of the languages for the required reading test, Prof. Streeter said the decline of students in French has been notable in elementary courses and that this undoubtedly reflects the condition of France as a world power.

"It is interesting to note that the transfer to Spanish has been at the expense of French rather than of German," he said. "We apparently are not repeating the mistake of World war I., when in many schools and colleges German was inadvisedly dropped from the curriculum. The cause of France the world over is suffering because of the actions of her present political leaders."

The approval of Spanish for reading tests, together with the recent interest in Latin American relations, has caused the tremendous increase in Spanish courses, Prof. Streeter said, as he pointed out that nearly 25 per cent of the enrollment in the modern languages department is to be found in the elementary and intermediate sections of Spanish.

Men may outnumber the co-eds at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, Mich., but they don't surpass them in scholastic ratings.

Statistics for the 1940-'41 school year show that the "grade-point" average for all university women topped that of the men, 2.57 to 2.50. In determining the average a "C" is represented by "2" and a "B" by "3" points.

Heading the sorority scholarship list was Delta Gamma with a 2.77 average. Sigma Alpha Mu, with an average of 2.79, rated highest place on the fraternity scholarship chart. The all-campus average for both men and women was 2.52. The average for general fraternities and sororities also was 2.52.

Prepare for next C. P. A. EXAMINATION
. . . . NEW CLASS PLAN
Thoroughly tested over 7 years, this new plan embodies strikingly different and efficient methods. The quizzer method (so effective in preparation for the bar examinations), an optional laboratory period of 3 hours each Saturday afternoon for practice in answering problems under examination room conditions, an intensive review of accounting, continuous coaching by successful C. P. A.'s, thorough study of A. I. A. examination problems, and consultation at any time with an experienced C. P. A.—these are some of the facilities and services.
Evidence of our success in coaching for the examinations is seen in the fact that over 10% of the C. P. A.'s in the U. S. are LaSalle members. Furthermore, if you fail in passing the examination, we will continue coaching you without further cost until you do pass.
These loop evening classes begin the week of Nov. 24 and continue for 25 weeks. Classes meet once a week—one on Tuesday, one on Thursday and one on Friday—at 6:30 P. M. The cost is moderate and convenient payment terms can be arranged.

By Mae Tinee.

Good Morning!

There are "glamor" girls and "glamor" boys. Now cast an eye upon a "glamor" picture.

"Honky Tonk" definitely has assorted oomph. It has Clark Gable in a Rhett Butler-ish rôle. It has Lana Turner, exquisite and appealing—but not too much of either to be a fit mate for a red blooded man—as the good woman in Gable's life. It has Claire Trevor [don't you love her!] as the square shooting dance hall girl who loves the hero well enough to let another woman have him. . . . And it has action and fights and humor and a right snappy ending. All punctuated by the picturesque costumes and staging of an earlier day when wild men and wild women made the wild west wilder.

• • •

In "Honky Tonk"—as in "Buy Me That Town"—a dashing rascal takes over a municipality. But for different reasons.

"Candy" Johnson is a confidence man. Having, with his boon companion "Sniper," just escaped a tarring and feathering in one part of Nevada, he sets his eyes toward other fields and takes over Yellow Creek, Nev., from one no better than himself—and not so smart. Brazos Hearn, the name is, and Albert Dekker knew just what to do about Brazos. . . . Strange man that Candy is, he chooses for his wife a fair flower with Boston background and ideas. . . . [Bizarre, I think, is the word for their courtship.]

• • •

The townfolk, believing the new government will be an honest one, are all for Candy and his ladylike wife. . . . But when they learn the truth. Well—Candy leaves town—AND his wife—AND——. . . . But you're not at the finale yet. . . .

In a number of instances the piece is crude, overdone, and too sexy. . . . It's no show to which a perfect gentleman would probably care to take a perfect lady. . . . But glamor it has, yes, glamor it has!

See you tomorrow.

down the corridor. Phebe put her hands on the back of a wing chair. She said: "Why?" Her voice sounded muffled by the music.

"I can't trust to your keeping still after I leave."

He pushed back his sleeve to look at his watch and then frowned as he remembered he was in evening dress. "We'd better be leaving now. Get your hat and coat." His voice was urgent, warning her.

Phebe thought: This can't be happening to me. But it was. She knew she was going. She went to the closet, praying that something would intervene. Then he was helping her into her coat.

"Play up, girl," he said. "Forget it all. Play that we are on our way to dinner—and to a dance."

He opened the door into the hall, and strolled along by her, humming softly, a Viennese waltz. In the elevator she caught her own reflection, a slim girl in a dark suit, with a white face and eyes which were dazed and eloquent of horror.

When they reached the ground floor her companion steered her skilfully down a high ceilinged hall which led to a side entrance. At the doorway, they encountered a lone man. He was studying a timetable by the light at the entrance. He looked up as they dashed past and Phebe realized with a throb of hope that she was staring into a pair of eyes the color of tea, and that the man was quietly bowing and baring his head to her. Instinctively she cried out with relief, and slowed her pace, only to be swept on down the street in the grip of a man whose face was suddenly hard.

A half block down the street the man found his car. It was a long, slick limousine and Phebe found herself being lifted rather unceremoniously into the back seat, and the man with her had slipped into the driver's seat, and they were out in the long procession of cars, the little toy cars which she had watched idly from her window—a long, long time ago.

Phebe Notices Another Man in Front Seat

She cowered in a corner of the big car and saw that a man was sitting in the front seat next to the driver. He was staring hard at the rain blurred pavement and was paying not the slightest attention to her or to her companion.

She thought: "There's no one who can help me now." She remembered the young man with the timetable at the revolving hotel door and then because he seemed irrelevant she forgot him.

"Will you please tell me when you are stopping to let me out?" she asked suddenly, her paralyzed will asserting itself.

At the sound of her voice the unknown occupant of the car turned in his seat to peer at her.

"Phebe!" he cried. "For God's sake, what are you doing here?"

She was looking straight into the eyes of Mr. Basil Kling. She was looking at a Basil she had never seen before, a rigid, furious Basil.

He turned on the man beside him. "What's the idea, Gregg? What's she doing here?"

The man called Gregg was quite differently affected. He gave a quick glance over his shoulder at Phebe and his face was lighted with saturnine glee.

"We're dining at the club," he said. "We'll dry the girl out and get her clothes pressed and then we'll go on to the opera—and sit in the consul's box." He wet his dry lips and laughed.

Kling was watching Phebe closely, his face drawn with anxiety. "What happened, Phebe?"

Gregg laughed unpleasantly. "This is no time to be so inquisitive," he drawled. His attention seemed centered entirely now on the matter of driving the car, his eyes on the rain swept concrete, gleaming glassily under the street lights. He began talking in a low tone to Kling. Explaining something. What had happened perhaps in that room next to hers on the 23d floor of the Hotel Regalia.

"Basil, let's stop." Phebe felt danger and her voice sounded thin. "Let's get out somewhere. I must talk to you."

"The girl's nervous," Gregg jeered. "Whatever she did, it's nobody's business. She had to do it. Madeline Wilberforce would have killed her if she hadn't moved first."

The next moment he had stepped inside the room, closed the door after him, locked it, and dropped the key in his pocket.

Kling gave Phebe a strange look.

"We'll draw up at the sidewalk the first chance we get, Phebe," he said tensely. "When we slow down, you are to jump for it. Take a taxi going the other way. Fade out of the picture."

"Your friend stays with us," said the man at the wheel. They had turned off the boulevard and were on a narrower street. Ahead of them black pavements stretched interminably.

Basil Kling shrugged. "Better drop her the first chance you get. We'll make a clean getaway. I suppose you know we are being followed."

"Huh? Are you sure?"

"Sure."

The driver's reaction was immediate. He swung his car to the left, cut thu the stream of traffic coming from the opposite direction, and crossed a curb and a sidewalk to a private drive. It was a superb bit of reckless driving, but he got by. Others were less fortunate.

Phebe heard the screech of horns, the grinding of brakes, the crash of shattered glass. In the shadow of a big house the car slid to a stop.

"Get out," Gregg ordered. "We'll cut thru to the alley and make it easy," Phebe heard him say to Basil under his breath.

The next instant the car door was opened and the girl felt herself seized and hurled none too gently into a clump of thick shrubbery. That was the last she knew.

When she came to, she had no idea of where she was or how long she had been there. All about her was rain and darkness and no sound came from near at hand except the throb of her own heart. Then the black was pierced with sounds and there were voices and lights and men running. Some one lifted her up, some one who held her firmly and gently and talked to her as a mother does to a frightened girl.

"You're not dead," he said cheerfully. "Careful now. See if you can stand. Good. Take a few steps. I'll steady you. Good. You'll do."

"I'm wet and cold and all scratched up and scared to death, but I think that's all," she ventured. Suddenly she remembered. "Did they get away—those men?"

A shadow crossed the man's face.

"The men you were with? Yes—they are gone."

Phebe shivered and looked away. The man's tone was guarded, not friendly.

"Were you friends, you and these two gentlemen?" he asked evenly.

"No."

"Did you know them well?"

"One of them I knew pretty well. I almost married him."

She saw her questioner wince. "And why didn't you?"

Phebe smiled, a wan smile, but with a trace of mischief. "Grandmother objected," she said.

Then her new found courage left her. She turned on him appealingly. "Why don't you take me away from here?" she wailed. "I can't talk——"

"O, I'm sorry," her companion said hastily. He turned to one of the officers. "May I make myself responsible for Miss Armstrong? I will get in touch with you later."

Young Man Gives Girl an Appraising Glance

The officer touched his cap. "Certainly, Mr. Arnold," he said, and turned away.

"He called you Mr. Arnold——" she began.

"Right," the young man nodded. "Jim Arnold."

"And how much do you know of all this, Mr. Arnold?"

The young man gave her an appraising glance. "All I need to know at present. Take it easy. Don't talk, please."

The girl leaned back quickly. She was glad to be silent. She was somewhat dismayed when they stopped at the big hotel and she saw they were going in at the same entrance from which she had made a forced exit at some time which now seemed to her unbelievably remote.

Arnold left her for a few minutes in a deserted little smoking room, then took her to a pleasant room on the third floor, a quiet room on a pretty court. Her bags were there waiting for her and a bright eyed little maid helped her out of her wet coat, and went to turn on the water for her bath.

"Think you'll be all right?" Arnold asked anxiously. "Katy will not leave you. Katy is a whiz."

Phebe nodded, afraid to trust herself to words, but looked after him desolately as he went out.

"It's all right, Miss Armstrong," Katy said cheerfully, with a coaxing smile. "I'm to get him for you just as soon as you want to talk. A grand man, ain't he? He's got some swell job out here at a college, I don't know just what. He's working with a thingamajig called a lie detector. And him not needing any such contraption, for he can turn his nice brown eyes on a bad actor, Miss, and look right down into his wicked heart."

An hour later Katy brought him back. He stood towering over Phebe, his eyes sober.

"What do you want to know?" Phebe asked.

"Everything." Then as the girl sat speechless, he prompted her gently. "How well did you know this woman, this Madeline Wilberforce, as she called herself?"

"That woman—in the next room? I never saw her. I never heard of her."

"And did you know Gregg?"

"I never heard of him, and I never saw him until he walked into my room this evening—and locked the door and put the key in his pocket."

"Tell your story, please, Miss Armstrong."

Phebe told it briefly, circumstantially. She told it as best she could, but her heart sank more and more as she talked.

When she had finished he rose. "A strange coincidence," he said. "And most unfortunate." He waited a moment. "As you may have guessed, these two men were no ordinary criminals. We have been trailing them patiently a long time, trying to catch them in some overt act; trying to discover from whom they were getting their orders. Who is 'we,' you ask? 'We' is the United States government."

He walked back and forth restlessly several times while Phebe sat watching him.

"You know the men are dead," he said abruptly. "Our men caught up with them. Or rather fate did. A truck, a push-cart, a telephone pole. Kling was killed. Gregg, as he called himself, put up a fight, but he had no chance. They were a strong combination, Kling a gentleman born, Gregg an unscrupulous soldier of fortune."

"Who—for whom were they working?" Phebe stammered.

Arnold smiled grimly. "Working for pay," he said. "Kling was a top ranking agent of an international gang of saboteurs. He was a naturalized American citizen and did some good work in chemistry at an eastern college. His family, back in Poland, were blue-blooded aristocrats. He was their black sheep. I'm guessing he liked the power he had and took a savage satisfaction in helping to wreck a society he had turned his back upon."

"But what was he doing at our works?"

"He was on the lookout for sabotage objectives and picked up highly technical industrial information as a side line. The sabotage organization that hired him couldn't have hit on a better person. People liked him.

"Your grandmother was smart! She was planning to put on a little act down in your home town this very evening, with the aid of a few of our men whom she has asked the board to send for. Kling as usual slipped thru our fingers, he had already left for Chicago when our men got there, but they found a good deal of incriminating evidence against him. It will be useful in running down the lesser men of the gang."

"But how did my grandmother know of this?"

"Your grandmother said the man Kling was nosy," Arnold said. "She said she had hired chemists before and they had never—never—taken such an active interest in every detail of the plant. In this her foreman, Mike Somebody, bore her out. They are the only two people who know the extent to which your grandmother has gone in subordinating her interests in the immmediate needs of the government.

"Madeline Wilberforce was Gregg's wife. Her mother was a Polish countess, her father a Russian diplomat in the days of the czars. She had traveled widely, spoke several languages, but she married this common fellow years ago, and stuck to him loyally."

"Is—is she dead, Mr. Arnold? Did he kill her—in that room next to mine?" Phebe asked slowly.

"She wasn't dead the last I knew. Gregg botched it. Her heart took a recess and he thought he'd choked her off.

"Some stool pigeon from your works got word to Kling that trouble was brewing and Gregg jumped at the possibility that Madeline had sold them out. It was Gregg's business to enroll new recruits as sabotage operatives and he never made the money Kling did. Madeline liked lovely things, clothes, accessories he couldn't often give her. For money, he figured, she might do anything. Furious words passed between them and he was ordering her out of the room when you happened in on the picture. When she refused to go and taunted him he went amuck and decided to play safe and put her out of the way permanently."

"Will she die?" Phebe asked in a low voice.

"I don't think so. Her voice was steady enough a few minutes ago. She cleared Gregg magnificently; insists that she asked for it; that if she had double-crossed him as he evidently thought she had, he had no choice but to get rid of her—that his life was too valuable to depend on the whim of a fool woman."

Phebe Closes Eyes to Hide Her Tears

Phebe closed her eyes to hide her tears. She looked very little and very white.

"O, dear, I'm sorry," she heard Arnold mutter. "I'm going now. The worst of it is, I may have to ask you to talk to me again, later in the evening."

"Good!" Phebe exclaimed. Then, her courage oozing but her voice determined: "I am sorry we have met under such unfortunate circumstances, Mr. Arnold. I—I always thought it would be fun to know a man like you."

"Why—thanks," the man stammered and made his escape.

He returned shortly and began to talk, rather fast.

"The hotel management wishes to express its regret, Miss Armstrong, that your stay here should have started so inauspiciously. They were planning to send you flowers."

"Where are they?"

"I asked if it was to be a pillow or a harp, and they seemed discouraged. And the chief sends you his compliments and asks me to inform you that so far as you are concerned the case is closed." He frowned. "Are you listening?"

"Of course," the girl said soothingly. "And thanks. But why did you comb your hair?"

Arnold looked at her steadily.

"You are a saucy little Backfisch," he said, "but I like you. If you meant it—if you really want to know a man like me, get your hat and I will take you somewhere and feed you. To me you look underfed."

Phebe's eyes filled with sudden tears.

"What is it?" the man asked, plainly appalled.

"Just relief," the girl said. "I thought you did not believe me."

He smiled down at her incredulously.

"Not believe you!" he said. "Not believe in a girl like you!"

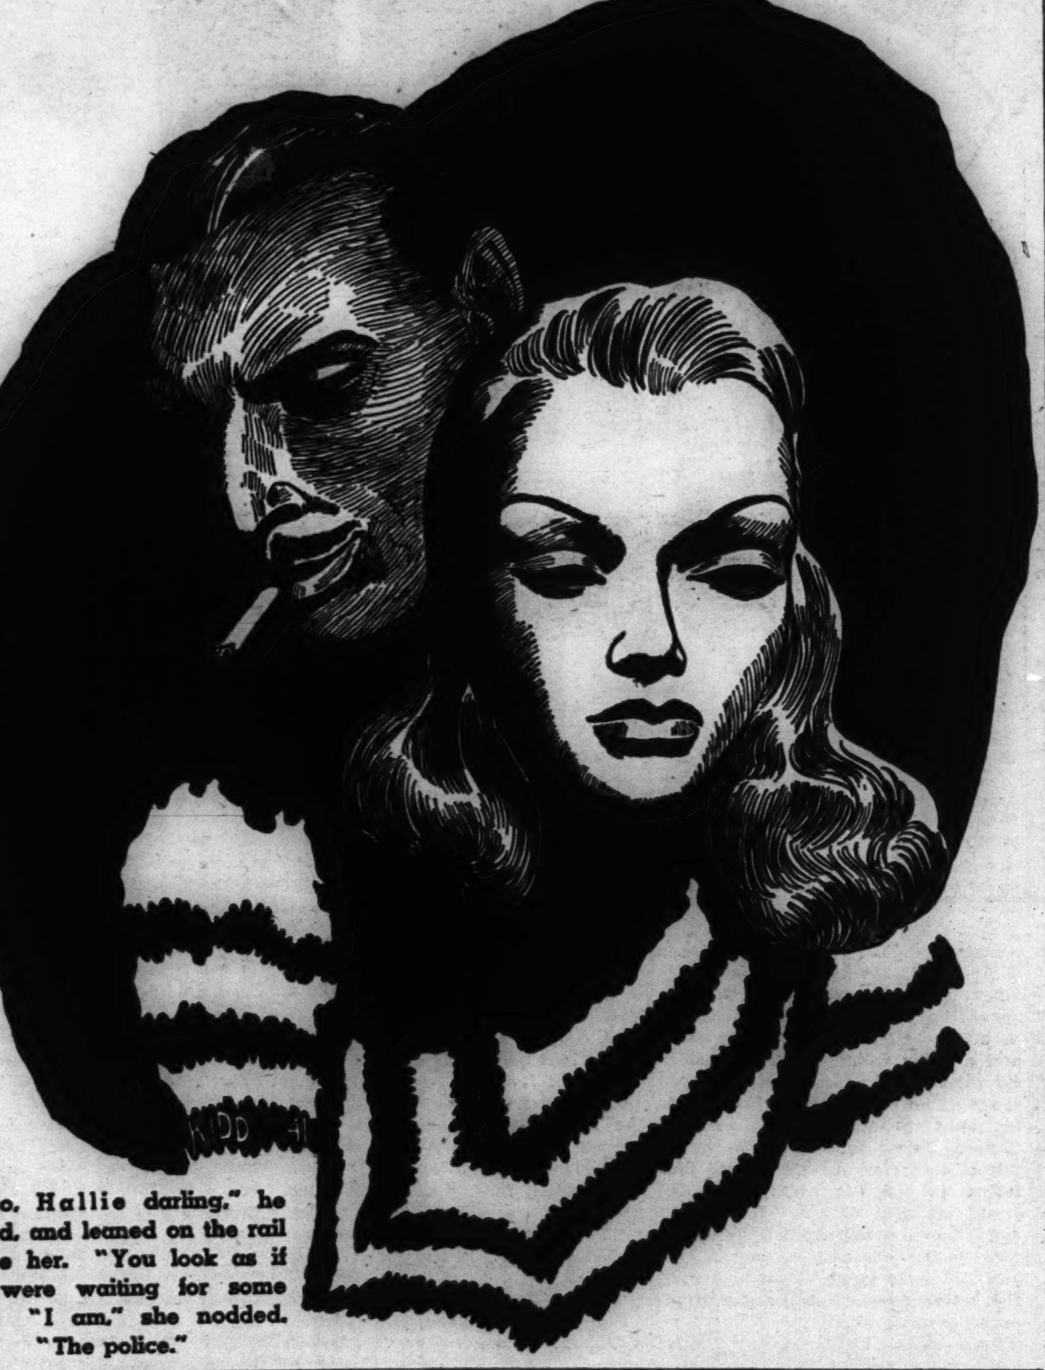
What Has Gone Before

Phil McNally, waiting to be called to service as a federal agent, is making his living on Florida's southwest coast, taking fishermen out in his boat, the Tarpon Queen, with 14-year-old Bill Wellington his one-man crew. Hallie Kent, daughter of Gordon Kent, wealthy diamond merchant, appears on his dock one afternoon and insists he take her to her father's yacht, the Sybilla. Tho Welton Bayne, Kent's associate, has chartered his boat for the next morning, Phil takes Hallie. She seems disturbed when en route to the Sybilla they hear a broadcast of a diamond robbery in Miami in which a well dressed girl acted as finger moll. Hallie receives a most uncordial welcome from her drunken father and from Dr. Iwald, his doctor and companion, as well as the entire crew on board the yacht. Phil takes Bayne to the Sybilla the next morning while Bayne's companions, Altine and Slack, go off in the skiff into the waterways. Bayne insists Hallie go on the Tarpon Queen with Phil while he talks to Gordon Kent. Bayne tries to force Kent to pay him a huge price for the diamonds whose theft he arranged. Because an officer was killed in the holdup, Kent insists this is the last time he will act as a fence. Quarreling, they open the package and find the diamonds gone. Meanwhile Phil and Hallie go in search of Slack and Altine, Bayne later following in a motorboat. In the Everglades they find the skiff with Altine dead, murdered by a knife Slack must have thrown. Bayne realizes he has been double-crossed and that Slack has escaped with the stolen diamonds. Bayne takes charge of the body while Phil goes back to Miami to report the murder. On the Tarpon Queen Phil finds a huge diamond, and his suspicions are aroused. Ashore he asks John Justin, retired federal agent, to show the diamond to the robbed jewelers and see if it was stolen. To help Phil get into the federal service Justin has him sworn in as a deputy sheriff and agrees to let him try to trace Slack.



"Hello, Hallie darling," he purred, and leaned on the rail beside her. "You look as if you were waiting for some one." "I am," she nodded. "The police."

INSTALMENT VII.

"HAVE you any idea where Slack might hide in the Glades, Bill?" Phil asked carelessly.

Bill looked at him thoughtfully. "I got a lot of ideas where he might hide," he admitted, "but I wouldn't bet on any of 'em. I know the Glades. I was borned in 'em. But I'm only a kid and Slack, he's a man. He had to split with the part of the crew that helped him in the highjackin', but his share was a lot of money. Ten thousand dollars, maybe. And you know what he done? He spent it in two weeks on booze and gamblin'. That's the way Slack is. He gets a lot of money together, maybe savin' it for a year, and then he goes on those awful bats, and women and bar flies roll him. Everybody knows that about him just like they know about him throwin' a knife in a fight.

"He hit for the Glades right after that because the cargo belonged to Johnny Purillo, the Chicago gangster. Remember him? He got killed right in Miami about a year after. They machine-gunned him from a car. Well, Johnny put his gunmen on Slack and he had to git into the Glades.

"Everybody knew they'd never get him then because he knows the Glades better'n any man. They say he knows every spot in the Ten Thousand Islands. I don't know if he does. But I know he knows where the mullet is and the tarpon in the dead rivers. And you got to know the country to know that.

"Well, he stayed in the Glades for a couple of years and then he came out and went to guidin'. It was another two years after that that he killed a gunman that pulled his gun out to shoot him. He beat him to it with a knife. Threw it. It went in right under the gunman's breastbone.

"He got arrested for that and tried. But he proved it was self-defense and they let him go. I never met him. I never saw him except at a distance when people would point him out, until he came aboard the Tarpon Queen with Mr. Bayne and Mr. Altine. And I guess it'll be a long time before folks see him again. He'll stay in the Glades until this dies down—if it ever does. I don't think he can say he killed Mr. Altine in self-defense because nobody would have to kill Mr. Altine. Slack wouldn't, anyhow. But I just wonder what he killed him for."

Phil Agrees with Bill's Deductions on Slack

"But you have an idea where you'd hide out if you were Slack," Phil persisted.

"No," Bill grinned, "but I know where I'd hide out, if I'd done what Slack did and I wouldn't worry about bein' caught, either. The sheriff is a town man and I don't believe any of his men could track me in there. I bet that's the way Slack figures it too. They didn't get him before and ain't got any better chance of gettin' him now."

"Maybe you're right," Phil agreed, and dropped the subject. He had learned what he wanted to know. Besides, piloting the boat demanded all his attention. He climbed to the upper deck and took over the top controls. He waved to the sheriff's boat to follow him and he brought the cruiser into the mouth of a moss-banked stream that began the land-locked journey to Whitewater Bay. Three hours away, the Sybilla waited. As his heart began to thump against his ribs, he pushed away the memory of the girl who had slipped her hand in his and told him to hurry back. This was no time to indulge in dreams.

"What time you figure the law will get here?" Joe Dabney asked.

"In an hour or so," her father answered, "it's nearly noon. They don't linger on killin's."

Eleven o'clock and after! She had slept hard for six hours after dozing fitfully thru the night. She had fallen asleep the last time soon after looking at her watch. It was then 5 o'clock. As she came fully awake, she saw that she was fully dressed and the dread she had escaped in sleep rushed back to envelop her.

She remembered that there was a dead man on the yacht awaiting permission to be decently buried. That body had been alive this time yesterday. It had been a man with joys and sorrows, with secret hopes and dreams. He had met a violent death because somehow he was a link in a chain of sinister circumstances which mysteriously enmeshed her father and threatened her own happiness, her future, possibly her very life.

Hallie rose quickly from the bed, crossed the cabin, and gazed out the porthole.

A slow anger began to rise in her. Welton Bayne was responsible for her father's deterioration. She suspected that he was directly or indirectly responsible for Altine's murder. And she knew that he would use his hold on her father to force her to marry him, if necessary, to be "nice to him," if he could get her without marriage. Either way, he would use her in turn to help him into a partnership in her father's jewelry business.

Staring out at the opalescent sea, she looked the dangers straight in the eye. Anger bred courage. She would fight whatever it was that threatened them, her father and her. Better to fight, no matter what happened, than to be led like a sheep, baaing to slaughter. Help came to people who fought bravely, she thought, and unconsciously her eyes turned again toward the cleft in the islands thru which the Tarpon Queen would come.

She felt herself uplifted. She rang for Mikko and while she waited she opened various dresser drawers and threw a change of clothes upon the bed. At Mikko's respectful knock, she opened the door.

"Good morning, Mikko," she said. "Please bring me a glass of orange juice, some buttered toast, and a pot of coffee in 20 minutes."

"Yes, Miss Hallie," Mikko grinned. She closed and locked the door, undressed, and padded to the shower, and turned on the cold water. As it reached full force, she took a deep breath and stepped under the spray.

The stinging needles shocked her and raised her spirits. The last of her dread fell away from her. When Mikko knocked again, she was radiant and beautiful in her slacks and jacket and her eyes were sparkling.

"Thank you, Mikko," she smiled as he arranged the things on the table. "Is my father up yet?"

"Yes, Miss Hallie," Mikko answered. "He is with Mr. Bayne and Dr. Iwald in the doctor's library."

"Hhm," Hallie told herself as Mikko closed the stateroom door behind him. "He could go far but he couldn't be in worse company."

Hallie Inspects Palms of Her Injured Hands

She began to sip her orange juice. As she raised the glass, she caught sight of the palm of her hand. She swallowed a sip hurriedly and put the glass down and held out both hands to inspect the wounds the tarpon had inflicted yesterday. The palms were angry looking and the dead skin fell away from little red welts. But there was no pain or sting.

Phil did a very good job, she thought, I imagine he'd do a good job at anything.

In his library, Dr. Iwald sat at the table playing his interminable solitaire and watching the other two men with the bland interest with which a scientist studies a writhing butterfly on a pin. His muddy little eyes held a gleam of amusement as they darted from the men to the cards which he gravely placed one upon the other.

Gordon Kent slumped forward in a chair, holding a tall glass which was less than half full. His eyes were haunted and his face haggard. He stared at nothing. His hands were trembling as he raised the glass to his lips.

Welton Bayne stood watching him and the doctor and the steel-cased bookshelves, where the doctor kept his jewels. His eyes never rested. They showed the nervousness which he sought to conceal. He looked past all of them to the porthole thru which could be seen the cleft in the island in the northeast, where the police would make their first appearance. His gaze was pointed there when Kent swallowed the last of his drink in a huge gulp and reached for the bell.

"Don't ring that bell," he snapped. "That's your fourth drink. It's enough. It's all you're going to get until after those hick cops have left. We don't want you drooling when they get here. You've got a lot of questions to answer. We're seeing to it that you answer them right."

Kent looked at the doctor appealingly. "Just one more, Doc," he begged. "I'm sick."

"No," Dr. Iwald grinned. "Bayne's right. You've got to remember that you are an ultrarespectable jeweler, and this murder has been a great shock to you. It shouldn't take long," he gave doubtful encouragement. "When they're gone, you can drink yourself blind."

"After I've had a little talk with him—and you," Bayne airily declared.

The doctor turned his slow gaze upon him.

"Another business opportunity, I have no doubt," he said unctuously. "Another chance to buy some hot coquina shells for a quarter of a million." His mocking glance changed to murderous as he saw Bayne's eyes flick the steel-bound bookcase, but he was still smiling as he added, "They're still there, Bayne. Anybody will be stiller than they are, if he tries to move them."

"I don't get you," Bayne told him. "I'm going on deck." He went out, slamming the door behind him.

He walked aft along the passageway, working his way thru the labyrinth of doors which Dr. Iwald had arranged so that no one could sneak into his cabin without his knowing it. Anger boiled in him. He was wishing he could wring the doctor's pipestem neck. He didn't like him. He never had. Dr. Iwald knew too much. He could tell what you were thinking. He'd kill in a minute. He was as deadly as a cobra.

Bayne shrugged his shoulders, trying to throw off the fears that beset him. He was, he told himself, getting jumpy. Well, why shouldn't he? That damn fool Slack had brought the police snooping around. And anything could happen while they snooped. A slip of the tongue and you were sunk.

His anger at Slack grew. The rat! Killing Altine was bad enough, but stealing the Hendricky loot put him, Welton Bayne, in a bad spot. No money and 10 grand owing to Slick Prentiss, the gambler. Slick didn't wait. You either squared your losses or you quit breathing.

He found that he had stopped and was standing staring at nothing there in the passageway. He pulled himself together and went on and climbed the companionway to the deck. His heart jumped as he saw Hallie leaning over the rail and looking out over the sea.

He reached the deck and went toward her.

"Hello, Hallie darling," he purred and leaned on the rail beside her. "You look as if you were waiting for some one."

The girl moved slightly away from him, but her gaze did not leave the stretch of empty ocean. "I am," she nodded. "The police."

Fear stabbed thru him to set his anger alight again.

"You seem to be looking forward to their visit."

Hallie Tells Bayne She Wants to Go Back

Hallie shifted so that she was looking at him level-eyed. "I am," she informed him. "Aren't you? There's a murderer loose. I hope they get him and find out why he killed Altine."

"Does his reason make any difference?" Bayne asked.

"It might," she declared, "but I want them to catch Slack because while he's free, none of us is safe. And I want this autopsy finished so I can get back to Miami."

"And how will you arrange that?" he asked, smiling.

"Why, I'll charter Capt. McNally's Tarpon Queen."

"They're under a three-day charter to me."

"But are you going to stay here after—after all this?"

"A murder can happen any place and I came out here for fishing. I think you ought to stay, too. You have the makings of a good fisherman yourself. You showed that yesterday." He covered her hand with his. His eyes were glowing.

"I'd rather not," she told him, pulling her hand away, "and since you are using the Tarpon Queen, I'll ask the police to take me."

"But you've only arrived," he pretended bewilderment, "and your father didn't expect you. If you'd asked him, he would have told you he didn't want you here. Of course I know why you came. You wanted him to break his partnership with me. He refused and now you're going away in a huff. But your father prefers that you stay. Only this morning he was telling us what a comfort you've been to him. I think you should wait a few days."

She felt the bullying undercurrent that lay just beneath his seemingly deep interest in her father. Her eyes smoldered and color burned in her cheeks.

"I'm going back," she said flatly.

"No," he contradicted, "you're staying here for a while. It will be much better. It was just an unfortunate incident, of course, but you happened to be looking at diamonds in Hendricky's jewelry store a minute before three gunmen walked in and stole those diamonds. Police got your description from the clerks. They believe you were what they call the 'finger moll.' They think you went in there as part of a plan to arrange it so that the diamonds would be out of their vaults when the robbers came. If they recognize you, they'll arrest you."

"But you sent me there," she reminded him. "You told me my father wanted to buy diamonds of a certain size and weight and he believed Hendricky's had them. There wasn't any like them among the stones the clerk showed me so I left. I can explain that to the police."

"I wouldn't if I were you, Hallie," he warned her. "In the first place, the police wouldn't believe you, and in the second place your arrest would embarrass both your father and me. No. The best thing for you to do is to stay here for a while."

A sudden dread clutched at her, as she saw two little dots move out from the cleft in the islands.

"Here they come now," she said, hiding her fear.

Welton Bayne's gaze followed hers. He clenched his hands and opened them again and mopped the sudden perspiration from his face.

"Yes," he agreed, "here they come. Think carefully over what I've told you." He turned on his heel and went below.

The whole ship's company was at the gangplank when the coroner, the sheriff, and two deputies came aboard. The Dabneys, father and son, grimly stood by. Dr. Iwald watched, half smiling, his murky eyes slight with perverse humor. Welton Bayne hid his nervousness in the smoke of a cigaret. Gordon Kent detached his arm from Hallie's and stepped forward.

"Welcome aboard, gentlemen," he said. "I regret that you had to come under such regrettable circumstances. I'm Gordon Kent, the owner."

Sheriff Long nodded and swept the company with his shrewd eyes and the little coroner demanded, "Where's the body?"

Dr. Iwald Begins a Conversation About Phil

Bayne, Gordon Kent, and the Dabneys accompanied them to the cabin where the body lay, leaving Hallie and the doctor on deck. Hallie's glance leaped to the Tarpon Queen where Phil and Bill were threading lines thru the outriggers. The doctor watched her covertly.

"Nice chap, McNally," he began conversationally.

"Who?" Hallie asked. "O, he's the captain, isn't he? But isn't the boat lovely? They keep her so immaculate. And the boy is so cute. He claims he knows every inch of the Everglades. He was born and raised in there."

"McNally's a pretty good guide, they say," the doctor said, his interest waning. He had found out what he wanted to know. The girl didn't realize McNally existed except as part of his boat, even, he thought vindictively, if he is a lawyer. That's what he had thought but he wanted to be sure.

Hallie did not want her thoughts read. Already she suspected that Capt. McNally might not only prove a friend in need but the only friend she had in the world.

Below Kent and Bayne stood in the cabin with the sheriff and his deputies watching the coroner examine the body.

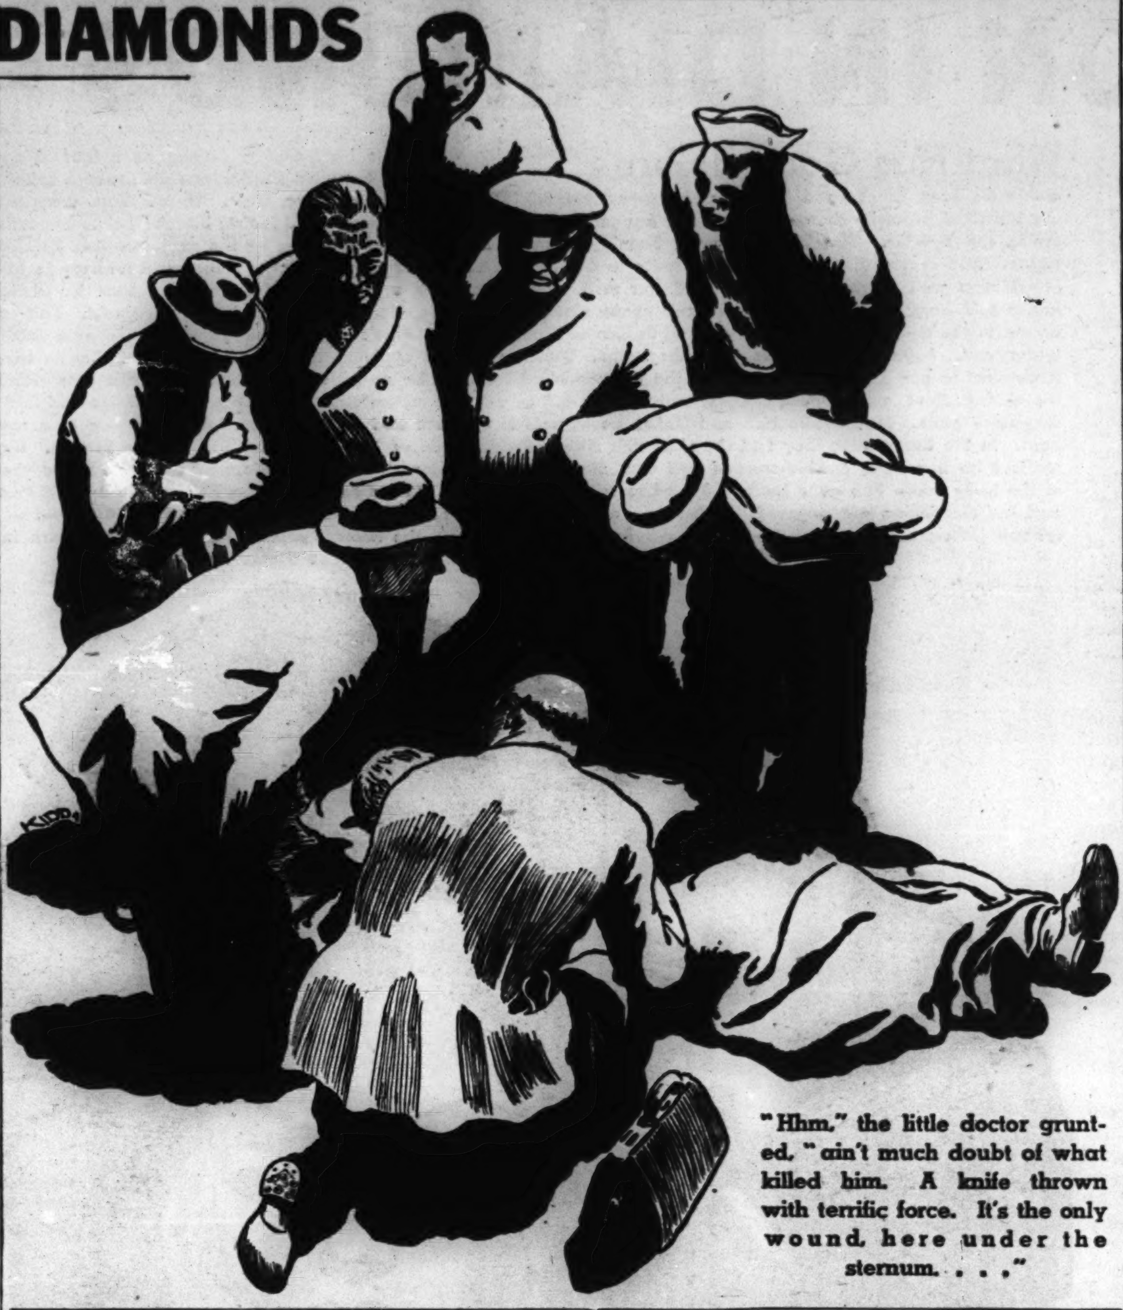
"Hhm," the little doctor grunted, "Ain't much doubt of what killed him. A knife thrown with terrific force. It's the only wound here under the sternum. He was dead about three seconds after it hit him."

He went systematically thru the pockets, unearthing a bill from a Miami neighborhood grocery store, a penknife, a half-smoked package of cigarets, two packets of matches, a wallet containing two five and three one dollar bills. "That's what he carried, sheriff," he announced.

The sheriff instructed one of his men to wrap the contents of Altine's pockets in an envelope. Then, "All right," he decided, "we'll look at the boat in which he was killed."

He, himself, climbed down into the skiff and searched carefully among the fishing gear and duffel. Besides these, he found only a big blood stain where the body had sprawled.

"Nothin' here," he announced, and climbed back on the yacht. "Ready for the inquest Doc?" and when the coroner nodded, the sheriff put his hands to his mouth. "All right, McNally," he shouted. "You and the boy come aboard."



"Hhm," the little doctor grunted, "ain't much doubt of what killed him. A knife thrown with terrific force. It's the only wound here under the sternum. . . ."

"This way, gentlemen," Gordon Kent offered again. "We've prepared the salon." He waited until Phil brought the Tarpon alongside and tied her. When he and Bill came up the gangway, he led the way below.

The salon had, indeed, been prepared for them. The low overstuffed chairs with the bleached alcoholic rings on their arms and the big sprawling couch had been arranged in a big half circle to face a table and a chair which had been placed for the coroner. Gordon Kent waved the coroner to his chair and then motioned the others to sit at will. Welton Bayne took a chair to the left of Hallie as she sat down. Her father sat on her other side. Dr. Iwald sat next to him. The sheriff and his men stood against the wall a little to the side of the coroner. Phil and Bill were going to stand behind the seated people but the sheriff ordered them to sit.

"All right, Capt. McNally," the coroner said testily, "you discovered the body. Tell us about it. Start from the beginning."

"Mr. Bayne chartered the Tarpon Queen for three days," Phil began. "He came aboard at Everglades City shortly after dawn yesterday with Slack and Mr. Altine. It was the third time I had them out.

"Mr. Bayne ordered me to sail down here when Slack said there was good fishing around Hurricane and Big and Little Shark Islands. After lunch, Mr. Bayne fell asleep in a chair on deck. Slack and Mr. Altine spent the afternoon in the cabin. We came into the bay around 4 o'clock and Mr. Altine woke up Mr. Bayne and asked him if he wanted to fish with them back in the sloughs.

"Mr. Bayne said he preferred open water so Slack and Mr. Altine took the skiff and headed toward Little Shark. Mr. Bayne told us to come out to the Sybilla. We picked up Miss Kent and went out about 10 miles where we struck a 150 pound tarpon. It took Miss Kent about an hour to land him. When we got to the Sybilla, it was coming onto dark and we learned Slack and Mr. Altine hadn't returned. I decided to look for them. Miss Kent went with us."

"Well, what happened?"

"We searched about two hours and then we heard two speedboats. The first was going away. The second cut thru the sound of the first and drowned it out. We figured it would be the Sybilla's and I told Bill to keep flashing the searchlights so they'd know where we were. Just before they came up to us, we picked up an oar from the skiff. I told Capt. Dabney to throw his lights on one bank while I lit the other as we turned a bend in the river. Miss Kent spied the skiff with Altine's body in it."

The sheriff looked at the girl. She had her hands over her face and she was trembling at the memory of the sight. Even in that pose, she was mighty pretty.

"What did you do then?" the coroner demanded.

"I didn't do anything," Phil told him, "Mr. Bayne took over."

"I stepped into the skiff," Welton Bayne said quickly as all eyes turned on him, "I saw it was Altine and he was dead. I looked quickly over the skiff. Then I yelled for Slack but the boy told us they had heard a speedboat going away and I—we all—concluded that Slack had killed Altine and run away."

"Do you know of any reason why he should kill him?" the sheriff cut in.

"No, I don't" Bayne answered. "I didn't know Slack very well. I hired him as a guide for dead river fishing. He didn't have a boat of his own. Altine was my friend. I don't think he knew Slack any better than I did."

Phil decided that Bayne was trimming a little. On all their trips with him, the three had acted like bosom pals.

"Did Altine or you have anything Slack could have stolen?"

Bayne Denies He Had Anything to Steal

The sheriff, Phil thought, was pretty smart to figure that question. He remembered Bayne's quick search of the cabin when he heard that Slack and Altine had not returned. Now would come the explanation of the diamond he had found in his cabin. But Bayne answered without hesitation. He was smiling as he said:

"I didn't and I don't think Altine did either. We were dressed for fishing."

"You got any more questions you want to ask, sheriff?" the coroner demanded.

"You said the two men spent the afternoon in your cabin, McNally," the sheriff remembered, "What was in there? Have you missed anything?"

"No. There was fishing tackle and odds and ends and their luggage," Phil told him, "Whatever of mine they took is still there in the skiff. Will it be all right for me to take the skiff back when you're finished?"

"Yes," the sheriff granted, "Are you about thru, Doc?"

"I'm all thru," the coroner barked, "and my verdict is that Fred Altine came to his death thru the blow of a knife presumably inflicted by one Slack. It was murder."

"I've already sworn out warrants for him," the sheriff informed them all. "Miss Kent," he addressed the girl so that he could admire her beauty without having to speak about it, "this must have been quite a shock to you. You'd just arrived when it happened, hadn't you?"

"Yes." Hallie smiled, altho her heart was pounding, "Up to four years ago, I practically lived here on the yacht with my father and mother. But when my mother died, father sent me away to school. I haven't been on the Sybilla much since."

She thought the sheriff suspected her and she wondered how long it would be before he would suddenly recognize that she was the woman of the Hendricky jewel robbery whose description, by now, would be in every police station in the nation. When that happened, she decided, it would be best to be out of the sheriff's jurisdiction. She mentioned it to Welton Bayne as they watched the sheriff and his party depart for Miami with Altine's body. But Bayne merely smiled.

"What makes you think he'll ever recognize you?" he asked. "The sheriff's a hick cop. Hick cops can only think of one thing at a time and all he's thinking of now is catching Slack."

"But I'd rather go."

"No, you'd better rest here awhile." His voice became mocking. "I don't understand you, Hallie. You rush down here to see your father and now you want to rush away again. Your father needs you and I like you around. We'll go fishing. Maybe you'll catch another big tarpon. Even if you don't, you can tell your troubles to Capt. McNally. He's very smart. A graduate at law. Not smart enough to make a living at it but intelligent enough to bait hooks and help ladies catch fish."

Hallie didn't answer. She looked toward the Tarpon Queen anchored a quarter of a mile away waiting for Bayne's call. Capt. McNally was on his knees in the skiff scrubbing the bottom. She saw him stop scrubbing, peer downward and pick something up. He thrust it hurriedly into his pocket. It was a full minute before he resumed the scrubbing.

Phil had a good reason for his pause. It was shock. When he emptied the skiff of Bayne's luggage and took her over, he knew he had a gruesome job of scrubbing to do. He refused to let Bill do it because he thought the brown stains might upset him. He had been scrubbing about five minutes when a glisten under the oarlock caught his eye. He picked it up. It was another diamond, one a little smaller than the one he had picked up from his cabin floor.

Capt. Phil McNally climbed to the Tarpon Queen from the skiff he had been scrubbing and absently answered Bill's questions.

"Did you get all the bloodstains out. Capt. Phil?" the boy demanded, gazing into the skiff.

"Just about," Phil told him, "You can hardly see them."

"What'll we do now?"

"Stand by, I guess, till Mr. Bayne needs us. Better check on your bait."

As Bill moved about his duties, Phil stood on the deck and looked toward the Sybilla, white and glistening in the stillness. He saw Welton Bayne and Hallie Kent gazing toward them. He wondered if they had seen him pick up the diamond and fervently hoped they hadn't. The diamond, he was sure, concerned them deeply. Certainly it concerned Welton Bayne. He turned quickly and looked seaward where two porpoises frolicked in the wide blue waters.

He was convinced now that diamonds belonging to Welton Bayne had been carried away by Altine and Slack when they left the Tarpon Queen, ostensibly for a few hours' fishing among the sloughs around Little Shark Island. Slack had hidden them among the duffel he had thrown into the skiff just before they left. No doubt, they were the cause of Altine's death and their loss should have been reported as such. Yet Welton Bayne had told the sheriff that neither Slack nor Altine could have taken anything of his because there wasn't anything to take.

That was a deliberate lie, as was his other statement that he did not know Slack very well and that he employed him as a guide. He had not treated him as a guide on any of the three trips they had made on the Tarpon Queen. He had treated him as an equal.

The second diamond Phil had picked up from the skiff's bottom undoubtedly had come from the same place as the one he had found earlier on the floor of his cabin. The first must have fallen to the floor when Altine and Slack took the diamonds from Welton Bayne's suitcase or whatever held them. The second must have worked its way out of whatever receptacle contained the rest of them. And Bayne's lie about not missing anything must have been told for only one reason. The diamonds had been stolen.

Phil Manages to Curb His Excitement

Phil curbed his rising excitement and strove to rein it by remembering what Clegg had warned against in his textbook on investigation. What he was doing, he told himself, was deducing a possibility from a seeming fact of which he was not sure. If the two men had stolen the diamonds from Bayne's luggage as it lay in the cabin of the Tarpon Queen, it didn't follow that the diamonds had been stolen.

Bayne, for instance, had a perfect right to have the diamonds in his possession. He was a diamond broker who went about the country picking up precious stones at bargain prices. And what would be more natural than for him to be taking them to Gordon Kent, who was a manufacturing jeweler and, therefore, a possible buyer? The fact that Bayne had lied to the sheriff could be a coincidence. And Clegg warned particularly against basing suspicions upon coincidence.

No, his suspicion that the diamonds stolen by Altine and Slack were part of the loot of the five Miami jewel robberies was just that, a suspicion. It would remain so until John Justin informed him that a Miami jeweler had identified and claimed the diamond he had found in his cabin. If he did, then Welton Bayne was either a thief or the associate of thieves who had turned their loot over to him.

There was another, a quicker way to explain both the diamonds and that was to capture Slack. It probably would prove the harder way. Phil turned to look landward to where the green blot that was the earth shone thru the haze three miles away. Capturing Slack would take some doing. He was away and hidden safely somewhere in that maze of islands, bayous and lagoons. He knew more about that miasmic terrain than could possibly any man who set out to take him. He was in there now, sure that he was safe. And he'd be safe as long as he stayed in there.

But here Phil was in error. Slack was not in the Glades, where logic and the authorities who knew his reputation as a primitive killer would inevitably place him.

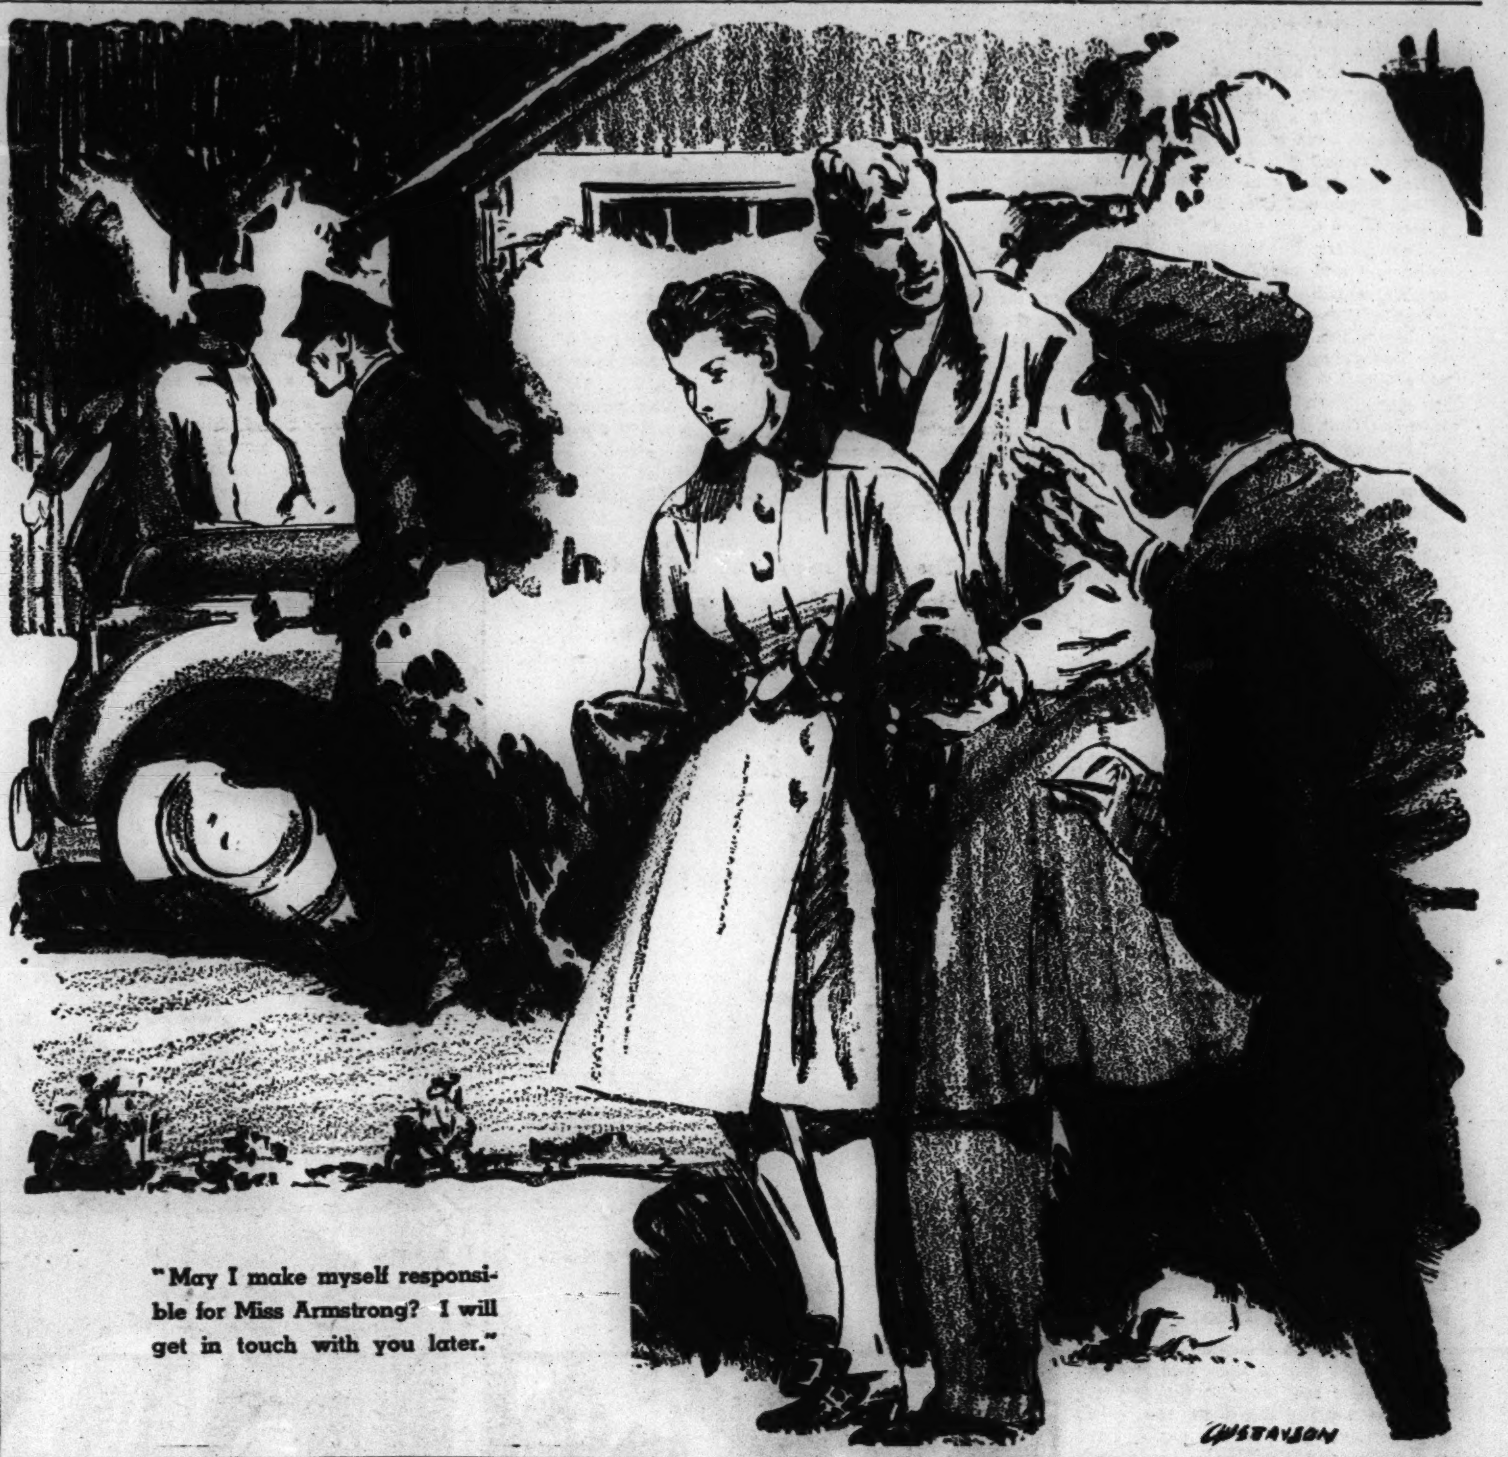
PHEBE STEPS OUT

By

FIELDING JAMES

(Copyright: 1941: News Syndicate Co., Inc.)



"May I make myself responsible for Miss Armstrong? I will get in touch with you later."

PHEBE had been down to the lobby to buy some picture postcards. When she got back to her room, she breathed a sigh of relief. Restraining with some difficulty an impulse to double lock the door, she turned to take a second look at her quarters.

Very snug, she told herself, and grinned. The room was small, not a third the size of her bedroom at home—a snug little room on the 23d floor of a hotel which was a block long, a block wide, and a block high.

It scared her a little. She should have gone to the quiet place on the north side which her grandmother had suggested, but, after all, it was not quiet which she was seeking on this brief shopping trip. The Regalia had a famous string quartet which played at the dinner hour. Besides, Basil had once said that the Regalia was his idea of a perfect hotel: It did not bore the guests with "Service With a Personal Touch"; it merely insured them peaceful anonymity.

It was silly to be scared. All that ailed her was that she had never before been alone in a hotel, nor had she ever been in so large a city. But, as grandmother said, she would never learn younger. It had been a temptation to wire Basil and be met in style, but grandmother had discouraged that.

"Suit yourself, child," she had said, kindly, "but the red cap and the taxi man can do the job, and when they have delivered you safely at the hotel, you can pay them off—in coin of the realm—and the matter is closed. You won't have a man on hand to entertain thru dinner. You won't have to pretend to be indifferent and sophisticated, when all about you are so many things you want to see. Wait till next time to wire Mr. Kling."

Phebe Smiles at Her Grandmother's Warning

So she had arrived, unheralded and unsung, and here she was. Grandmother had been right. She was right about a good many things. Could it be that she was right about Basil Kling? Grandma would not admit it, but she certainly had it in for Basil, and she was positively uncanny in her judgment of people.

"Watch your step, Phebe," grandmother would say. "The man is close-mouthed. And smooth."

Phebe smiled cynically at this warning. If grandma only knew it, Phebe was safer with the mild-mannered, distant Basil than with several of the nice pink-cheeked boys with whom she had grown up. But she would leave grandmother her illusions.

Even so, Phebe had to admit to herself that Basil did not stir her deeply. Her heart never missed a beat when she was with him. Yet it could beat faster, that heart of hers. Such unaccountable people stirred her, often men that she merely passed in the crowd. There was that foreman at the works, Mike Somebody; and the man who had come to drill the well, one of the family who for five generations had been digging good wells; and the sober, capable young farmer in the next township; and the man in the lobby who had steered her back to the right elevator this very evening.

They had in common a certain something. Not glamor. Basil was glamorous. They just seemed strong. They were the men who were busy with their own interesting problems, enjoying life and feeling equal to it; kind and friendly toward their fellow humans, but cheerfully impersonal. The girl's eyes grew soft and lovely. It would be fun to count in the life of a man like that.

Phebe took off her coat and hung it carefully on a hanger in the closet. It was raining hard outside and the coat was dampish and wrinkled. She glanced at her wrist watch and saw that it was only 6 o'clock. Too early for dinner. She took out her fountain pen, spread out the cards she had bought and her writing paper on a small maple desk, and wandered restlessly over to the window and looked down into the street far below. It was hard to distinguish anything but her own reflections in the black pane.

Dimly she saw a stream of motor cars, oddly like toys, scurrying along madly for a few minutes, then stopping stock still, as if they had been wound up and now must wait to be wound again. Between her and the outside world was a face, her own face, questioning, wide-eyed. She dropped the curtains rather hastily, and turned back to the warm, light little room.

Suddenly her face brightened. From some place very near came the strains of an old Viennese waltz. It was being played on a rather scratchy victrola, and was certainly in the very next room. Phebe told herself that she must remember to be careful; the walls were obviously thin. It was nice music and her feet tapped restlessly. If she could reach Basil Kling, maybe he would take her somewhere to dance. Poor Basil! He danced beautifully, but told her it was boresome; just eroticism in a form permitted in polite society.

She had looked up the word and thought the idea unpleasant. Her grandmother said that the poor man probably knew very well what he was talking about, as he was quite likely one of these gigolos. This unpleasant suggestion was not up to grandma's level, as she had every reason to know that Mr. Kling was a competent research chemist. She was paying him herself to bring up to date one of the processes at the works.

With a sigh Phebe turned back to her writing-desk, but got no farther than the date. She was still listening dreamily to the succession of sweet waltzes from the next room. Who was keeping them going? Was it a man? Was he tall and slim, perhaps, with rather rumpled sandy hair, bright alert eyes the color of tea, good muscular control, clothes that fit but did not assert themselves? She was startled that she could see him so clearly until she realized that she was just calling up the picture of the man on whose mercy she had thrown herself when she was lost in the lobby downstairs.

Suddenly the music stopped in the middle of a bar and Phebe heard a man's voice. It was a low voice and she did not like it at all.

"I'll give you just two minutes to get out of this room. You've done that once too often. I'm fed up. Do you understand? Fed up!"

Phebe heard a woman laugh. It was not a pleasant laugh.

"Two minutes," the man repeated. The tone froze her. It was full of menace.

Counting Continues from the Next Room

"Two minutes," he said a third time. "One—two—three——"

"You wouldn't dare," the woman jeered. "I know you. You've never had the nerve for anything yet."

"Fourteen—fifteen—sixteen——"

Phebe had picked up the pen from her desk, but now she dropped it to the floor. She sat staring at it absently where it had established itself in an upright position on the flowered pink and brown rug. There was another laugh.

"Go ahead. Count your head off. When you're out of breath, stop and I'll go on with the good work. You—can't—scare—me!"

"Twenty-two—twenty-three——"

"Keep it up. See if I budge. You're not telling me what to do."

"I am telling you to get out," he said with terrifying clarity. "If you don't do what I say, you'll never have the chance to get out of anywhere again. Anywhere." Then it began again: "Thirty—thirty-one——"

He did mean it. He did. Surely there was something she could do. She looked around the room frantically, and her eyes lighted on the telephone. She could call the office. She started to take the receiver from the hook, but drew back her hand. What should she say? Nothing had happened. It was just a quarrel between a strange man and a strange woman in a hotel bedroom—23 flights up.

The man was still counting evenly. The voice was steady and filled with hate.

"One hundred and nineteen—one hundred and twenty—are you going?"

"No."

There was a taunting laugh, cut short as suddenly as had been the little waltz a short time before. Phebe strained her ears, but there was only silence. Then she heard a sharp cry followed by a soft thud. She imagined she heard a stifled moan. Then there was no sound, no sound at all.

She walked up and down the room for a minute, suffocated by a feeling of utter helplessness. It was now too late. Or was it. Phebe acted on impulse. She took the receiver from the hook.

"Send a man up here right away. Room 2323. Hurry, please. Send him at once."

Then she leaned back weakly. Twenty-three flights up. She had waited too long. Whatever had happened——

There was a knock at her door and the girl started in fright. No one could have come from the office so soon. The knock was sharply repeated. "Office calling. Did you call the office?"

Phebe opened the door. A man stood there, a tall, lean young man with blond hair and pale, intent eyes. He carried a top coat over his arm and a hat in his hand. He was in evening dress.

"Sorry to intrude," he said politely.

The next moment he had stepped inside the room, closed the door after him, locked it, and dropped the key in his pocket.

"It's really too bad," he said drily, "but there's nothing else I can do. After all, you meddled."

He paused a second, listening for steps in the hall.

"You called the office," he said. "When the boy comes, tell him it was a mistake. Don't doublecross me. I'll get us both out of this if you help me. If you don't——"

"Don't threaten me!" Phebe said hastily.

Hot Anger Wells Within Desperate Girl

"I didn't mean that," the man said soothingly. "I merely meant to say that if I'm out of the picture—and they won't take me alive—you'll have quite a lot to explain."

Hot anger welled up within the girl, but she knew nothing to do but play for time. She had a desperate sense of succumbing to the man's hypnotic stare.

"What am I to do?" she muttered.

"Use your wits," he ordered.

Somewhere down the hall an elevator came to a noisy stop and there was the sound of a boy's quick steps. There was a rap at the door.

"Office, madam," the boy sung out. "Anything wrong, please?"

The color drained from the girl's face. The man's eyes were on her. "One-two-three——" she seemed to hear.

"No," she called clearly. "Nothing wrong here. Nothing at all."

The man's eyes flickered his approval. He studied her intently. "Listen, my girl. I take it you may have guessed what happened next door. That woman asked for it—but I didn't plan things that way. Now I've got to get out of here and I've got to take you with me."

NEXT SUNDAY—"NODDING DOLL," A SHORT STORY BY SIGRID UNDSET

Latest Evening Gowns Offer Lift to the Spirit

Silhouette Is Main Charm of New Creations

By Rea Seeger.

New evening gowns, to lift any sagging sensation, whether of wardrobe or wardrobe owner, not only dramatize the figure lines but really accomplish the lift idea with unusual colors, combines, and decorative detail. If you are filled to satiety with sequins and everything else that glitters, if you are hunting for something simple, but with all the required zip or eye appeal to the silhouette, these late arrivals are right down your shopping alley.

For a new evening gown can accomplish wonders, snag a new beau, change your drooping spirits into a stimulating fizz, and practically turn a shrinking wallflower into a compelling siren. All this with a change of color, a new combination of colors and fabrics, and worth every penny it costs. You will have a time of it trying to decide between all the soul-satisfying, slinky models and the picture book affairs, extremely wide of full skirt, scant and revealing of bodice. Or you'll spend your money for the more practical, but nonetheless decorative, models teamed with a jacket, either long and fitted, shortish as a bolero, or the swaggers in hip length.

• • •

Velvets with taffeta are provocatively feminine and dress parade. Some of the most exciting finds go a bit Spanish with millions of ruffles from shoulder to hem, each ruffle over a lining of contrasting silk. Others feature the lovely lure of sibilant taffeta under skirts, and full skirts of the taffeta with bands of velvet. Bodices are cut with extremely low and daring outlines, subtly fashioned with graciously curved folds over the edge, with graceful shoulder straps, some with huge, effective bows anchored at the right side, and others of velvet in, or as, the only contrast color.

Slinky crêpes never fail to make the most revealing and graceful costumes, and the color finds this season are limitless and eye-catching, as well as unusual. New silhouettes in crêpe and clinging jerseys, marked with typically feminine accents such as lace frills, edging, and shadow hem make such gowns star attractions of every collection. The snow white gowns still are extremely beautiful and flattering. Green gold, pale beige, copper, cinnamon, cerise, moonstone blue, and tangerine are some of the newest color finds to take the place of the more usual, but effective, reds, emeralds, pinks, and blues.

• • •

The jacket and gown combines always charm, and while they are sold together, nearly all models are painlessly separable, thereby assuring the use of the jacket with other dresses, and of the dresses as equally smooth partners with other jackets in the wardrobe, either fur or fabric. The full skirted, picture book gowns are particularly effective under the many, high fashion, full length and short capes of this season's collections.

Sketched, five newly unpacked models ready for the holiday parties. Others from the same collection, to be found in a Chicago store, have the same unusual charm of color, silhouette, and new details. For information, call Superior 0200.

'Junior Miss' Cast Pleases N. Y. Critic

NEW YORK [Special].—The Broadway theater has been virtually overrun with lively adolescents this fall. "Best Foot Forward," the George Abbott musical is literally crawling with them. Hardly a comedy has been produced that hasn't had one or more scampering about, being either cute or comical. Now "Junior Miss" has arrived to top the list.

Fortunately, these youngsters have been mostly interesting, and well behaved. You and I can remember when the stage adolescent was generally a young person definitely to be avoided. So, for that matter, were stage children of any age. They either prattled vacuously or forgot their lines, or teetered around uncertainly. Whatever they did contributed to audience discomfort rather than audience satisfaction.

• • •

Of late years children on the stage have been as poised as veterans and, when well directed, good fun. The improvement started, I think, about the time the Booth Tarkington stories telling of Penrod and the baby talk lady came to the stage. To me a lot of these bending twigs are still a bit hard to take, seeming extravagantly exaggerated. No adolescents that I have ever contacted have as much difficulty walking and talking as the stage variety has. But I have my favorites..

"Junior Miss" was extracted from the Sally Benson sketches in the "New Yorker" magazine by Jerome Chodorov and Joseph Fields, the same two who took "My Sister Eileen" from the same source. "Eileen" was staged and directed by George Kaufman. "Junior Miss" has been staged and directed by Moss Hart, the Kaufman partner, which helps to keep everything in one professional family, so to speak.

"Junior Miss" revolves a little shakily about a plot in which Judy, the precocious 13 year old member of the Harry Graves family, sees her father kissing the daughter-secretary of his boss and immediately jumps to the conclusion that papa is having an affair, like Tyrone Power of the movies.

She also has just discovered her Uncle Willis, who has been kept a little mysteriously in the background for 10 years. Willis, Judy decides, has been doing a "stretch" in prison, as also happens in the movies.

Now she decides that, if she can marry Willis to papa's "affair," that will automatically clear up the whole scandalous business. And it does. But not until after papa has lost his job and the marriage of Willis and the boss' daughter is seriously threatened.

• • •

Judy is advised and assisted in all her moves by her bosom friend, Fluffy Adams, who lives in an apartment downstairs. She also is greatly irritated by her older sister, Lois, who would treat both Judy and Fluffy as something less than dirt under her toeless slippers, if she could. But Judy manages to come thru and, in the end, as should happen in all adolescent comedy, she is triumphant in a gorgeous new dress with a long skirt, spotted with rosebuds.

Patricia Peardon is the youthful discovery who plays Judy, and Lenore Lonergan, who was Katharine Hepburn's young sister in "The Philadelphia Story," is the Fluffy. They are a talented and an enlivening pair. Patricia is a daughter of Rear Adm. Peardon of the navy, and has been playing child parts on the "March of Time" radio program for five years. Lenore is the daughter of the Lester Lonergans II. They both are likable and gifted, and are helping enthusiastically to make a comedy hit of "Junior Miss."

Jane Cowl.
[Hal Phyfe Photo.]

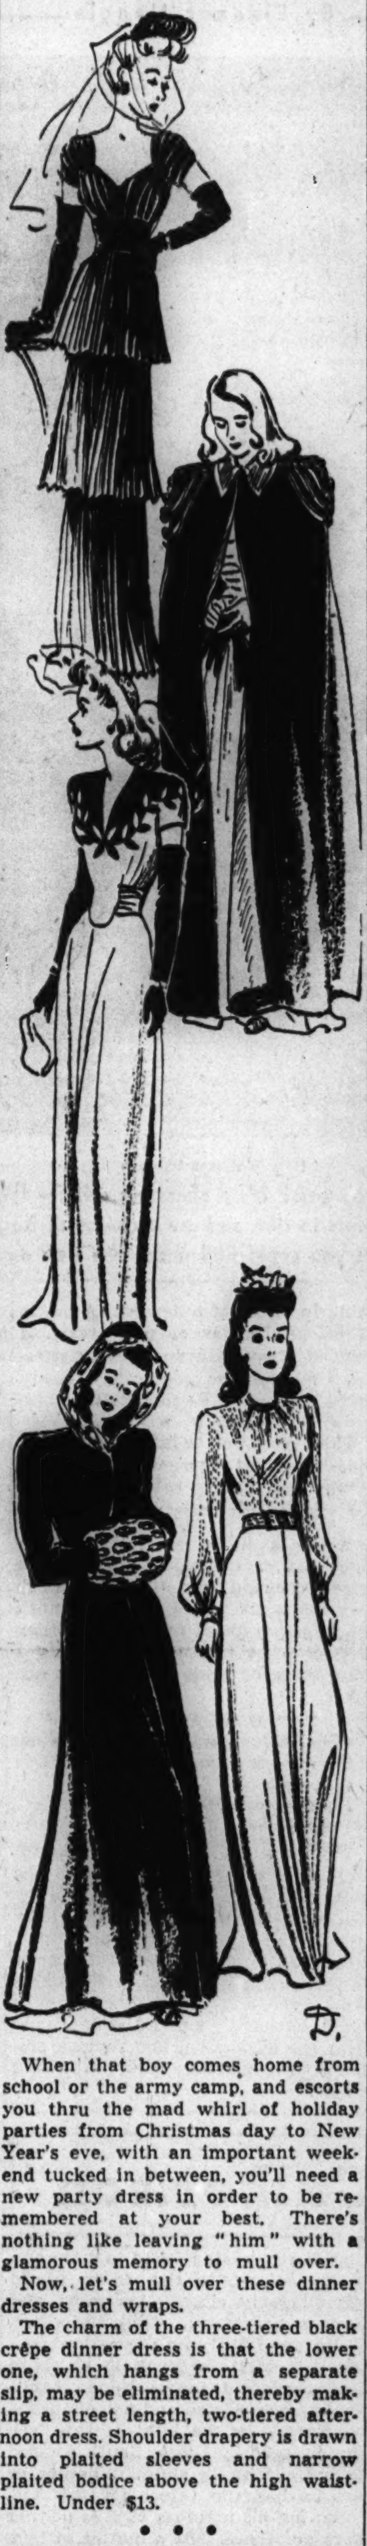
There has been quite a swarm of new plays recently, but no other hits have been found among them. The most interesting has been "Ring Around Elizabeth," which Jane Cowl elected to do, apparently because she thought playing Elizabeth would be fun. And so it was for Jane. She gave to the part everything she could think of that would help the entertainment, but it was artificial stuff, and far below her average in character achievement.

In this comedy, written by Charl Armstrong, Elizabeth is the head of one of those irritating families in which every member tries desperately to suggest a recognizable type. The dull husband is crazy about fishing. The simple grandfather is an amateur fireman, with helmet and private fire alarm. The irascible grandma is forever busy figuratively taking the younger generation over her knee and paddling it enthusiastically. The youngest daughter either gets her way or has a tantrum. The maid either gets her way or threatens to quit.

Elizabeth stands it as long as she can, and then decides upon an attack of amnesia. With her memory completely lost, and pretending to be a stranger in her own house, she finally gets things straightened out and there is hope for a quieter and more peaceful life at the end.

FASHIONS—

By Angela



When that boy comes home from school or the army camp, and escorts you thru the mad whirl of holiday parties from Christmas day to New Year's eve, with an important weekend tucked in between, you'll need a new party dress in order to be remembered at your best. There's nothing like leaving "him" with a glamorous memory to mull over.

Now, let's mull over these dinner dresses and wraps.

The charm of the three-tiered black crêpe dinner dress is that the lower one, which hangs from a separate slip, may be eliminated, thereby making a street length, two-tiered afternoon dress. Shoulder drapery is drawn into plaited sleeves and narrow plaited bodice above the high waistline. Under $13.

• • •

The dashing evening cape is black velvet, lined with red to match the red velvet collar at the tailored neckline. The square-shouldered epaulettes are simple little ropes of black and red patent leather, effectively looped and braided.

The graceful, curving, yokeline on the third figure is duplicated in the back. The dress is clinging white silk jersey, with a black jersey yoke. The appliqued leaves decorating the yokeline reverse the color combination.

• • •

Lower left is another black velvet evening wrap, the hood of which is lined in a leopard print, velvetlike material. And a tiny, round, leopard print muff keeps the fingers from dropping off with the cold. Under $15.

The cover-up dinner dress is pale blue. There is a long, straight-hanging skirt of silk jersey, and a long-sleeved blouse in a lightweight and supple, shimmering metallic cloth.

Lady of the House

Since November is so generous with Sundays this year let's take this extra one—the first in Advent—and all go over to Hilda Butler Farr's, who wrote that heart gripping Prayer for Peace for American Mothers, and sit around the fire and just talk, or listen to some bit of verse and perhaps magically transport ourselves to her Dream Cabin.

I dream of the house I'll build
Somewhere upon a hill,
A little cabin made of logs,
A life that's slow and sweet.
I see it all within my mind
As some day it will look . . .
The cozy rooms where one may rest
And read a favorite book.
A fireplace to gather round
As twilight shadows fall
And many dreams will come to life
In hours that never pall.
So much of joy this house will hold,
I could not ask for more,
Except a path well worn and wide
That leads up to the door.

Trooping up that wide path with me come O. F. S., our first poet contributor, who all year has sent us lovely thoughts; Mary Ganey, too, Elizabeth Bush, Katharine Isabelle Dignum, Glee Shaw, and a goodly company of others. TAPS with her unanswered query of "why men hate when they are born to love;" Milly Walton, who with so many of us has kinship with the world thru "a little kitchen window." A. I. B. and her recollections of a New England childhood. H. S. W., whose thoughts often go back to the "old stone house," a pioneering ancestor built in a midwestern wilderness. Marguerite Zralek, full of youth and verve and love of life.

That keen eyed young man just coming in the door—courageous lad to brave a company of women—is Carl Winfred Snyder whose rhyming whimsies point to deep significance in common things. O, there is Anne C. Korpics! Sit over here, please, and recite for us those little stanzas about Autumn.

I've never seen such somber trees
As last night when walking thru the park;
Their beauty gone with the drifting leaves
That used to whisper in the dark.

The night songs now are plaintive ones
Of summer rapture too soon fled—
The wind strikes sad Aeolian strains
Across the branches of the dead.

Let's pull up another chair for June Baker while she tells us how she feels about that Latch Key.

When I am preparing
The evening meal,
I listen often,
And somehow feel
That a cheerful sound
I soon shall hear;
And then—it comes,
Bringing my dear
John's latch key in the door.

And now for us
The day is spent.
Evening brings rest;
We are content.
For many years more,
Lord grant that I may,
Hear the same sweet sound
At the close of day.
John's latch key in the door.

Look at that crowd of youngsters scampering up the path, freckled Little Corny in the lead, pigtails flying. Those two husky lads are yours, aren't they, Mrs. Porter? Dee Wilder will help you entertain them with yarns while I get out the popcorn and apples. I know they'll want some more about that Curious Mouse.

A little mouse kept wondering why
The colors shine on a butterfly.
And then he saw one quickly pass
The flower bed, with a looking glass.
He caught up blue and gold and red
And threw them backward over his head.

Now, Dee, you tell about

Teddy Bear Town.

Away, away in Teddy Bear Town,
Where snow is clean and soft as down,
Wee chubby bears all dressed in brown
Choose one little bear to be the clown.
He whirls about on his small bear toes,
Round and round like a top he goes,
And tosses the snow with his chubby nose.
O, how the other bears laugh at his shows!
So in Teddy Bear Town away, away,
That is the way the little bears play.
O, don't you think that it would be gay
To journey there to spend the day?

The children troop out with Dee, and in the gathering dusk Dale Poole puts a bit of her deep feeling for opera into The Soul Beautiful.

The soul beautiful is an exquisite white butterfly
With glistening, gauzy wings.
As purple twilight shadows seek to fetter, it
Wings its way to dazzling heights to meet
A silvery white moon; and follows a trail
Of silver stars until the rosy dawn bids
It return to earth for yet another day.

But here is Mrs. Farr at the door of her "dream cabin," a bit reluctant to have us go

Because of Hours Like This.

It's good to open up the door
And find you standing there,
For just to hear you say "hello"
Can banish every care.
And when you come inside the house
You bring so much along,
Companionship—a rousing smile
That turns the hours to song.
The conversation never lags
And time just slides away
Because there's much for you to tell,
A lot for me to say.
These visits give the heart a lift
One can't afford to miss,
And life is richer thru the years
Because of hours like this.
So come as often as you can
There's dreams for us to share—
It's good to open up the door
And find you standing there.

Irresistible Christmas Candies Are Easy to Make

Plain Fondant Is the Basis of Several Kinds

Miss Meade contributes daily to the feature pages of the Chicago Tribune, guiding housewives to the best knowledge of cookery and hostessing. When writing for information please inclose stamped, self-addressed envelope.

[Copyright: 1941: By The Chicago Tribune.]

Sometimes I think that an anti-candy campaign, launched before the Christmas holidays, would be a good idea. Then I decide that the tradition of candy at Christmas time is too deeply rooted to be assailed and, besides, it's probably an anti-overeating-of-candy-on-Christmas campaign which we need, and not a program aimed at abolition of that happy old custom of nibbling sweets.

So here I am, once more, with a batch of recipes, good recipes every one of them, for making those irresistible candies which we simply must have at hand for the holidays. If there are to be boxes of homemade candies for gifts, it might be well for the cook to make up a preliminary sample batch from one or another of these receipes, just for practice.

More good recipes are to be found in "Simple Home-made Candies," a mimeographed booklet which sells for 5 cents, in stamps, by mail.

Fondant has more uses than any other kind of candy at Christmas time. It may be made into patties, coated with chocolate, used for dipping nuts, filling dates. You can make a delicious candy of it by working fruits and nuts into it. Candied cherries, pistachio nuts, and candied pineapple with fondant make a very festive looking Christmas sweet. Leave the cherries and nuts whole, the pineapple in large pieces, so that when the candy is cut, there will be good-sized pieces of color thruout the white fondant.

PLAIN FONDANT
[One pound]
2 cups granulated sugar
1¼ cups water
2 tablespoons light corn sirup
1 teaspoon vanilla, or a few drops peppermint oil

Cook sugar, water, and corn sirup, stirring constantly, until well mixed and boiling. Put a cover on the saucepan for several minutes, then, so that the steam will wash sugar crystals down the sides of the pan, preventing "sugaring" of the finished candy. Remove cover and let mixture boil without stirring to 238 degrees by the candy thermometer [soft ball stage]. Pour at once onto a cold, wet plate. Cool to lukewarm, and then beat with a paddle or spatula until the candy becomes creamy and white. Knead with the hands until smooth.

Work the flavoring into the fondant now, or wait until after "ripening" if the one batch is to be flavored variously. Store candy in covered jar for two or three days before using.

To make coffee flavored fondant use strong, freshly brewed coffee in place of water. Flavor with vanilla.

Chocolate fondant may be made by adding 1½ squares unsweetened chocolate to the recipe before cooking.

If you are going to make a variety of candies from this batch of fondant, you might try tinting small portions pink, green, and yellow and flavoring them with mint. Use plain vanilla fondant for dipping nuts. Flavor some of the candy with orange and lemon extract, make small balls of it, and roll them in nuts.

VINEGAR TAFFY
2 cups sugar
⅔ cup hot water
2 tablespoons butter
5 tablespoons cidar vinegar

Heat sugar, water, and butter to boiling point, and add vinegar. Boil without stirring to brittle stage, 268 degrees, by the candy thermometer. Pour into buttered pan and let cool. When cool enough to handle, pull until porous and light in color, using the tips of the fingers and the thumbs. Cut into pieces with scissors and wrap each piece in waxed paper.

The batch of taffy may be divided for flavoring and tinting if desired. Striped taffy may be achieved by working a little red coloring into one part of the candy and a little green coloring into the other. The two colors are pulled separately until the candy is about ready to cut, then they may be pulled together into a long strip, or rope, to be cut at one time.

MAPLE PECAN PRALINES
1 cup maple sugar, firmly packed in cup
1 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1 cup milk
1 tablespoon butter
1½ cups pecans

Combine all ingredients except nuts in a saucepan and cook to the soft ball stage, or 240 degrees by the candy thermometer. Cool to lukewarm. Beat until creamy and thick. Place pan over hot water until candy is soft enough to drop in flat cakes from a spoon. Arrange nuts in groups on a buttered pan and drop candy over the nuts. Cool and remove pralines with spatula. Wrap in waxed paper.

Thru the Looking Glass

A Christmas wreath of colognes! It's a charming gift for the woman who likes perfumed colognes, and prefers to own and use a choice of fragrances. It's one of the most delightful things you could find under the tree on Christmas morning.

The Christmas gift of toiletries bears an unwritten tribute for the woman at whose feet it is laid: "To the beautiful, the accoutrements of beauty." No gift is more flattering, more suggestive of the thought that the recipient is feminine, fair, and deserving of the luxuries of life.

Money doesn't matter when you think in terms of toiletries. A bottle of cologne, a jar of fine cream, a cake of fragrant soap are as flattering a gift for one woman as a costly fitted case might be for another.

• • •

This year the toiletries gifts are more beautiful than ever. The little things and the big things are styled to perfection, and the buyer can choose his price range.

Colognes, in the last few years, have achieved vast popularity. It develops that every one of Eve's daughters seems to like them. The only thing the average woman seems to like better than one bottle of cologne is two or three, or even more. A change of fragrance for the change of mood or costume is achieved easily, economically, with cologne used as a refreshant and a light perfuming agent. Colognes do not take the place of perfume, but they do supplement it so that less of the precious, expensive, concentrated stuff need be used.

• • •

Among the Christmas cologne offerings, you'll find one for the woman who is a true cologne fancier. It offers her not one, but five, famous perfumed colognes, set in a glittering box that is decorated with green and red and all the pretty Christmas trimming. It makes a wreath, of sorts, that catches the holiday spirit and, for the woman who finds it under her Christmas tree, holds it the whole year thru! It's one of the most charming of all cologne presentations this year. And its price, for the five, is only $5.50.

"The bidding went:

North	East	South	West
1 club	Pass	1 diamond	Pass
2 diamonds	Pass	2 spades	Pass
3 diamonds	Pass	6 clubs	Pass
7 clubs	Pass	Pass	Pass

"After North's desultory response of three diamonds, South maintained that he was afraid that North might drop the bidding if he [South] were to bid less than six clubs, and that with his distribution and support for clubs, the diamonds could be used for discards of spades or hearts if the heart ace was off the hand.

"North claimed that after South's 'tremendous' jump from three diamonds to six clubs, he had no club losers in his hand and that he was fully justified in going to seven clubs.

"Obviously with the king-jack of clubs sitting over the queen there was absolutely no play for the grand slam, whereas six clubs was a laydown. South claimed his hand was worth six from the previous bidding.

"Who was right? J. M."

Answer: What happened in this deal was the same thing that happens in thousands of other deals, with equally fatal results. North was guilty of trapping his own partner!

This is one of the most difficult of all errors to diagnose and explain, but since it is so important I shall do my best:

When South responded to the opening club bid with one diamond, North raised to only two diamonds. This was correct inasmuch as South's bid had been entirely noncommittal and up to this point North could not assume even game-going strength in the combined hands. After that single raise, however, South's two spade bid [a peculiar call, incidentally] radically changed matters. Now North should have known that South had an excellent hand [witness his "reverse" responding], and should not have contented himself with the unconstructive, unencouraging, and unrevealing second raise in diamonds. At the very least he should have displayed a real interest in game by mentioning no trump. Even if he bid only two no trump, this would be far more constructive than a three diamond bid, which virtually announced a lack of heart strength, necessary for a no trump call.

However, this criticism of North's early bidding is not my main point. I merely wish to stress the fact that North did take certain action in the early stages and that this action inevitably gave South the impression that North, having failed to make any strong bid up to this point, would not suddenly change his mind and become aggressive. Thus, in effect, South was lulled into the natural feeling that whatever decision he chose to make about the combined hands would be respected and not disturbed by North. In the light of this feeling, induced by North, South decided to bid a slam in clubs. Whether or not he had the values for this bid, following his previous bids, is neither here nor there. [As a matter of fact, it was a good gamble.] The true point is that North had virtually said with his three diamond bid, "This is the best I can do, partner; where we go from here is up to you." Having given South carte blanche, so to speak, North should have considered himself estopped from further bidding.

The essence of this proposition is that a player must not "back and fill" about his hand; he must not bid weakly and then, out of the clear blue sky, suddenly come to life and get highly aggressive. He should recognize that his weak bidding has given his partner a certain amount of latitude; it is very bad bridge to give that latitude and then suddenly and unexpectedly to withdraw it. To illustrate this principle more concretely let me analyze the following bidding sequence:

North	South
1 club	1 spade
1 no trump	3 spades
5 spades [!]

North's five spade bid here is definitely wrong, no matter what his holding is! This is because his one no trump, a minimum rebid to one spade, automatically limits his further action. Perhaps South has the sort of hand that calls for a slight "stretch" over one no trump; perhaps his three spade bid, tho the best call available, represents a hope for game rather than the assurance of game. Quite legitimately he makes the slight stretch—only to find that his heretofore quiescent partner now comes to life with a bid that puts the partnership past game. There is no excuse for this sort of bidding.

Bridge Problem.

Hearts are trump and South leads. North and South are to win seven tricks against any defense.

Solution: South leads the club jack, which West trumps to avoid discarding. North trumps with the nine and leads the trey, giving South two trump tricks, North discarding a spade. If West has let go a diamond, South puts East in with the club. If West discards another diamond, all South's diamonds are good. If West discards a spade, all North's spades are good.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

In case you are hurrying thru with a game room, to be finished before the holidays, or planning to finish it afterward, there are numerous interesting treatments for the basement game room floor; finishes that are resistant to wear and decorative and that fairly beckon to friends and family "to be walked upon and enjoyed to the fullest."

* *

Also there are practical ways to give the precious leather goods around your house—your luggage, your upholstery, your book bindings—insurance against drying out during winter's artificial heat. Also ways of reviving it, simple ways of glazing it and cleaning it.

* *

If you are having a new bathtub installed before or after the holidays, metal hangers are excellent insurance against likelihood of a sad gap between wall and rim. If you happen to have discovered such a crack developing, you can fill it in with some type of fabricated moulding made for the purpose. You can get these in rubber or plastic, and if there is a handy man around your house he can do the work. Also there are waterproof cements for filling in cracks between wall and tub rim, or tile cements which will adhere to enamel as well as tile.

Writer Tells Modern Etiquet of Engagement

By Helen Bartlett.

The custom in engagement etiquet of "asking for the maiden's hand" is no longer observed in its formal or strict understanding. Usually the two young persons who have decided to marry have pretty well settled the matter for themselves, but it is only courteous, in the case of a girl who lives with her parents, to urge the young man to talk things over with her father. And he should be prepared to answer whatever personal questions the father wishes to ask.

The engagement ring is purchased by the young man, usually in the company of the girl, but in any case her wishes are respected in regard to the stone, the cut, and the style. It need not necessarily be a diamond. In fact, there need be no ring at all if the man and the girl prefer to dispense with it.

• • •

As soon as the two families are made aware of the engagement, the mother of the young man should call on the prospective bride and her parents. This call is returned within a week. If they live in another community, his mother is obliged to write at once to welcome the girl into the family and express her pleasure at the forthcoming marriage.

The ring is not worn in public until the families are notified and the formal announcement has been, or is about to be, made. The girl's family, never the man's family, issues the announcement. Relatives and members of the family out of the city are notified by letter. The family should be advised first, of course, before friends and casual acquaintances are confided in. Announcement cards never are sent out. The bride's family may entertain in her honor, write letters to family and friends, or send a notice to the local newspaper.

• • •

Showers of one sort or another seem to follow automatically in the wake of an engagement announcement and, while the strictest arbiters of fashion and etiquet still maintain that they are provincial, it is obvious that they are becoming more and more popular. However, no member of the girl's family, or of her fiancé's family, ever gives a shower. Only friends do that. Her relatives may be invited, but they do not extend invitations to any sort of a party at which guests are expected to come armed with gifts.

What are the duties of the best man and ushers at the home reception? Helen Bartlett, Tribune etiquet editor, answers this and many other questions about wedding customs in her valuable booklet, "The Wedding Reception or Breakfast." On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents; by postpaid mail, 3 cents.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey

There's nothing quite like a two-piecer, consisting of knife-plaited skirt and sleek jacket, to streamline you and your wardrobe into fashionable lines. One of the virtues of such an ensemble is its separability. The jacket may team with other skirts and the skirt may go about with sweaters, blouses, and other jackets.

"Yours truly" is very proud of this model, because it achieved its goal with a minimum of material and is so easy to make that you can plan to whip it up for wear over the coming holidays. I made mine of lightweight black woolen, with the collar and cuffs of piqué, easily removable for laundering. If you have other preferences for this buttoned-down-the-front outfit with bracelet length sleeves, try velvet, crêpe, or velveteen. In the latter case you might go a step farther and give a velveteen jacket a contrasting plaid skirt.

Style No. T-8747 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20. Size 16 requires 3⅞ yards of 54 inch material, with ⅜ yard of contrasting.

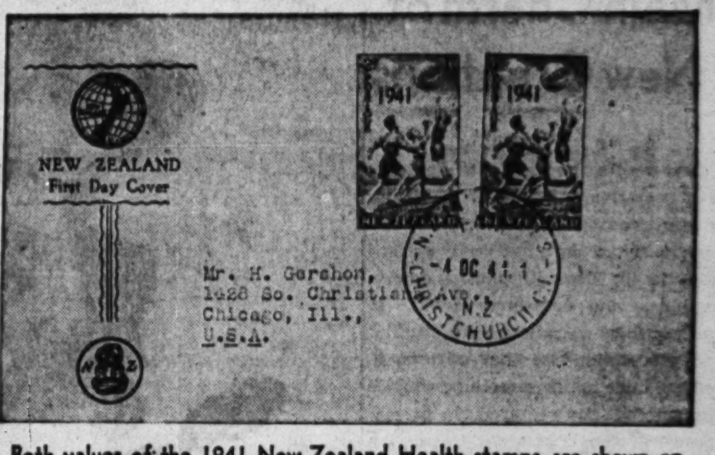
The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps but not value. The Stamps and Coins advertising column in this page contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.



Both values of the 1941 New Zealand Health stamps are shown on this first day cover from the collection of Nathon Gershon. The postmark is that of the opening day of the New Zealand Industries fair.

The first adhesive revenue stamps of the United States were those designed to assist in defraying the expenses of the Civil war. Until April 30, 1864, the law stated that a stamp could be used only for payment of the tax on the particular instrument or article specified on the face of the stamp. The stamps for documents included some 23 titles ranging from agreements, bonds, etc., to telegrams and warehouse receipts. When the law was written it was thought that the use of distinctive documentary stamps would produce statistics of great value, but after a short time it was determined that the inconvenience of printing and handling the many values overshadowed anything which could be learned from their use and on the date above mentioned it was ordered that the stamps be used indiscriminately and all be accounted for under the title "General Stamps."

This change in policy accounts for the issuance in 1864 of the 2 cent U.S.I.R. stamps which generally replaced the various 2 cent stamps bearing other titles. The original revenue law of July 1, 1862, was arranged in three divisions or schedules. Taxes under schedule "A" were collected without stamps while those under schedules "B" and "C" required the evidence of stamps upon the documents covered under the former and upon the proprietary articles covered by the latter schedule. Schedule' "C" included medicines and medical preparations, pills, plasters, cosmetics, perfumery, etc., and playing cards. The revenue law was amended on March 3, 1863, and various rates of taxation were changed. Two new titles were added to schedule "B," bill of sale and lottery tickets, but no specific stamps were made bearing those titles. At this time the tax on express receipts was removed. No changes were made in schedule "C."

On June 30, 1864, a new revenue law was passed which included taxes on several new classes of documents in schedule "B," and in schedule "C," in addition to increasing the tax on playing cards, provided new taxes for photographs and for friction matches. The new taxes imposed by this law were to be operative on Aug. 1, except in the case of the matches where the date was fixed at Sept. 1. Apparently following the passage of the new law a ruling had been made that all stamps could be used indiscriminately, but on July 12 a new ruling was made which required that the documentary or general stamps be used only for schedule "B," and likewise the proprietary stamps only for schedule "C." The ruling reads in part: "And proprietary and playing card stamps may be used interchangeably, as well as for those articles under schedule C' for which no stamp has been provided, as perfumery, cosmetics, matches, and photographs. The instruction heretofore given you, that general stamps might be used for playing cards, matches, etc., is therefore rescinded."

The tax on photographs in certain cases was 5 per cent ad valorem, otherwise 2 cents on photographs retailing up to 25 cents, 3 cents from 25 to 50 cents, 5 cents from 50 cents to $1, and 5 cents for each additional dollar or fraction thereof. In applying these tax rates with the ruling quoted above it might be expected that all photographs of the period would bear proprietary or playing card stamps in combinations of the 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5 cent values which were printed for both titles. However, this is not always the case, for many carry such stamps as telegraph, express, foreign exchange, etc., and now and then one is seen with the lowly 2 cent U.S.I.R.

As written the bill made no special provision for photographs, but required the stamps to be affixed in the same manner as to other proprietary articles so they would be effectively "destroyed upon opening." More than one photographer wrote the revenue department inquiring how this could be accomplished without destroying the photograph, and so far as known learned nothing for their pains. However, in certain cases where photographers were unable to affix stamps without material damage to their pictures, it was permissible to cancel the stamps and return them to the department monthly. This ruling applied perhaps to photographs on glass which would have been ruined or at least stained by an adhesive stamp.

The Latin American stamp section of the Pan-American union announces that, in response to an inquiry recently made as to the official character of the "Agencia Filatelica Dominicana," the following statement under date of Nov. 4, 1941, has just been received via air mail, over the signature of Dr. Andres Pastoriza, secretario de estado de la presidencia of the Dominican Republic: "Regarding your question in connection with the 'Agencia Filatelica Dominicana,' I may inform you that said agency submitted to the Dominican government a proposal to handle everything in connection with the sale of postage stamps abroad, but that proposal has had no effect because it was not advantageous to the interests of our government. Therefore there is no connection whatsoever between said agency and the Dominican."

A list of the various Latin American stamps now available at the stamp section, Pan-American union, will be sent to those who inclose a 3 cent stamp for return postage.

Bettina Bedwell Says:

Some of the most brilliant American designers are working on a new kind of fashion, which has the convertible idea. They're draining their reserves of talent to produce dresses, coats, or suits which may be converted with a twist of the wrist into something quite different. It's a sort of style stretch-out system, whereby the customer gets a break. She buys a dress and lo! it turns out to be two dresses, or maybe even three, all for the price of one.

This kind of thing is, of course, treason, no less, to that fine old tradition of unlimited spending, quick turnover, and early death to any individual dress you happened to buy, which was the big idea behind most of the dress theories during the last decade or so. It is a buildup for the new thought of getting good things, buying quality, and holding on to it for a spell.

Children Inclined to Conceal Their Deepest Thoughts

Tall Youngster Often Nurses Hurt Silently

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1941: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

Children don't talk.

Frequently it isn't until years and years afterward that you learn certain things about them, I mean innermost things, and then often it is quite by accident that you come upon a revelation, such as when the conversation turns in an unusual direction, or something they read releases a flood of memory.

What brought this whole subject to my mind at the moment, altho I've noticed it again and again, was a letter I received and an incident connected with it.

"Dear Mrs. Bevans:

"I read your column about tall children. You see, I am 11 years of age and 5 feet, 6 inches tall. My father died when I was a baby and my mother has been working ever since. I have two brothers who also are very tall. We have a woman who comes to our house every day to cook our meals and to clean.

• • •

"You said that parents should not expect more of their children if they are tall. The reason parents do expect more is because most children who are very tall are more serious, have more responsibility, and an older mind than others of their age. And the reason for this is that if I went places acting like a child of 11, people would think me crazy. I'm tall, so naturally I look older, and, because of my height, I have to dress differently than others of my age. And people don't think I am 11 by looking at me.

"However, I'd like to caution all mothers of tall children. My brother and I have more responsibility than other children our age, and because of this I found my friends acting very silly and stupid. I thought they had hardly any common sense, so I left them and now have hardly any friends. And this is because my mother would not let me stay with older boys and girls, whom I found interesting and enjoyable.

Often have I heard mothers say to their tall children: 'Why don't you stay with Phyllis any more? You used to like her so much,' or, 'I've made arrangements with your classmate, Irene, for you two to go to the movies Sunday.' A tall child feels embarrassed and ashamed to march thru the streets with a bunch of silly little children.

"Well, I find I am saying more than my share.—A Very Young Reader."

• • •

As I finished a tall young friend burst out, "O! I know just how she feels! Everything she says about herself I felt when I was 11, too! Mothers and other grown people don't realize! When we protest, and even argue, they should listen and think a little. If I ever have a tall, thin, very young daughter, I hope I'll remember."

How can you amuse the convalescent child? What is the most difficult age? How may stubbornness be prevented? These and other problems are discussed in "You and Your Young Child." Mrs. Gladys Bevans' latest booklet, on sale at the Tribune Public Services Offices, 1 S. Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 15 cents; postpaid, 18 cents.

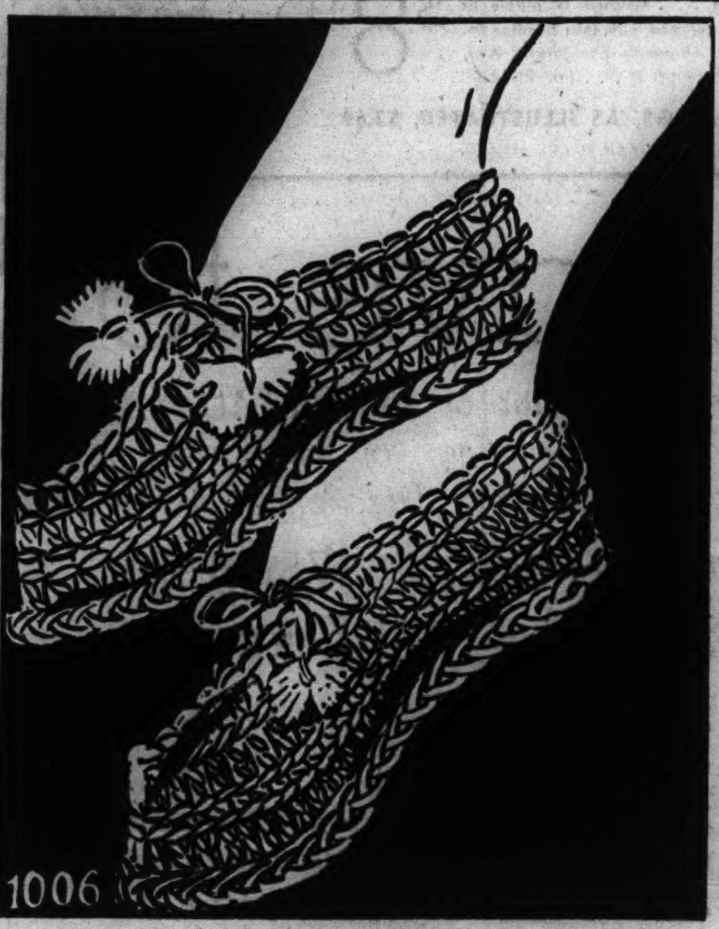
Smart Crocheted Slippers



By Ellen Bruce.

Crocheted slippers are not new, but when the entire slipper is crocheted, sole and all, we have something new under the sun. These attractive shoes may do double duty in the house and on the beach, but they are easy to make, which is the prime requisite. They are created from a heavy rug wool and possess style and individuality.

For instructions in crocheting the rug wool slippers, No. 1006, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

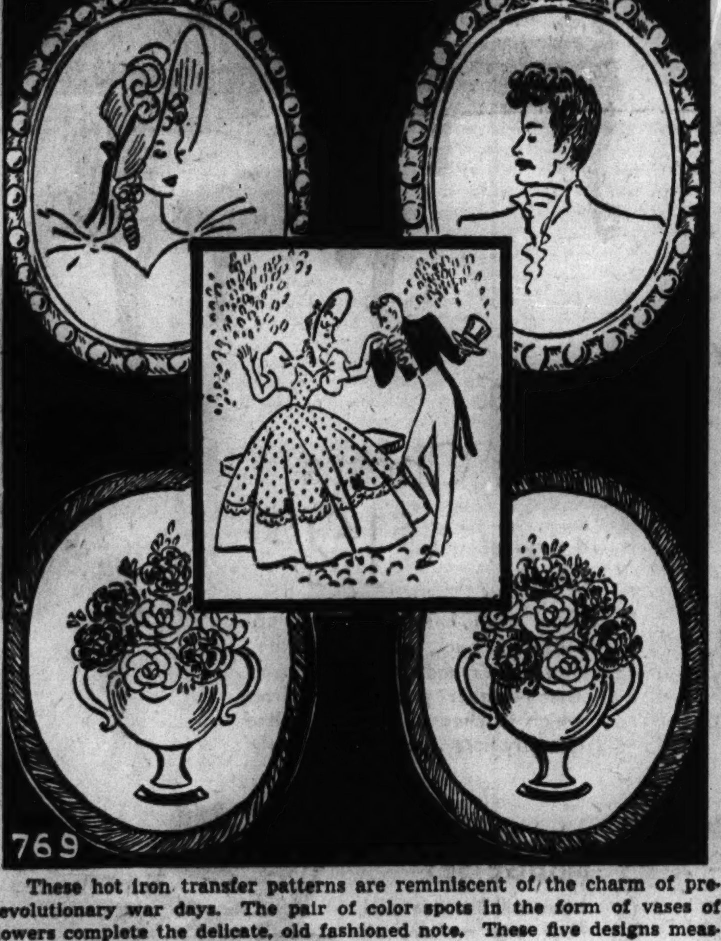
Hot Iron Transfer Designs

By Nancy Cabot.



These hot iron transfer patterns are reminiscent of the charm of prerevolutionary war days. The pair of color spots in the form of vases of flowers complete the delicate, old fashioned note. These five designs measure about 4 by 6 inches when completed.

For the hot iron transfer pattern of the five motifs, No. 769, send 10 cents in stamps or coin to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 Fifth avenue, New York City.

Fashions as I See Them

By Judith Cass

Mrs. James O. Heyworth. [Tribune Photo.]

Mrs. James O. Heyworth, one of the smartest looking young matrons in social circles, always dresses with individuality and chic. This year she has a honey beige suit with a peplum of leopard that is too dashing and smart for words. It must have been a temptation to have a fur hat to match the slightly flaring peplum, but wisely, the former Jean Stevens withstood the temptation and wears a simple felt hat the same color as the suit. . . . Beige of a duller shade than Mrs. Heyworth's, but still a lovely color, are a wool frock and hat to match that Mrs. J. Beach Clow is wearing this winter. The gown is simple, depending upon expert cutting and stitching for smartness, and the hat is a tiny, caplike affair, almost a Dutch bonnet. With her ash blonde hair and hazel eyes this costume is effective and unusual. A single strand of exquisite pearls relieves the high neckline. . . . The effort toward making the recent Bachelors' and Benedicts' ball smaller and less pretentious than its predecessors did not affect the magnificence of the ball gowns worn. Altho few women wore jewels, the gowns themselves were as striking and effective as ever. . . . Sequins sparkled on many a frock, and more than one boasted the long torso bodice and full skirt which is so smart a silhouette this season. Miss Nathalie Bell wore just such a gown of black tulle embroidered with blazing sequin roses whose long stems trailed down one side of the bodice into the skirt. She pinned a corsage of purple orchids in her hair. Miss Bell is one of the eight of last year's debutantes who were attending their first Bs' and Bs'.

• • •

Miss Eunice Hale, another of the girls dancing at her first Bs' and Bs,' wore a fragile gown of orchid tulle. A wide scarf of the tulle floated from one narrow shoulder strap, and tulle rosettes were scattered over the full skirt. . . . Like Mrs. Wyndham Hasler, wife of the chairman of the ball, Mrs. Wrigley Offield wore the same gown she modeled in the St. Luke's fashion show. Mrs. Offield's is of pearl pink satin cut like a gown worn in an old daguerreotype. It has a low, round neckline with a deep bertha collar of lace encrusted with pearls. . . . Mrs. Walter Cherry Jr. looked like a demure schoolgirl in a bouffant gown of white tulle. It has a dainty, scalloped neckline and molded, long bodice. Black lace to set off her dusky beauty was Miss Pauline Palmer's choice. The gown was a billow of lace, swooping down in back to form a slight train. Miss Palmer wrapped around her shoulders a lace shawl which was soft and delicate enough to double as a Spanish mantilla on her dark curls.

• • •

Mrs. Ralph H. James. [Tribune Photo.]

Mrs. Ralph James, who made arrangements for a recent English-Speaking Union luncheon, wore a fascinating hat to "her" party. It is a tiny, tilted-forward chapeau of shirred red crêpe. A black feather bird soars at the front, and a red veil floats over all. . . . It isn't hard to imagine why Mrs. Charles B. Goodspeed has the reputation of being one of Chicago's best dressed women when she ventures out in the smart burgundy ensemble she's wearing this winter. "Ensemble" is just the word for the costume, for every part of it, from the little hat down to the burgundy suede slippers banded in gray and wine plaid, shows Mrs. Goodspeed's flair for style. Her fitted coat, hat, and flat envelope bag all are cut from the same bolt of burgundy tweed. The hat, shaped like a skull cap and tied with a tweed bow above her forehead, has a flattering wisp of burgundy veil. A plastic rectangle in the center of her bag bears the nickname "Bobsy" in tall, gold letters. To complete this handsome costume Mrs. Goodspeed wears a scarf of sables and silver button earrings. . . . Out shopping for Christmas the other day, Mrs. Phelps B. Hoyt was bundled in mink to protect her from the wintry gales. To match her handsome fur coat she had a forward-tilted hat cuffed in mink. Its crown was formed by two feather wings dappled in brown and white with their tips sweeping backward.

• • •

Pink and gray, colors in which the woman's board of the Travelers' Aid will decorate the Arts club on Dec. 6 for its third annual ball, almost were repeated in the costume young Mrs. Paul Butler was wearing recently at a board meeting to plan the ball. Mrs. Butler's dress wasn't gray, but it was of a soft shade of smoky blue that contains a great deal of gray. The dress was ribbed from the yoke to the hem by vertical tucking. Studs of pink crystal ringed in rhinestones fastened the blouse and buttoned down the points of her collar. Mrs. Butler's hat of a flattering shade of blush pink was a tiny, old fashioned sailor with its brim turned up at the sides. . . . At the same meeting Mrs. Wesley Loomis III. was wearing a striking costume which combined jubilee pink wool and opossum. She left her short opossum jacket in the checkroom, but went in to luncheon carrying the great round muff that matched it. Her wool crêpe dress of the high shade of pink was simply cut, and her pink turban had a large pouf of opossum just above her blonde bangs.

• • •

Mrs. John W. Clarke. [Tribune Photo.]

For dash and color it's hard to equal a chic costume worn by another Travelers' Aid board member, Mrs. Edwin W. Sims Jr. It's a cerise wool suit buttoned up the front by four beaten gold roses which are linked together by gold chains. As unusual as this shade is, Mrs. Sims matched it exactly in her dashing cavalier hat with a cockade of feathers at one side. Also from Mrs. Sims' wardrobe is a stunning dinner dress which she wore recently to the opera. The blouse is entirely of jet black sequins, and the skirt of slim black crêpe. More black sequins form a little calot, which has a snood of starched black lace. . . . Another smart black costume is Mrs. John W. Clarke's opera-goer of black taffeta and heavy white lace. The gown has a swish bouffant skirt, circled at the knees with a wide band of lace. A short white fox jacket and two large gardenias pinned in her dark hair are effective accessories. . . . For sheer amusement there's Mrs. John Carey Murphy's new winter bonnet, a tiny black felt with a miniature red feather rooster perched at the front. Black coq feathers swirl down one side of her head and form the "rooster's" tail. . . . The intense shade of turquoise blue one sees in Chinese pottery is combined with brown in a smart afternoon costume which Mrs. John Evans Love wears. The bodice of her dress is of turquoise wool crêpe banded in brown, and the brown skirt is cut in three tiers. Her high crowned, brown felt hat is wrapped in a scarf of turquoise wool crêpe whose ends hang free.

Mrs. Elaine T., Evanston—I have been wondering this fall, after working on silver which was given us as wedding presents last year, why no one has developed a lacquer-like surfacing for silver that will do away with all polishing?

* *

Grace F., Chicago—My husband built an outdoor shelf by my kitchen window last year and all winter I use it to feed the birds. In the morning I put out warm water, and dog biscuit powdered to small bits and bread crumbs, and I find they won't turn down cake and doughnut crumbs and cracked corn mixed with suet. This is a help for me since I feel better after I've fed the birds. I wish I could do the same for all humans that may be hungry, too.

* *

Mrs. H. Smith, Chicago—I never have trouble reviving old gummed tapes in my desk drawers when they seem to have lost their power to "stick." I add a few drops of glycerine to the water I use to moisten them.

Adelaide S., Cedar Rapids, Ia.—I have learned a couple of things about trimming a tree that I'll pass on to any one rather new at the work. I put lights on tree before the ornaments and tinsel as this prevents breakage of ornaments and also makes it simpler to conceal the wires. Then I study shape of tree before I begin so that my lights will be evenly distributed and start at the top. [This last, in spite of friends who insist it is best to start trimming a tree from the bottom].

Mrs. Harry G., Springfield, Ill.—I never throw away any shirt cardboards that come back from the laundry with my family wash. I can use them for so many things: I slip them under ink bottles when the children do their homework and under the dog's feeding dish, and use them under frying pans, and under vegetables when I cut them. If you do any puttering around with a paint can, set the brushes and can on them. I also save them for use when we go on trips in the summer. Just no end of uses for them.

Mrs. T. Daniels, St. Louis, Mo.—Wouldn't it be a good idea if our nice wax paper rolls could be perforated down the center so we could obtain smaller pieces?

Now—please—YOUR—idea!

Sir Thomas Beecham Will Give Lecture at Arts Club

By Cousin Eve.

A fleeting glimpse of life in Spain came along last week thru a friend delayed there by the exigencies of European travel. She was robbed of her passport on the train and had to put into Madrid to get another. She stayed comfortably enough for a fortnight at the Ritz, and the American embassy detailed as her guide one of the handsomest women in Europe, Inez de Soriano de la Gandara, only daughter of Italia Blair of Chicago.

Mme. de la Gandara is now a widow and living with her father, Marques de Soriano d'Ivanrey, in Madrid. Many of us knew that little dapper blond Spaniard—fiercely proud and like a character out of grand opera—when he passed our way some years ago. His wife, Marchesa Italia de Soriano, lives in New York. Their daughter is a glorious creature, full of glamorous sparkle, even dressed with ravishing style in these times, and carrying herself with all the splendor and pride of an empress. The two women went often to the movies and nipped about in the beautiful tree shaded streets of Madrid.

• • •

An odd adventure befell the American when traveling to Lisbon in a wagon-lit. The compartment got afire, and in the middle of the night with a Spanish lady she was shifted into a third class carriage. Slumped in a corner seat was a truculent Spaniard. The Spanish lady wrapped a handsome fleecy traveling rug about her knees and covered her American companion as well, and they were sitting peacefully when the man got up and grabbed the rug away from them. Then he folded himself luxuriously in the woolen robe and settled down for a nap. The American woman came of fighting ancestry and, as the Spanish lady had nothing to say, she dragged the rug from the snoozing bully, and the next thing she knew he had flown at her with glaring eyes and a half drawn stiletto. She faced him with cold fury and the brute fell back into his corner as the guard came up to move the two women into another car.

My friend saw the same Spain as always, terrific poverty, hunger, and destitution, and

Beecham Will Give Lecture at Arts Club

Now and again the Arts club rings the bell with a top attraction and this happens next week when Sir Thomas Beecham dines there and lectures Sunday night. After dinner the great English conductor will take for his theme his favorite Mozart and illustrate at the piano. Sir Thomas is staying with the Giovanni Cardellis during his short Chicago visit and Countess Cardelli is turning over her chic apartment at 1448 Lake Shore drive to the renowned artist. Giovanni Cardelli, who is up to date on musical lore in many countries, is enthusiastic about Sir Thomas, his wit, genius and fascinating bonhomie. The great Beecham fortune, and most of Sir Thomas' life, has been devoted to music in general and to Mozart in particular, and they say as a speaker he has no rival.

Sir Thomas Beecham has been director of the Covent Garden opera in London, and is a great figure in music circles the world over. The European war conditions are bringing us these opportunities as never before. The outstanding musical figure of last week was the Hungarian, Bela Bartok, a modern of moderns, who played at two concerts with the Chicago symphony at Orchestra hall.

• • •

Mr. and Mrs. Zoltan Baranyai, the charming Hungarian representatives, had a large dinner for the composer at the Racquet club Thanksgiving night before his concert. Being a holiday, the party had the huge golden lounge, with its blazing logs, all to itself, as well as the handsome dining room with its black and white effects and vivid grass green panels. I kept thinking that Bela Bartok in pale blue brocade with lace ruffles and a powdered wig would have made a courtly director at some princely court of old, so fine and delicate his profile, so large and translucent his blue eyes. He has made public appearances in concert for 50 years, since childhood in fact, and like many gifted European artists shows the hard, upward struggle in the wistfulness of his thin face, the lines of his spare figure.

The Baranyai guests filled two boxes at the Thursday night concert where an enormous, temperamental audience greeted the composer-pianist. Bartok played his No. 2 concerto and played it superbly, but whether you liked it depended upon yourself. It was an agglomeration of noises such as rarely assail one's ears in any walk of life outside a munitions factory. Yet it had form and substance and was evocative. Its very strangeness awoke old memories and was at the same time highly entertaining. At the end there were shouts and yells of pleasure, hand clappers who stood to express their wild approval, waves of joy over the house.

• • •

Afterward Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Stock had a gay supper in their Astor street abode in honor of Bela Bartok, who doesn't eat until the performance is over. Then the matter in hand was to say the right thing to Dr. Bartok, who speaks good English. There was a sardonic gleam in his eye when he was asked if his music meant anything. "Not a thing," he said, "It's merely music." Yet I had seen during his recital an old, prerevolutionary house near the Susquehanna river where I had stayed often in childhood. It was a haunted house in charming gardens on a lonely road, and the vision just wouldn't fade. It was as if some one pressed a button and kept me thinking of that old, aristocratic stone house.

Mrs. Stock's guests sat at small tables and foraged for themselves at the buffet, and Vera Wolfe, daughter of the house, helped her mother to entertain the disinguished Hungarians. It was the sort of cozy evening get together that one reads about in memoirs and recollections of great musicians, and we didn't break up until the wee hours.

Among the interesting visitors of the week was a French one for a change, Count Serge Fleury, former attaché of the foreign office, or Quai d'Orsay, at Paris. Count Fleury has been winging about the country on a lecture tour in behalf of the starving populations in the "pas occupé" districts of France, and was much encouraged by the warm hearted open mindedness of the west. Count Fleury's grandfather was French foreign minister under Napoleon III., and he comes of a family met often in great periods of French history.

He has just finished the final pages of a book on Talleyrand which is being published in French in Canada. His last brochure was on Guatemala, where he spent six months of 1941, en poste, six of the most delightful months of his life, he says, full of color and charming Latins, living in sunshine among flowers, in elegant leisure and no war talk.

Fleury looked very much the diplomat en disponibilité, very smart indeed, and one wasn't surprised to hear that he is preparing to return to France shortly to serve his country in some practical way. Probably in his own district, le Limousin.

I asked what he knew of Arthur Moulton, jailed by the Germans long months ago, and he had no news. Arthur Moulton is an American of vast wealth and great good looks, who owns a château a half mile from Herman Gade's old manoir, Mesnil-St. Denis. He has lived so long in France with an occasional winter in a houseboat near Palm Beach, that one forgets he is an American. Arthur is in solitary confinement, wherever he is, and doubtless a little bored by now.

Several of my friends have contributed little realistic, innermost peeps on life in Paris as it is being lived at the moment. And one can't help being vastly entertained at the swing and dash of it, the cleanliness of Paris, the utter sobriety, and every one working, even father. Idlers are sent off somewhere in the hinterland to work, Poland, maybe, and social events are many. One side of the Champs Elysées is lined with chic cafés and patisseries, and the other, not so good. The indescribable, unspeakable style of the French woman has never stood forth so perfect as at the present moment. In the social set of the young Duchesse de Montebello, the Dampierres, Rochefoucaulds, Rohans, etc., the young women have almost a uniform, at the daily cocktail teas. They wear long, beautifully cut and tailored coats of black cloth over a short skirt. Their shoes are exquisite but not of leather. Their hats are divine. They are soignées, appealing, lovely, and rather thin on the whole.

If not en tailleur, these girls wear the simplest little black crêpe dresses in the world, no gewgaws and never looked better. There is an American resident who has raised a great excitement about herself in Paris; she dines about and goes everywhere with the handsomest among the officers and officials of the invading forces.

And another nine day wonder is the upkeep and maintenance of Dean Beekman's American cathedral church. During his absence in America it has been kept open, with Sunday services read by the organist and janitor. Dean Beekman was one of the first residents to escape from Paris owing to the warmth of his utterances against the third reich. There is still quite a congregation of Americans left to worship with the organist and his helper in the American church.

Here at home the English Speaking union took time off from its war efforts and foregathered at the Arts club Tuesday afternoon to meet the Hon. Mrs. Christopher Fremantle, in quite large numbers.

The meeting took place in the upstairs dining room, and guests sat expectantly at the round tables, where tea was served after a discourse entitled "Building a Better Britain." Presiding over the party was Mrs. Corson Ellis, the brilliant Roberta, Bob Thorne's eldest of five charming daughters. As to her simple but effective introduction, Roberta Ellis confessed later on that she forgot every word of the neat speech her husband wrote out for her at the breakfast table in Lake Forest and went forward in her own language which was certainly good. Mrs. Fremantle has been shuttling back and forth from England in rather queer boats, last spring in a whaler, this autumn in a banana boat. She told us that in the last two air raids of April, London had 38,000 houses destroyed, and yet so good was the organization that it took only two weeks to resettle this army of Londoners in other quarters.

You have to hand it to the British. They are already working on demobilization, according to Mrs. Fremantle, and the problems that go along with that disruptive process. That would look as if the end of the war might even be visible with a spy glass in some quarters, and was certainly encouraging to her American listeners.

Lewis Bernays was present at this tea, as were Mrs. George Thorne, Mr. and Mrs. George Mason, Mrs. C. B. Goodspeed, Mrs. W. H. Bush, Miss Frances Whedon, Mrs. James S. Kemper, Mrs. Robert Ross, Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. John Crerar, and Mrs. John Alden Carpenter.

The venerable and always distinguished Arthur Woolley-Hart of England died at Hamilton, Bermuda, on Wednesday, leaving a young and beautiful widow, blonde and exquisite Vivienne. Mrs. Woolley-Hart was born an American and years ago married the eldest son and heir of Count von Bernstorff, once German ambassador at Washington. He now lives at Rio de Janeiro and cuts quite a figure in the local whirl, while his former wife had become one of the great hostesses of Greater London as Mrs. Arthur Woolley-Hart. She had a lovely house in Prince's Gate and a collection of jewels that stood up well with those of the ducal families. Indeed, one of her rings, a sort of scalloped solitaire of emerald cut, was evaluated at more than half a million dollars. And when Vivienne left England she had jewels that would keep her comfortably for many a long year. Not to mention Tucker's Island, Bermuda, purchased from Cornelius Crane of Chicago, with its house and gardens, now bought by the United States as an air base.

I lunched with the Woolley-Harts in London one day in July, 1939, at Prince's Gate and it was not only an amusing party, large and heterogeneous, but very elaborate. On the terrace after luncheon a whole basketful of baby Pekes were scattered by footmen, the loveliest little Chinese pets imaginable, some white, some black, and one felt like pocketing a few. Indeed, the enterprising Mme. Wellington Koo, wife of the Chinese ambassador, felt they rightfully belonged to her, being Chinese dogs, and was all set to carry them off in her limousine.

Vivienne, however, opposed her firmly and still has them.

Tomorrow night, another novelty at the Chicago opera when Miss Grace Moore makes her first Chicago appearance as Tosca. It will be interesting to see and hear; one has seen and heard so many Toscas, some wonderful and setting up a standard. There was Mary Garden, for instance, making her supreme entrée in the second act in a chinchilla cape borrowed from the wardrobe of Mrs. Chalmers, and doing a wonderful job that one can't forget. There was the magnificent Jeritza who sang Vissi d'Arte prone on her tummy and seemed to be gnawing the carpet in Rome's ancient Castle St. Angelo, where the scene of the after opera supper is laid.

We have heard wicked Baron Scarpias who have forgotten their lines and even tumbled down in the excitement. But after Scotti, the very best of all, was Vanni Marcoux, who had practically lost his voice in the great war, yet he gave the feel of a superb singer, the authority of a great artist. John Charles Thomas will be Scarpia and Frederick Jagel of the "Met" the poor, double-crossed Cavaradossi.

Miss Charlotte Nass Is Engaged to G. Rehfield

The engagement of Miss Charlotte Nass to George Rehfield is announced by her mother, Mrs. Craft Nass of Lake Shore drive. The wedding is planned for Jan. 24. Mr. Rehfield is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson A. Rehfield of Lake Shore drive.

When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Chicago, Nov. 30, 1893.

Dear Julia: As an Episcopalian I know you'll be interested in the new rector of Grace church, our most fashionable Episcopal church, on Wabash avenue, attended by all the Prairie avenue people. Dr. Clinton Locke, who has led it for many years, has resigned and gone abroad for his health. Succeeding him is the Rev. Ernest M. Stires, whose last parish was in Augusta, Ga., and every one is wild over the new rector.

The Rev. Ernest M. Stires.

Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Lay entertained for him last evening, and I heard that he had received no less than 60 dinner invitations within a week. Don't you feel sorry for him? He can't accept all of these, and those whose bids must be declined will feel hurt, of course.

He is a delightful young man, only 27 years of age, handsome and full of the enthusiasm of youth. A Virginian by birth, he was graduated from the University of Virginia in 1888 and from the Virginia Episcopal Theological Seminary in 1891. He has great gifts and will be a success in his chosen work, I am sure. His friends have caused it to be known, in order to forestall disappointment for the fair sex, that he will go south after the holidays and bring back as his bride one of Georgia's loveliest daughters, to preside over Grace church rectory.

Last evening Will and I looked in on a charity ball held at Bournique's for the benefit of the charities carried on by the Catholic women of Chicago. They are doing a great deal in supporting day nurseries, a splendid work. In this group is Mrs. David F. Bremner, a friend of mine, whose husband was one of Will's army comrades. We are very fond of them and were glad to take tickets and look on at the gayety. Our dancing days are long past, but we enjoyed sitting with our contemporaries in a box, watching the more sprightly on the floor. Mrs. P. J. O'Keefe and Mrs. J. E. Eagle have been working with Mrs. Bremner in the management of the ball and we were glad to learn from them that the receipts are about $5,000. Much can be done for working mothers and their children with that amount.

Bournique's ballroom looked lovely, hung with Christmas greens, anticipating the holiday season. Among the people I chatted with were Mrs. Michael Cudahy, Mrs. L. P. Brosseau, Mrs. Thomas A. Moran, Mrs. William A. Amberg, Mrs. W. P. Henneberry, Mrs. Thomas Lonergan, and Mrs. P. J. Healy. This Healy family is not that of the painter, whom you've met, I think, but are of the firm of Lyon and Healy, dealers in musical instruments. The Lyon and Healy harp is the one used by our Thomas orchestra and is considered very fine. I used to play on the harp before I was married, so I always listen for that instrument at the Friday concerts.

We have had a tempest in a teapot here for the past week when the Lincoln Park board changed the name of the Lake Shore drive to Palmer boulevard and then restored the old name in double quick time when protests came in from property holders. Residents of that street feel most warmly toward Potter Palmer, appreciating his efforts to promote the near north side, but they think the name Lake Shore drive indicates proximity to the inland sea of which we are proud, and that it would be a shame to change the name of a handsome boulevard known 'round the world as a fashionable residence street.

Will says street nomenclature should not be meddled with, save when absolutely necessary. We have taken in some suburbs which have names that duplicate those in downtown Chicago, as, for instance, Washington, Jefferson, and Madison avenues, in Hyde Park. These will probably have to be changed, to avoid confusion. But people do dislike to have street names changed, and it should not often be done. Now I must close, with love.

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

The Morris Chair.

We had always thought the Morris chair, popular in the Nineties, was designed by William Morris, English poet and artist. In an interesting letter from John H. Quadland, 117 West Harrison street, we are set right about this. He says: "The original Morris chair was designed and made by D. Quadland and Gustave Johnson, in Morris, Ill., between the years 1875-1879. One of the first chairs made is now in the home of Gustave Johnson's daughter, Mrs. Fred Michaelis, 540 Fullerton parkway. The name "Morris" was given it from the city in which it was made."

Photograph on a Dresser.

When the first rays that tell of morning's bloom
Steal thru the shutters of a quiet room,
She who awakens early sees it trace
The features of her lover's pictured face.
She needs no light to read the tender line
Beneath the picture: "To my Valentine."
But he has gone into that silence deep,
So like—and yet unlike—night's gift of sleep,
While she, bereft, her gallant head held high,
Lives on, to serve her world. No tear, no sigh,
Betrays a wounded heart to careless gaze—
She lives with memory thruout her days.
She wears a look at times, as if she hears
His voice—still calling her, across the years.

Banner Week of Benefits for the Clubs

By Betty Browning.

"The story of the millions of dollars that women raise for charity has never been told," a veteran publicity woman once commented. The next few paragraphs are at least an indication of what such a story might be, for they report in brief some of the events that will make this a banner week of the year for benefits.

The House of the Good Shepherd, where for 82 years wayward girls have been helped to lead normal lives, will receive the proceeds of its auxiliary's annual card party, Saturday afternoon at the Stevens hotel. A number of the women who founded the auxiliary in 1907 still actively support or participate in its work. Mrs. George J. Aste is chairman of the party for the seventh year, with Mrs. Joseph J. Cavanaugh as co-chairman and Mrs. Edward J. Fitzgerald, junior co-chairman. Mrs. Leo P. Cummings, Mrs. Fitzgerald's mother, is heading the auxiliary for the fourth year.

• • •

Next Saturday night the 20th annual party for the benefit of the Misericordia maternity hospital and infants' home will be given by the woman's board at the Stevens hotel. Arrangements for this supper dance are under Mrs. Charles J. Holland's direction with Mrs. William E. Davis as co-chairman. The institution cares for poor and unmarried mothers and places infants for adoption.

Handicraft, foods of all nations, and entertainment will be offered by the woman's auxiliary of Wesley Memorial hospital at a fiesta Tuesday and Wednesday in the new hospital unit opening this week on East Superior street. There will be a luncheon and book review Tuesday and a turkey dinner Wednesday night. Mrs. Ernest Lynn Waldorf is general chairman. Proceeds will be used to equip a ward.

• • •

Mrs. Eric Oldberg.

Philanthropic activities of the women's auxiliary of the Chicago Colleges of the University of Illinois will be furthered thru a card party Wednesday afternoon at the new Chicago Illini Union building, 715 South Wood street. The auxiliary provides medicine and special bandages for indigent patients at the University hospital, as well as toys and parties for children's wards. Mrs. Eric Oldberg is general chairman.

Teas will be given Tuesday, Wednesday, and Saturday at the Christmas craftmart, 522 North Michigan avenue, by groups interested in this project of the Illinois Association for the Crippled to provide a market for articles made by the handicapped. Teachers at crippled children's schools will be hostesses Tuesday and Wednesday, and the Junior Business and Professional Women's club on Saturday. The sale will continue at the mart until Christmas.

• • •

Four dances for as many philanthropic causes will be given this evening. The Freda Komaiko Stone Heart club will hold its dinner-dance at Harry's New Yorker, with Miss Estelle Snyder as general chairman. The organization helps sufferers from heart ailments.

Another dinner-dance this evening will be that of the Dorothy Kahn Club for Crippled Children at the Stevens hotel. The Emma S. Haskell club, which helps to support the crippled children's camp at Brown's lake in Wisconsin, will have its annual card party and dance at the Midland hotel. The United Sisters of Charity will hold their 33d annual dance at the Skyline Athletic club, with Mrs. Ida Poncher and Mrs. Anna Bloom as general chairmen.

Summer camps for underprivileged children, sponsored by Alpha Gamma Delta sorority at Jackson, Mich., and Welland, Ont., will be aided thru the proceeds of a bridge party to be given by the Chicago Alumnae club and Lambda chapter alumnae Saturday afternoon at the La Salle hotel. A fashion show will be presented with members as models. Miss Florence South is general chairman.

• • •

A skit on army life will be presented by boys of the Chicago Parental school at the Parent-Teacher association's ninth annual winter party, Friday evening at the school, 3600 Foster avenue. Tours of the school, dancing, and games also are scheduled. Members of the association are not parents of the underprivileged children at the school, but men and women interested in them. Mrs. W. D. Nappe is general chairman of the benefit party.

The annual Christmas sale and turkey dinner of the Women's Trade Union League of Chicago will be held all day Saturday at headquarters, 630 South Ashland boulevard. The public is invited.

Thursday from 11 a. m. until 9 p. m. the Chicago YWCA League of Industrial Girls will hold its annual sale of baked goods, made by members, at the loop center, 59 East Monroe street. Refreshments will be served in the afternoon and evening. Miss Florence Chesser is chairman.

• • •

Mrs. J. C. Bolter.

The Daughters of the British Empire in Illinois will hold their annual bazar Thursday, Friday, and Saturday at the Congress hotel for the benefit of the British Old People's home at Hollywood, Ill. Lewis Bernays, British consul general, formally will open the bazar Thursday noon. Friday will be Chapters' day and Saturday, Children's day. Other British-American societies are cooperating. Mrs. J. C. Bolter is general chairman.

A card party Friday afternoon at the Hotel Sherman will help the Southern Woman's club of Chicago to provide funds for a Kentucky mountain school and other philanthropies. Mrs. George S. Mandeville is in charge.

Supplies of various sorts for Palestine will be assembled Tuesday by Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, at district meetings thruout the city.

• • •

At an open house tomorrow at headquarters of the National Council of Jewish Women, Chicago section, 185 North Wabash avenue, members will bring donations for the annual earning fund drive. A luncheon and musical Dec. 10 at the Stevens hotel will close the drive.

Other events of the week will include the annual bridge party of Alpha Chi Omega Mothers' club, tomorrow at the Northwestern university sorority house in Evanston; the fur style show and card party of Alpha Xi chapter, Sigma Alpha Iota national music fraternity, Tuesday evening at 37 South Wabash avenue; the Independent German-American Woman's club luncheon, fashion show, and card party Wednesday at the Better Homemaking institute; a brunch and keno party of the Jewish Consumptives' Relief society Wednesday, at the Congress hotel; and the tea and book review by Florence Bourke Ellis, Friday at 640 Emerson street, Evanston, under the auspices of the Mothers' club of Gamma Phi Beta sorority.

Art Exhibits Are in Keeping with Holidays

By Eleanor Jewett.

Gay and attractive exhibits are being put into most of the galleries about town in keeping with the holiday spirit which the month of December evokes. One of the particularly pleasant shows that November saw open is closing next Friday evening with an auction. This is the Small Picture exhibit held every fall at the Palette and Chisel club, 1012 North Dearborn street. The artists give their paintings and the proceeds of the sales go to the upkeep of the club.

Leo Marzola, James Topping, J. Jeffery Grant, Holger Jensen, Othmar Hoffler, Maurice Greenberg, and Oskar Gross are among the painters who make this show a recurrent success.

A number of the artists are members, too, of the Chicago Galleries association and their work will be found [but in larger pictures] at the exhibition by the organization which will open Saturday at the Chicago Galleries, 215 North Michigan avenue.

This annual exhibit is always one of the highlights of the art year.

Two exhibitions by Chicago artists, which is an awkward way of putting the news that two one-man shows are on the tapis, Kenneth Shopen and Julia Thecla, opened last Friday at the Roullier Galleries, Fine Arts building, to continue to Dec. 13. Kenneth Shopen is on the faculty of the Art institute art school. His painting is informal, unstudied, rather on the modern side, but attractive and full of color.

Julia Thecla has a vivid imagination and her little pictures possess a great deal of charm. Her exhibit will include drawings. The combination of these two talents in a joint show was a happy thought on the part of Miss Roullier. The exhibit is well worth seeing.

Opening next Wednesday at the Katharine Kuh gallery, 540 North Michigan avenue, is a representative exhibition of the water colors and drawings of Picasso. Many of them will be new to Chicago tho Picasso in his various moods and periods is by no means an unfamiliar story to most of us. It was not long ago that a comprehensive exhibit of his painting hung at the Art institute. This December showing of his smaller pieces will no doubt bring that earlier exhibit more clearly to mind.

The new Findlay Galleries, 338 South Michigan avenue, plan to be ready for visitors next Saturday. The first exhibit will be that of paintings by members of the art faculty of the University of Illinois. In January Mr. Findlay hopes to bring to Chicago a stunning group of French pictures.

Portraits in wax by Ethel Frances Mundy and water colors of "Dumbo," Walt Disney's latest creation, may be found at the Ackermann galleries, 408 South Michigan avenue. The work of Miss Mundy is delightful. She has developed her own colored wax, and the portraits she models are incredibly lovely. Some are in the round; more in bas-relief. They are among the choice things of our time.

One of the interesting facts about Miss Mundy's portraits in wax is that they go back in many instances three generations. She tells the story about a little boy who sat for her in Cleveland. She had in previous years made portraits of his grandmother and his mother, and the little boy thought hard about them for a while and then interrupted his sitting to say cheerfully: "Miss Mundy, when I grow up I shall have seven children, and I want you to do them all!"

Richard Richard, Chicago painter, has a fascinating exhibit of landscape pictures grouped under the title "The Countryside" on view at the Palmer House, Room 859. They may be seen from 9 to 5 o'clock during the day and from 7 to 9 o'clock each evening. The exhibit will run thru Dec. 6 and should be a "must" on every one's art calendar this week.

The pictures are little gems. They make one think of nothing so much as lines of poetry. The suggestion of Chinese art which is found in several of them makes one almost see such Chinese verse as:

The spring blossoms
Hang against the sky;
The trees rest
In the earth.
Where is the nest from which
Last year's bird has flown?

The oriental poets had a way of putting the essence of their thought into a few words, and in the same way Mr. Richard puts the entire context of a landscape into a picture that measures only a few inches actually, but suggests an endless chain of fields and pastures dotted with farm buildings and trees. Mr. Richard paints for the most part in tender colors, melting browns and pinks and blues that have a haunting beauty. And yet the painting is firm, masculine, and realistic. One might put his technique as the poet's hand in the draftsman's glove. Among the pictures, note "Lone Traveller," definitely a man's picture, but delicate, fine, and exquisite.

It may be of interest to know that Mr. Richard does these landscapes out-of-doors where he finds them. He works in his car, which has a plate glass windshield, and rain or snow holds no terror for him. He works in any kind of weather and at any time of day. The majority of these landscapes were done in Indiana and Michigan, within a radius of a hundred miles or so of Chicago. One might almost prove by them that the man in search of paintable material can find a great deal close to his hand if he turns his mind to it. Mr. Richard has vision and sentiment as well as ability. His exhibit is well worth seeing.

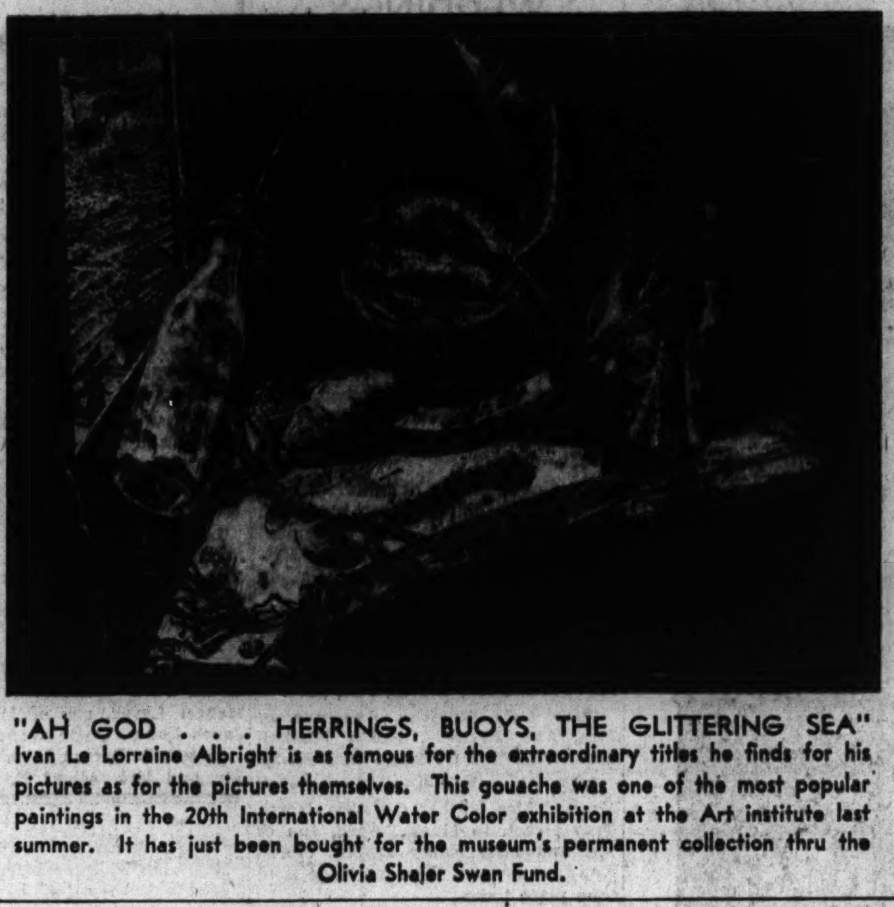
The Swedish Artists of Chicago open their annual exhibit of works by members this afternoon at the Fairfax hotel, 1369 East Hyde Park boulevard. The exhibit will run to Dec. 13.

The 16th annual exhibition by members of the All Illinois Society of the Fine Arts is current at the Stevens hotel. Several awards were made. The president's award went to "Peonies," by Amelia D. Reece; the Chicago and vicinity award to "Autumn, University Hall, University of Illinois," by Percy H. Sloan, loaned by the university; the water color award went to Walter Parke for "A House I Remember," and the downstate medal was given to Olive Holbert Chaffee for "Sittons Gulf."



"AH GOD . . . HERRINGS, BUOYS, THE GLITTERING SEA"
Ivan Le Lorraine Albright is as famous for the extraordinary titles he finds for his pictures as for the pictures themselves. This gouache was one of the most popular paintings in the 20th International Water Color exhibition at the Art institute last summer. It has just been bought for the museum's permanent collection thru the Olivia Shaler Swan Fund.

ENGAGED

Miss Dorothy Shless, whose engagement to Sanford P. Mandell has been announced by her father, Dr. Abraham L. Shless of North Oakley avenue. Mr. Mandell is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Felix Mandell of Amarillo, Tex. The wedding is planned for January. Miss Shless attended Northwestern university. Mr. Mandell was graduated from the School of Engineering of Texas A. and M. college.

Handmade Gift Carries Real Holiday Cheer

By Claire Winslow.

It's fun to make a few Christmas gifts with your own hands. You'll enjoy it, yourself, and the recipient of the present will feel much more honored than if you simply walked out to a shop and bought something.

If you have a sewing machine there are number of items you can create that will delight the heart of your young daughter or niece, your mother or your sister. There is the good looking new bedspread, for example, that you can give a professional air by trimming it with woolly, cut yarn fringe. This is stitched on in a single strand, but because of the attachment on the machine, made for the purpose, it comes out thick and fringed. We saw it being demonstrated the other day, and thought it one of the neatest tricks we'd come across in a long time.

• • •

Then, there are feminine looking, frilly skirts for dressing tables of the unpainted wood variety. You can get such a dressing table in the unfinished furniture section of the stores, equip it with a gay flounce of flowered cretonne or chintz or sateen, or of embroidered organdy over a colored foundation, pad the top with the same and presto, you'll have a gift any one would be proud to give.

Here's another idea. Why not make some fabric frames for those inexpensive flower prints, or that pretty little mirror, or picture? All you need are a few odds and ends of colorful cottons and your sewing machine with its attachment kit.

• • •

The picture today shows you how attractive fabric frames can be. Suspend three pictures of the same size and type in a vertical row, separating them by ribbon strings. Make the frames of eyelet embroidered cotton and decorate them with ribbon-run lacings. The little slots thru which the ribbon is drawn are made quickly by marking off equal distances with pencil and stitching over the pencil marks with the hemstitcher.

Then, cut apart, thus forming the slots for the ribbon.

Appliquéd monograms for picture frames add a handsome, tailored touch. Simply cut out letters of any material you prefer and use the zigzagger attachment to apply them professionally to the fabric frame. Cartridge plaits, the jig-time job of the plaiter gadget, are a very smart finish for the frame of a dressing table mirror. [See illustration at the lower left.] The hemstitcher will turn the raw edges of the plaited strip into a fine picot finish.

"Selecting, Framing and Hanging Pictures," a booklet by Claire Winslow, gives pointers on a number of puzzlers and was written in answer to many queries from women readers. Price, 3 cents by mail, 2 cents at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 S. Dearborn street and Tribune Tower lobby.

ENGAGED

Miss Enid Roslyn Merens, whose engagement to Eugene H. Minkoff has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Merens of Lake Shore drive. Miss Merens is a senior at the University of Illinois. Her fiance, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Minkoff of Clayton, Mo., was graduated from Washington university in St. Louis.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Purely Personal

"The greatest master of ceremonies in the country," Myrtle Dean Clark has been called. As president of the Conference of Club Presidents and Program Chairmen, founded by her 25 years ago, she has presented hundreds of the illustrious to midwestern audiences. Her keenest interest, however, is in the talented young people whom the Conference helps toward recognition. . . . The Salvation Army and the Good Will Industries are favorite charities because they also help people to help themselves. . . . "Gold digging for quality in people" is her hobby. . . . She "loves jokes," deftly combines them with the philosophic and poetic in her speeches. Her voice is musical and expressive. She writes poetry, used to paint. . . . Brought up in Chicago and Park Ridge, she was graduated from the Chicago Normal college and taught a year at the Boys' Latin school before her marriage to Charles S. Clark, grain authority and magazine publisher. . . . The Clarks have lived for 35 years in a large house on the south side. Each room contains things of symbolic significance. . . . She keeps half a dozen books at her bedside, reads rapidly and widely. She loves games. . . . Silver-haired, tall, and slender, she wears tailored clothes, often in rich colors. At home she "goes feminine" in hostess gowns and bright colors, preferably turquoise or Persian blue-green. . . . Never worrying and keeping her civic problems away from her home are guiding principles. . . . The Clarks' family includes a son, a daughter, four grandchildren, and a son-in-law who has lived with them since the death of their other daughter.

An Arrival in Brazil by Way of Back Door

[This is the twenty-seventh story of a series on South America. The next will appear in an early issue.]

By Mason Warner.

GUAJARA MIRIM, BRAZIL

The Beni river cannot be navigated farther than Cachuela Esperanza because of the turbulent rapids on its way to join the Mamore river. So we had to go across country in a southeastern direction to Guajara Marim, on the Brazilian frontier. Available transportation was an auto truck which made one trip a week, "state of the road permitting."

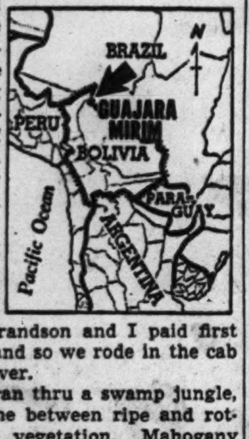
While at breakfast in Cachuela Esperanza we were advised to hurry thru Guajara Mirim. "Don't stop there unless you want to get the fever. It is so bad that travelers just passing thru go down with it."

Upon inquiry we learned that the road was in passable condition and that the truck would start for Guajara Mirim at 8 o'clock. The distance to be traveled was 60 miles. So we would arrive, with good luck, in early afternoon.

• • •

"This is Tuesday," the hotel manager reminded us, "and the weekly train will not run until Thursday. If you go today you will have to stay in Guajara Mirim two nights and you will get the fever." Our choice lay between the truck and one day's ride, or two days by mule, with primitive accommodations on the slower journey. We chose the truck.

The small truck carried freight, but was provided with two short, hard board seats in the rear for passengers. The operating crew consisted of three men—the driver and a man standing on each running board. There were six passengers. My grandson and I paid first class fares, and so we rode in the cab with the driver.



The road ran thru a swamp jungle, a narrow lane between ripe and rotten tropical vegetation. Mahogany and Brazil nut trees towered above trees of lesser height. The latter were being smothered by the lush shrubbery and the tangled, creeping vines that wound about them.

Ditches and pools alongside the trail harbored lazy fish 6 to 10 inches long. In some places the roadbed was only a few inches above the muck.

• • •

Half an hour out from Cachuela Esperanza we learned why the men were carried on the running board. We came to the edge of a small river, about 100 yards wide. A wire cable was stretched from a tree on our side to one on the opposite bank. A scow was moored at the far side. Our riders, without comment, took off their trousers, rolled up their shirts, waded across, boarded the scow, and, by pulling on the cable, hauled it over to the waiting truck. The truck climbed up planks laid from river's edge to the flat deck, and scow, truck, and passengers were ferried across by all hands pulling on the cable. The operation was repeated at two other rivers.

Swinging gates barred our way at half a dozen points. We were told these gates were placed across the highway to keep cattle on the estates where they belonged. There were no attendants; so our runners had to swing open the gates and close them when we had passed. We saw no cattle, and the incongruous barriers to the unfenced jungle lands certainly would not deter an intelligent cow from wandering where fancy led her.

• • •

The air was hot and heavy—so humid that moisture dripped from the branches of the trees overhanging the road. Few birds were to be seen, but there were thousands of magnificent butterflies fluttering about. One blue species had a wingspread of 10 inches. Here and there a patch of wild flowers added color, but not gayety, to the scene. The flowers appeared tired and drooping, bored with life in the tropics.

We lunched at midday on bananas and an unusually sweet jungle pineapple. We resumed our journey and were going along at good speed for the rough and winding road, when the driver began cautiously to slow down. Before he came to a full stop he had taken the rifle carried at his side and sighted it out of the cab window. He fired before we could see what he was aiming at, but pleased ejaculations came from his helpers, and we knew he had scored a hit.

Then we learned the crew had duties in addition to being gatemen and ferrymen. They were also retrievers. Back into swampy jungle they sped, and after a two-minute search returned with broad smiles, one of them holding aloft a plump bird that weighed three or four pounds. It had been perched at the top of a tall tree when the driver sighted it. He tried to tell us what it was, but we could not understand. Evidently it was rare and delicious. This was indicated by his pantomime of smacking lips, patting stomach, and rolling eyes.

• • •

We made good time on the truck, and at 3 o'clock arrived at Guajara Mirim, on the west bank of the Mamore river, in Bolivia. Across the river in Brazil was the other part of Guajara Mirim, in the state of Matto Grosso, terminus of the only railroad in western Brazil.

The truck took our baggage down to the river bank. We hailed a ferryman, who took it on his small rowboat, and we were soon across the river and waiting to have our passports approved and our baggage examined for entry into Brazil.

The custom house was a 10 by 14 foot frame structure. The official was polite, but firm. He returned our passports and visas and told us we would have to go back across the river and have them stamped by the Brazilian consul before we would be permitted farther.

So back we went and finally found the consul. He said it was all a mistake—that our visas were in proper order — and gave us a letter to the customs officer on the Brazilian side. We crossed the river for the third time. When we appeared the second time, the customs officer read the letter and was apologetic. He regretted his error so sincerely that he did not open our handbags to examine our baggage.

And so, at last, we entered Brazil—thru the back door.

Fall Fishing Starts on Michigan Lakes

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich.—Blustery days bring a lot of fun to the Michigan fishermen that can take it. It is then that the big steelhead start their fall run, and the dull days, with a spit of snow in the air, see hardy souls trolling the waters of Pentwater lake at Pentwater, or Betsie bay, between Frankfort and Elberta, or on Lake Charlevoix from Charlevoix, Boyne City, or East Jordan.

Perch fishing from a score of Lake Michigan ports comes into its own and "yella bellies," running right around a pound, are going after the bait.

My friend and I are planning a South American tour for this winter. We have been told that among the finest attractions around Montevideo, Uruguay, are the beaches and seaside resorts. Please tell us something about them. —S. P.

Montevideo has four splendid beaches—Pocitos, Ramirez, Malvin, and Buceo. Of these, Pocitos is considered the most beautiful. Near by is Carrasco, reached over a modern highway. Beyond the city the resorts stretch along the ocean for about a hundred miles. The most fashionable of these, Punta del Este, is the farthest up the coast. It has a casino, a good golf course, and a port for yachts and cruisers. Much closer to Montevideo is Piriapolis, which boasts of 40 hotels, a casino, and medicinal springs. Other well patronized resorts are Solis, Atlantida, and La Floresta. All of these places reach the height of their activity in Uruguay's summertime, which comes when North America is having its winter.

Higher Than Niagara.

Snoqualmie Falls, 40 miles east of Seattle, Wash., is 100 feet higher than Niagara Falls.

CHICAGO GIRL

Miss Joan Dunham was a recent visitor to the Monterey peninsula in California with her father, Robert J. Dunham of Chicago. She is an ardent horsewoman.

Music and Sports Events in California

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—Feature events in almost every field are headlined this winter in central and northern California.

For the traveler who prefers music, the program includes Lily Pons, Paul Robeson, and Alexander Brailowsky, who are scheduled to appear with the San Francisco Symphony orchestra.

Deep sea fishing from Monterey and Pebble beach, and seasonal hunting in various districts provide the sportsman his outlets. One of the foothill highlights of the year will be the East-West game at San Francisco on New Year's day. On Jan. 15 to 18 the $5,000 midwinter golf tournament will be played at Oakland. On Dec. 19 the official opening of Yosemite National park ice skating rink and Badger Pass ski house will take place.

The Voice of the Traveler

Letters regarding travel conditions and experience are welcomed. Address: Travel Editor, Chicago Tribune.

AMBASSADOR OF GOOD WILL.

Oak Park, Ill., Nov. 23.—To the Travel Editor: The season of Thanksgiving is certainly a fitting time to express my gratitude for a series of articles that have made South America live for more than 200 young people in the Oak Park and River Forest High school. In my Spanish classes we look forward eagerly to the Mason Warner articles in the Travel section of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. They furnish us fine background material for profitable discussion. Members of the history department to whom I have spoken are also making good use of these timely articles.

Such alluring titles as "112 Degrees at Noon; Freezing at Midnight," and "No Cabins or Berths on This River Steamer," not only win the interest of the reader but reward him on further perusal with fascinating and accurate details of a land he is eager to know. And where specific information is woefully meager such literature is doubly appreciated.

Mr. Warner writes in a vivid, dramatic style which makes one read all the article, wish for more, and wait impatiently for the next issue of the Travel section to appear. As a teacher concerned about truth as well as interest, I feel that his articles are as reliable as they are appealing. Surely he is an effective ambassador of good will, promoting friendly relations with our neighbors to the south!

VELMA T. BALL,
Chairman of Spanish Department,
Oak Park and River Forest
Township High School.

GULF COAST

● Charming is the word for the Gulf Coast, centering around the world famous playground of New Orleans, a city both Spanish and French in its gay, carefree attitude toward life. Wars, sieges, battles and skirmishes with pirates never diminished a whit its irrepressible merriment. And this is the spirit which pervades the Gulf Coast today with its marvelous, four-crop-a-year climate in which every outdoor sport thrives. And in the rippling emerald and dazzling sunlight of Gulf waters you can engage in the king of sports, deep-sea game fishing. This is the haunt of some of the world's greatest fish—speckled sea trout, Spanish and King mackerel, bonito, cavalla and the beautiful silver tarpon.

● Consult the advertisments in the Travelers' Guide today, or let the Chicago Tribune Travel Bureau help you plan a trip to the Gulf Coast. This department of the Tribune Public Service Office can supply you with information about steamship, railroad, bus and plane travel, cost of transportation and accommodations en route for trips and tours to anywhere you wish to go. Services are free. The Tribune Travel Bureau sells no tickets—gets no fee or commission from sale of tickets. So feel free to call in person, write or telephone.

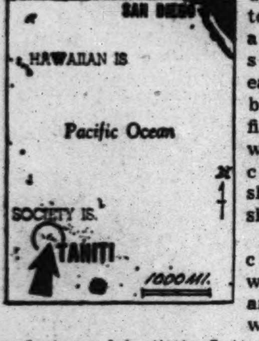
'Isle of Escape' Hasn't Escaped Scars of War

(Color Pictures in Roto Section.)

By Blair Walliser.

The ship docked at 6:30. Sharply at 6:45 a column of native Tahitian troops drew up, snapped to a stop, and then stood at ease, with bayonets fixed. They were khaki-clad in shirts and shorts.



Two official cars whipped around the warehouse and stopped in little flutters of dust. A friendly cheer burst out from about 2,000 Papeete early risers, who had come to welcome the ship. From some place a file of sailors paced forward, shining in white uniforms topped off with white tams surmounted by a red fuzz-ball.

And then the gangplank shot out, the military snapped to attention, the one antique seaplane in the harbor broke out a tricolor, the band struck up, and, with everybody in sight cheering, the new governor general from de Gaulle headquarters in London made his appearance. After a little promiscuous kissing on all sides he strode into a car and flashed away.

Two hours later 42 judges, lawyers, doctors, and other pro-Nazi Vichy men were under arrest and in protective custody. French Tahiti was safe for De Gaulle.

• • •

Thus, in a bloodless purge, an anticipated coup is thwarted and the war comes a step closer to Tahiti. The Tahitians don't worry. They have no word for worry in the Polynesian tongue. But they know their island is changing and may change more. The "Isles of Escape" haven't escaped the blackout, censorship, or inflation.

The lighthouse on Venus point is occulted for "the duration." The Society Islands, the Tuamotus, and the Marquesas are dark every night. Supply ships come rarely. When one brings gasoline, small American cars and a few French ones careen thru the streets madly for a few days. Then they sit along the roadside to wait for the next supply ship.

Flour and tobacco are scarce, and sugar not to be had. Candy and pastries are exotic luxuries, inaccessible even to the wealthy white man. The Australian champagne that once flowed bounteously at "Quinn's" and the "Yacht club" for 80 cents a quart is no more. In its place is a native beer that ages between the barrel and the table.

Americans who look to "get away from it all" will still find beauty, simplicity, and friendliness in Tahiti, but they'll also find scars of the European war.

• • •

When France capitulated two years ago Gov. de Jeret and other Tahitian officials retained their loyalty to Vichy and the Petain government—even got themselves accused of pro-Nazi sympathies. But the natives had learned their lessons of "liberte, egalite, fraternite" too well. Besides, they admired America and Americans. They liked their American movies [mostly old ones—usually cowboy pictures] and their American automobiles. American and British business men recognized that no supplies could be expected from France.

So a plebiscite was held and the "Free France" of Gen. de Gaulle came out a topheavy victor. A new governor was installed, and from the Marquesas Islands alone more than 300 of Polynesia's finest young men volunteered for service with Britain and went to Australia for training. Americans in Tahiti admired but regretted this action, since the native population of the Marquesas had at last begun to climb again in the last decade, after almost a century of steady decrease, during the infiltration of the white and yellow races.

• • •

On June 8 the steamer Monterey, coming up from Australia, brought out Richard Brunot, the new governor general from de Gaulle's London headquarters. Brunot's action was prompt and decisive. He assumed swift and firm control over all of France's oceanic possessions in the Pacific in the name of "Free France."

Yet the Pacific Polynesians found themselves unmoved by such politics. They rejoiced that a cruise ship load of Americans was ashore, and reiterated again and again their hope that the United States might sometime soon add them to its collection of "little brown brothers."

Their fears of the war may be divided into two categories: Count von Luckner and the Japanese.

• • •

When Von Luckner and the Emden coal, provisions, and fresh water, the Emden sailed away.

Now, the point of this story is that the raider sailed away. But each year thereafter the Tahitians held a celebration on that day to mark their victory over the German cruiser.

The Emden was subsequently wrecked on the treacherous coral reefs of Maripiti, and the Tahitians salvaged two of her guns. These guns were then placed in the public square, overlooking the harbor.

Some years ago Von Luckner returned for a visit and was cordially received by the islanders. In the course of a tour about the town he was proudly shown his old guns. He studied them for a few moments, and then raised his eyebrows and remarked: "I'd like to come back and get those some time." Now that rumor has Von Luckner once again in the South Seas, Tahitians recall this utterance with foreboding.

• • •

Japan has a more practical interest in French Oceania. In the Marquesas group is the Island of Matariva, fabulously rich in phosphates. For many years Japan has taken the entire phosphate output of this island. If Indo-China falls into Japanese hands from the French, there will be set a precedent that will bring shivers to the backs of all the surviving French island possessions.

Meanwhile American and French plantation owners are cheered by the rise in the price of copra, or dried coconut. Copra has been found to be one of the best—if not the best—sources of glycerin. Tho the price has been rising, the value of the product is still so slight that thousands of coconuts lie rotting on the beaches where they fall. And it is a matter of tragic irony to the Americans who came to Tahiti to find peace and escape from the old world's hatreds that their main source of income is an ingredient for munitions.

• • •

American visitors, misled perhaps by movies and sensational travel books, look for loose morals and promiscuity among the Polynesians. This is largely a myth. The brown visited Tahiti in the last war he fired three shells into Papeete. The lone and aged French gunboat in the harbor had already disappeared, and, with the first shot, the garrison fled to the hills, followed precipitously by most of the other inhabitants. After three days spent in loading man is a-moral, but not immoral. When he takes a mate and raises a family he remains faithful to his obligations. While marriage itself is incidental, monogamy is the rule.

The simplicity of the Polynesian—together with his natural sense of form and beauty—finds no better expression than in his language. The Tahitian alphabet consists of 13 consonants and 5 vowels. Many American and English words have been taken almost bodily into the language. For instance: burumu—broom, faraipani—frying pan, painapo—pineapple, and e pupu—the class [pupils.] Yet, simple as the tongue is, every tense known in English conjugations can be fully expressed in Tahitian.

• • •

Another aspect of this innate simplicity finds expression in the Polynesian attitude toward work. Labor is not regarded as a commodity to be sold for money. The Tahitian will work because he thinks you need help. The salary he regards as a gift. You may think you are hiring him by the week, but, if he decides he wants to take a day or two off to go fishing, nothing will stop him. If you scold him or remonstrate on his return, he will not argue. Rather, injured by your lack of understanding, he shakes his head and solemnly leaves you. Nothing will induce him to return. Work is a favor or an expedient—never a habit.

Familiar to all readers of escape literature is the fiction that white men go to pieces in the tropics—that only the rare and resolute soul can avoid ending up a drunken bum on the beach. As a matter of empirical fact, the genuine artist seems to paint better, the writer write better, and the student study better in a locale that offers so few distractions and where the mere exigencies of living are so few and easily supplied.

• • •

In a climate that ranges from 67 to 92 the year around, the human body wastes little energy adapting itself to sudden temperature changes. On the other hand, the idler, the inebriate, the roué, and the vagabond will find all of their vices magnified by the ease of indulging them.

Yes, in spite of the war, Tahiti is still something of a paradise. But, like most paradises these days it's remote, isolated, and pretty inaccessible.

MIAMI, Fla.—Winter visitors here learn that every one of the royal palms lining Biscayne boulevard has its individual drinking fountain. A system of underground water pipes, miles long, feeds the trees. Miami boasts 55 varieties of palm trees.

Season Rolls Around Again in Palm Beach

By Helen Van Hoy Smith.

PALM BEACH, FLA.

Palm Beach, that hardy perennial of the tropics, is blooming again. Once more the season has rolled around and this resort is greeting visitors and winter residents with a million dollars in new buildings, numerous town improvements, and an elaborate program of events lined up for the winter.

The opening event of the season will be a luncheon tomorrow which Ernest G. Howes of Boston, president of the Bath and Tennis club, and Mrs. Howes are giving at the club for all members now in the resort. It is expected about 200 will attend.

Palm Beach presents an opulent appearance—sleek, streamlined, and sophisticated. For the last several weeks the island has been undergoing extensive beauty treatments. Now every blade of grass is groomed to the nth degree. You couldn't find a weed with a magnifying glass. Coconut trees have been trimmed and surplus nuts removed. This process involves the use of a platform mounted on a truck. The platform is raised and lowered after the manner of a barber's or dentist's chair. It's truly a remarkable looking contraption.

• • •

Australian pine trees also have been shaped and scissored into symmetrical designs. Some are tall and cylindrical like huge holiday candles lining the avenues. Some are cone-shaped and others are rounded into perfect spheres. There's practically no limit to what can be done with an Australian pine and a pair of shears. Visitors never fail to go into ecstasies about the Royal Palms, and it is difficult to convince the newcomer that the trunks of these trees are not coated with concrete, so straight and smooth and hard do they appear. Even to those who come to Palm Beach year after year the miracle of their beauty seems ever new.

The other day some old-timers were standing in front of the Brazilian Court hotel gazing rapturously at a banana plant on which a bunch of fruit was growing, like the fingers of a giant hand encased in a bright green glove.

The mammoth Breakers hotel is open "family style," its formal opening to take place Christmas eve. Even before the informal opening this huge hostelry sheltered one lone guest—George Skinner of Chicago—who was monarch of all he surveyed. Last year Mr. Skinner also was the first to register at the Breakers.

• • •

Palm Beach itself isn't a large place. It would be utterly lost in Miami Beach. Extending some 10 miles north and south, it is so narrow that many of the estates have the Atlantic ocean at the front door and Lake Worth at the back. Palm Beach and West Palm Beach are separated by the lake. This lake, and Worth avenue in Palm Beach, both took their names from Gen. William J. Worth, an Indian fighter for whom Fort Worth, Tex., also was named.

West Palm Beach is a thriving year-round city of some 35,000 population. Palm Beach is practically a ghost town nearly half the year. The season starts in December, goes full blast for a month or two, and begins to diminish in March. It is noticeable, tho, in the last few years that more and more people, especially those who own homes here, are coming down earlier and remaining later.

Chicagoans were among the earliest arrivals. Among those here now are Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Davis, who plan to remain for a week or so, return to Chicago for the holiday season, and then come back to Palm Beach. The guests now are Mrs. George Carmill, Mrs. Hager Dearborn, Mrs. Ray P. Johnson, and Mr. Davis' brother, Paul H. Davis, all of Muncie, Ind.

Mrs. Elmer Rich and her two children, Josephine and Franklin, have been here for nearly a month.

Mrs. Elisha Dyer Hubbard has been in and out of Palm Beach all summer and fall supervising additions to her house. Mr. and Mrs. LeRay Berdeau are not expected until about Dec. 22.

Just what trend social events will take no one seems willing to predict. Many have declared, however, that the American Red Cross will come in for a large share in any big benevolent affairs to be given. There have been only a few parties, and those quite small and informal.
